

Spelling Champ Named

WINNER

Thirteen-year-old Sara Elizabeth DeRossett, eighth-grade pupil in the Prestonsburg elementary school, last Saturday in the Floyd county spelling bee moved up from last year's No. 2 spot to that of champion.

She won the title when the runner-up, Cora Jane Hamilton, 12-year-old sixth-grader from Stumbo elementary, made the mistake of starting "security" with a "c" and found it was too late to make a new start. Sara Elizabeth spelled that word correctly and the next, "disagreeable," to take the title. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas DeRossett.

Both girls will represent the county in the Tri-State Spelling Bee at Huntington, W. Va., May 11, when a regional champion will be named for the coveted trip to the national finals in Washington, D. C.

Twenty school and sectional spelling lists competed for the county title here. Names of other spellers in the order in which they were eliminated and the word on which each stumbled follow:

Sharon Isaacs, 11, Betsy Layne, "weep;" Glenda Layne, 13, Martin, "pleasant;" Bobby D. Watkins, 14, Wayland, "eighteen;" Rita Jo Wallace, 13, Lackey, "refuse;" Ardenia Rogers, 13, Forks of Toler, "hesitate;" Rhonda Pack, 10, Drift, "powder;" Sally Johnson, 13, McDowell, "invent;" Elmer Lafferty, 13, Dwale, "exhibit;" Eric Evans, 13, Weeksbury, "relieve;" Jackie Ousley, 13, Clark, "asso-"

HERE'S HOW TO GET 'EM

Commercial Fisherman Makes 3,500-lb. Haul In 3 Days at Lake

Has Dewey Lake any fish? Commercial fishermen, working under contract with the state, in three days last week netted an estimated 3,500 pounds of rough fish from the impoundment.

James Aden, a veteran at the business, and his assistants placed 41 gill and trammel nets, all the way from Dewey dam to Copperas Creek. Three days later, the nets were lifted.

The haul was an estimated 1,500 pounds of catfish, mostly of the mudcat variety, and 2,000 pounds of carp. The biggest carp weighed about 25 pounds. Four of the largest cats hefted around 50 pounds each.

Conservation Officer Dalton Ray Conley, who watched the netting work, said not a bass or crappie was in the nets. Nets placed in the area of the dam caught nothing. A few fish were netted in the Arrowhead Point area, but the heaviest haul was made from the May Lodge vicinity on upstream.

The netting will be resumed in October, it was said.

Ceremony To Open Shoe Plant May 14

The tape-cutting ceremony symbolizing official opening of the doors of the new US Shoe Company plant, near Lancer, will be held at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 14—and all Floyd county is invited.

Howard Kerstine, director of manufacturing personnel, said a large number of public officials and business leaders are being invited to attend and take part in the ceremony. "But," he emphasized, "we want the public in general to be our guests on this occasion."

Among those to be invited are Governor Nunn, Congressman Carl D. Perkins, U. S. Senator John Sherman Cooper, Commerce Commissioner Paul Grubbs, Highway Commissioner W. B. Hazelrigg, and city and county officials.

U. S. Shoe is expected to be represented by Nathan Stix, chairman of the firm's board of directors, Robert Stix, director of manufacturing, Mr. Kerstine and others.

Visitors will be permitted to tour the factory and inspect its facilities.

The transfer of machinery from Archer Park to the new plant is well under way, and shoe production at the plant is now 1,000 pairs a day. Within the next four weeks, all equipment used at Archer Park will be at the plant, including that used in the work-trainer program.

POOL OPENER SET MAY 30

500-Person Facility Nearing Completion At $295,000 Cost

Jenny Wiley State Park's $295,000 swimming pool will be ready for use on Memorial Day when all state park bathing facilities are scheduled for opening, it was said in Frankfort this week.

Construction of the 500-person pool at the park here is nearing completion by Akers & Akers, Dana contractors. Located at the beach formerly in use on the Stratton Branch arm of Dewey Lake, its main swimming area is 93 feet long by 47 feet in width. Added to this is a 35-foot ell for diving and a wading pool for younger children.

Included in the overall contract was construction of a new bathroom there.

Major Kentucky resort parks, lodges, dining rooms and house-keeping cottages were all open by Monday, according to Robert E. Gable, parks commissioner.

The only exception is the Pennyrite Forest State Park lodge which was damaged by the recent storm that hit parts of Kentucky. Repair work is under way and the Pennyrite lodge and cottages are expected to open June 1.

DEATH TAKES KANE, WIFE

Former Allen Man Succumbs, En Route To Wife's Funeral

Death within two days last week claimed a husband and wife who were former residents of Allen.

Mrs. Fanny Austin Kane, 72, died last Thursday night at a St. Cloud, Fla. hospital after a long illness.

As he and others were en route north to Kentucky for her funeral her husband, John Clifford Kane, 73, died Saturday morning of a heart attack at a Claxton, Ga. motel.

When others of his party left the motel for breakfast Mr. Kane remained behind, saying he did not want anything to eat. He was dead half an hour later.

Both were natives of Fallsburg, Lawrence county. They resided at Allen 40 years, during all of which time Mrs. Kane was C. & O. station agent there. Mr. Kane was a carpenter. They moved from Allen to St. Cloud, about 18 months ago. They had no children.

Mrs. Kane was a daughter of W. B. and Rosa Moore Austin and was a member of the Fallsburg Methodist Church. Her only survivors are two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Billups, Kenova, W. Va., and Mrs. Luther L. Preece, of Fallsburg.

Mr. Kane's nearest surviving relative is said to be a nephew, Arthur Stone, of St. Cloud.

Bodies of the couple were taken to Fallsburg and joint funeral rites were held Wednesday afternoon from Fallsburg Tabernacle. Burial was made there.

This Town... That World

DST-UGH!

It can now be reported here, without fear of contradiction, that we have Daylight Savings Time.

I also report that I have not heard anybody singing DST's praises. For my part, I am suffering for lack of sleep—unable to go to sleep by fast time in order to rise an hour earlier. But one poor fellow was really in sad condition Monday. His wife ran the family clock up an hour without telling him, and he repeated the dose. And the clock at the parking area gate was fouled up, also, but its troubles are too chronic to be ascribed to the new time shift.

U.S. Buying Land For Use by Park

Acquisition of real estate holdings of private individuals in the Goble Branch area of Dewey lake is being made by the federal government as part of a plan to be developed by the state Department of Parks.

When, and if, all the property is acquired, the existing lease issued to the state by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers will be amended to include the new acreage. The Department of Parks, then, will develop Goble Branch and contiguous lands into a large camping area, Tom Nelson, parks planner, Department of Parks, said.

The former Camp Chatterawha, district Girl Scout recreation headquarters, was acquired by the federal government sometime ago, and subsequently leased to the state. This facility would become the nucleus of the big camp area.

Eight of 31 Pupils in School Get Milk, Committee Told

A nutrition survey made in the first grade at two schools showed that in one of the schools only eight of 31 pupils have milk as a part of their diet, Miss Ruby Akers, chairman of the Floyd County Nutritional Education committee, reported at a recent committee meeting.

Blanche Dingus discussed the breakfast program and the reason it has not been conducted in Ligon and Dwale. It was suggested that possibly NYC boys and girls could be used in these schools to help institute a simulated breakfast program.

The processing of free seeds for poverty families was discussed and it was suggested that Conservation and County Extension be contacted to see if they might be able to furnish free seeds to these families.

Health Program Ahead Of Schedule, Hall Says

The Floyd County Comprehensive Health Services Program is ahead of schedule on the way to its goal of reaching into all parts of the county with the widest range of public health services ever attempted in Kentucky, its director, Dr. Russell L. Hall, told the program steering committee at its meeting here last Thursday.

The program is a federally financed pilot effort which, if continued for its proposed five-year span, will involve the expenditure of approximately $5 million.

As of last week, the program had afforded services to 593 Floyd families, or 2,500 individuals. Mrs. Helen B. Wells, program coordinator, reported that 31 persons are now employed in its administration and that some hard-to-find professionals such as speech and physical therapists are yet being sought.

Two outpost stations, at Dwale and the Osborne elementary school, have been established. Two others are planned, this summer. Home visiting is under way.

John Milton Stumbo, transportation officer for the program, reported that eight aides are using their own cars or vehicles owned by the program to transport indigents needing attention.

During this fiscal year the in-county transportation has amounted to 3,100 miles traveled and 173 patients served. Out-of-county transportation has included 23,400 miles traveled and 84 patients served. This represents trips to Louisville, Harlan, Williamson, Huntington, Ashland, Lexington and such cities where hospitals with special services are located. The program has provided transportation for 257 patients this year, and since only one driver is employed, others of the staff must sometimes drive their own cars.

Water Dist. Wins Round

Application of the Mud Creek Water District for federal approval of its proposed water distribution project and for EDA financial assistance has surmounted one hurdle with its approval by the Huntington, W. Va. regional EDA office, and it now awaits final action in Washington.

John T. Hill, engineer on the project, said this week that estimated overall cost of the project has been increased on EDA recommendation to $1,471,000. Cost of actual construction was upped from $1,197,000 to $1,261,000.

The proposed system will serve a minimum of 700 customers and will reach homes throughout the Mud Creek valley. The work will involve the laying of approximately 57 miles of water mains.

If the project wins Washington approval, it will be the second large-scale water distribution system for the southern section of the county. Work is well under way on the Big Sandy Water District's two-county system which extends from the end of the Pikeville municipal system to Stanville.

Water System Job To Cost $549,751

Don Wallen, Wheelwright high school alumnus and former coach there, was recently named Coach of the Year of the Western Division Suncoast Conference in Florida after guiding his Martin County high school (Fla.) team to a 20-4 record. Three of his players were named to the all-conference team.

Wallen played for Georgia Southern where he was team captain and leading scorer.

TRIAL BEGUN FOR WOMAN

Trial of Mary Lou Flanery, charged with the revolver slaying of Martin of her ex-husband, Merlin Flanery, Jr., was in its second day Wednesday, and the case is not expected to reach the jury before today (Thursday).

Only seven jurors were empaneled Tuesday. The jury of nine men and three women was seated at noon Wednesday, and the Commonwealth began introducing testimony that afternoon.

Trial of the case was delayed from last Friday because of the illness of Joe P. Tackett, one of the two court-appointed defense attorneys. The April court term was extended so that the case could be heard.

The term extension was made because Mrs. Flanery has been in jail unable to execute $15,000 bond since the date of the slaying, and the court held that she is entitled to hearing without further delay.

MAN CLAIMS PAPER ERRED

Did Joe P. Tackett, of Weeksbury, tell court officials that he sought clemency for Granville Crittendon, after conviction of Crittendon in the slaying of Mrs. Crittendon, who was Tackett's daughter?

Mr. Tackett says he did not, contends that the newspaper report published last week, quoting him as asking probation for his son-in-law, is in error. Officials this week say the report was correct, that Tackett did ask probation for Crittendon.

James Arville Duff, parole officer, said the Weeksbury man told him and others that he wants Crittendon paroled if Crittendon will permit him and his wife to have custody of their dead daughter's child.

Crittendon was held guilty by a jury of the death of his wife and was given a two-year pen term.

Whatever the position taken by Mrs. Crittendon's father, this was his statement, made to The Times Monday morning:

"There was an error in the paper about me wanting to parole Granville Crittendon. I don't want him paroled. I want him to serve his term in prison."

College Choir and Band To Give Annual Concert

Prestonsburg Community College will hold its third annual spring concert Sunday at 3 p.m.

The college choir will perform choral literature from all periods in history and will be under the direction of John Mochnick.

Mr. Mochnick, a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, received his B.A. in voice from Heidelberg College in Ohio and his M.A. in choral conducting from the University of Indiana. Earlier this semester, Mr. Kalos directed the Prestonsburg Community Chorus in a performance of Brahms' "Requiem."

This concert, which offers a varied program, is free and the public is invited to attend. There will be a special concert for PCC students Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

The concert band will perform a program of contemporary and traditional literature. The band is under the direction of Gus Kalos, a native of Lexington, and chairman of the fine arts department at Prestonsburg Community College. He received his B.A. in instrumental music from the University of Kentucky and his M.A. in the same field from the University of Indiana. John T. Hill, engineer on the project, said this week that estimated overall cost of the project has been increased on EDA recommendation to $1,471,000. Cost of actual construction was upped from $1,197,000 to $1,261,000.

The proposed system will serve a minimum of 700 customers and will reach homes throughout the Mud Creek valley. The work will involve the laying of approximately 57 miles of water mains.

If the project wins Washington approval, it will be the second large-scale water distribution system for the southern section of the county. Work is well under way on the Big Sandy Water District's two-county system which extends from the end of the Pikeville municipal system to Stanville.

Water System Job To Cost $549,751

Don Wallen, Wheelwright high school alumnus and former coach there, was recently named Coach of the Year of the Western Division Suncoast Conference in Florida after guiding his Martin County high school (Fla.) team to a 20-4 record. Three of his players were named to the all-conference team.

Wallen played for Georgia Southern where he was team captain and leading scorer.

TRIAL BEGUN FOR WOMAN

Trial of Mary Lou Flanery, charged with the revolver slaying of Martin of her ex-husband, Merlin Flanery, Jr., was in its second day Wednesday, and the case is not expected to reach the jury before today (Thursday).

Only seven jurors were empaneled Tuesday. The jury of nine men and three women was seated at noon Wednesday, and the Commonwealth began introducing testimony that afternoon.

Trial of the case was delayed from last Friday because of the illness of Joe P. Tackett, one of the two court-appointed defense attorneys. The April court term was extended so that the case could be heard.

The term extension was made because Mrs. Flanery has been in jail unable to execute $15,000 bond since the date of the slaying, and the court held that she is entitled to hearing without further delay.

'WHATSOEVER THINGS'

By DONALD E. WILDMON

Back several years ago there was a boy up in Decatur, Illinois, who was very much interested in photography. He ran across an ad in a magazine that offered a book that told all about photography for only a quarter. He sent his quarter to the address that was listed and waited for his book on photography to return.

The folks at the other end of the line made a mistake, however. Instead of sending him a book on photography as he had ordered, they sent him another one. This one was entitled, "A Manual on Magic, Mind-Reading, and Ventriloquism." Well, most of us would have fussed and fumed and written back and let the business house have a good tongue lashing without ever looking at the book.

But the youngster didn't do it like we would. He opened the book and found the section on ventriloquism very fascinating. He began to practice "throwing his voice." Well, sir, he kept practicing and before long he became pretty good at it. Fact is, he became very good at it.

He made himself a dummy to use the "thrown voice" with and then set out on his trail to entertain people. Before long millions of people were listening to those two on Sunday nights and later were viewing them on television. What had begun as a bad break ended up as a way of life for Charlie McCarthy.

All of us could profit from such information. Most of us don't find life to be exactly like we ordered it. Sometimes the breaks seem to go against us. Sometimes we order books on photography and are sent books on magic. But the test in life comes with what we do with what we have to do with.

There was a fellow named Paul who wanted very much to go to a place called Bithynia, but was prevented and went rather to a place called Troas. He didn't get what he wanted but he used what he did get to his and others' advantage. And, using it, he was able to change the course of the world.

Most of us have to live like that. We have to do with what we have to do with. Sometimes it is a second choice, or third, or even farther down the line. Very rare, indeed, is the person who gets exactly what he wants in life.

There was a song not long ago that went something like this: "Do what you do do well, boy. Do what you do do well." Well, it is a good philosophy of life in that little tongue-twister. We can't all do what we want to do, but we can all "do what we do do well."

Now this brings us around to a Cross. The Book tells us plainly that He didn't want that Cross. But He took it, mastered it, used it, and is conquering the world with it. He didn't get what He wanted, but He used what He got.

When life hands you a lemon, the thing to do is to make lemonade.

Johnson County Twins Benefit from Change In Social Security Law

Twins Ronald and Donald Clark, 15, made history in Johnson county recently. They were the first children in the county to receive social security benefits based on one of the latest changes in the law.

Their mother, Ann Collins Clark, died in July, 1954. Since she had worked under Social Security, the youths' father, Ronald C. Clark, filed a claim for social security benefits for the children, only to learn his wife needed one additional quarter of coverage to be insured under the law at that time.

Under the old law, benefits could be paid to survivors of a woman worker only if she had worked under social security for 1½ years of the three years preceding death. Now this special requirement has been removed. Benefits may be paid in these cases beginning in March, 1968, if the woman worker has enough work credits earned at any time to be insured.

The Social Security District Office in Pikeville maintains a constant informational program to acquaint area residents with provisions of Social Security law. They also directly contact some people they know to be entitled to benefits. In the Clark case the subject arose in a conversation between a social security employee in the Pikeville office and Mr. Clark on another social security matter.

The youths became entitled to social security, beginning March, 1968, and will receive monthly checks until they are 18. If they continue fulltime schooling after that time, the checks will be continued until they are 22. Both boys are sophomores at Paintsville high school and hope to go to college. Mr. Clark said he plans to save the money in order to finance the boys' college education.

It is estimated there are from 80 to 100 persons in Floyd county who have not applied for this benefit.

TVA TO HELP FINANCE STRIP MINE RECLAMATION

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) announced last week that it has reached agreement with its two largest suppliers of surface-mined coal for sharing the increased production costs that have resulted from more stringent strip-mine reclamation rules.

TVA's share of the extra cost will amount to more than $5 million on long-term contracts with Peabody Coal Co. and Kentucky Oak Mining Co. for over 100 million tons of coal.

These contracts, involving coal production as far in the future as 1980, were awarded prior to major changes in the Kentucky requirements and before reclamation provisions were included in TVA coal contracts.

The price increases vary with mining conditions. Peabody operates in Western Kentucky and Kentucky Oak operates in the mountainous eastern part of the state.

"Although TVA seeks to keep the cost of electricity at a minimum, we have always held that where coal can be recovered most effectively by surface mining, the disturbed areas should be reclaimed for productive use and the cost of reclamation should be covered in the price of coal," TVA board chairman A. J. Wagner said.

As part of the agreements, Peabody and Kentucky Oak have agreed to incorporate TVA's reclamation provisions into these contracts. Since August, 1965, all TVA term coal contracts have included requirements that proper reclamation be performed on areas affected by surface mining. These provisions specify that the contractors must:

- 1. Cover coal faces and bury all toxic materials including coal wastes and strongly acid shales. 2. Seal off any breakthrough to former underground mines. 3. Avoid the deposit of spoil into natural drainages. 4. Control water from the mines and haul roads. 5. Cover all holes at the face that have been made by augers. 6. Grade spoil banks as necessary to provide for the re-establishment of vegetation. 7. Control the placement of all over-burden to prevent landslides. 8. Revegetate the disturbed area with trees or other cover meeting with TVA's approval. 9. Perform the reclamation work at the same time the mining operation is taking place to the maximum extent possible, with all work completed no later than 24 months after the delivery of all coal supplied under the contract unless TVA agrees to an extension of the time.

The University of Kentucky at Lexington is made up of ten colleges, a School of Architecture, a School of Allied Health Professions, a School of Home Economics, a Graduate School and a Division of University Extension.

Telephone Talk

FOR A BETTER COMMUNITY SUPPORT the PRESTONSBURG CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

THE TRAVELERS... In at least one state, we're told, there are six phones that just won't stay put. Which is all right, because they aren't supposed to. These six are always off to fairs, conventions, sporting events, wherever people gather. Actually, they're public telephones that travel on wheels, towed by a trailer truck. It's their job to relieve the communications jam in places where coin telephones are in heavy, but temporary, demand.

BIG MYSTERY, SMALL CULPRIT... Bell Telephone Laboratories, a few years back, was asked to analyze a tacky film deposit on the contact points of a telephone relay that wouldn't operate properly. The film, they discovered, was partly composed of an insulating varnish normally used on such relays. But there was another substance they couldn't seem to identify—until further investigation turned up an ant nest hidden in the relay box.

So, for the good of science, several of the ants were painlessly done in, dried, ground into powder, and subjected to infrared analysis. Sure enough, the powder matched the mysterious substance on the relay. Apparently the culprit ants, bent on the theft of varnish flakes, walked between the contact points and were electrocuted.

AS PART OF A SERVICE IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM in the Midwest, a rural eight-party line was being upgraded to a four-party line. The ring signals were scheduled to be changed, too, until one farmer made an unusual request.

"Please don't change my two short rings to a single ring," he asked. He explained that he had trained his dog to react to the two short rings by seeking him out wherever he was working at his chores and barking an order to answer the phone. By special wiring, the telephone company was able to grant his request so he wouldn't have to teach an old dog a new trick.

The Williamsburg firm's bid of $236,905.60 on Contract VII also was low and almost $13,000 under the estimated cost. This contract includes connecting and strengthening mains in central Prestonsburg with 3,773 feet of 10-inch pipe, 2,620 feet of 8-inch and 5,446 feet of 6-inch; connecting and strengthening mains in West Prestonsburg with 1,872 feet of 10-inch line, 270 feet of 10-inch river crossing and 2,493 feet of 6-inch pipe; the foundation and connections for the 300,000-gallon reservoir to be built on the hillside overlooking the First Presbyterian Church and the Community College; 582 feet of 6-inch line in the Lancer distribution system, and 2,993 feet of 10-inch pipe connecting with the municipal housing project now under construction.

The R. D. Cole Manufacturing Company was low bidder on Contract VIII which is for the erection of a 300,000-gallon steel reservoir on a prepared foundation. The company's bid was $29,865, which was $135 below the estimated cost.

Because all base bids were below estimated cost, it is expected that the bids will be approved shortly and work will be started soon. Completion is to be made in 300 calendar days.

Six firms offered bids on Contract VI. Only two made offers on the work inside Prestonsburg, West Prestonsburg and Lancer (Contract VII), and the second was more than $175,000 above that of the successful bidder. On Contract VI the H. B. Ranier Construction Company was next to the low bidder with a bid of $287,178.52. Seven entered bids on the reservoir erection.

Ever since my daughter was brought in from Chicago, in the Crittendon car, dead in the back seat, I have asked my good Lord, over and over, where did my little girl die, somewhere between Chicago and Weeksville. I have been a nervous wreck ever since this happened. She was lying in the back seat of the car, wearing only her dress and no sweater. Only God and Granville Crittendon know where she died.

Officials said Mr. Tackett indicated, earlier this week, he would confer with them today (Thursday).

But Commissioner Grubbs did not ford the river to look at sites such as are at Emma, Banner, Harold and other spots which have both railroad and water but no highway. The state could cure the situation by building US 23 up the west side of the Big Sandy to Pikeville or by investing in a series of bridges. The former idea makes sense to us; as an alternative, the latter appears to us as sound an investment in the future of the area as the state could make.

One of the great prayers is that of the old mountaineer. It runs to this effect: "Lord, I don't ask for a faith that would move yander mountain. I can take enough dynamite and move it, if it needs movin'. I pray, Lord, only for enough faith to move me."

DEFINITION
Me, I am a great believer in this younger generation, but their ignorance is nothing short of amazing. Take our item last week about the poke warden. Several of these modern youngsters had never heard of such an office. So I explain my connection with the mythical position:

Years ago, during a slow run around the mines, some wag pretended to be alarmed lest the women-folks, working to supply scanty family larders, would cut all the polk (wild greens, my dears) and leave none for seed. So he took upon himself to rib certain of his acquaintances by appointing them poke wardens.

A friend of mine tells me he bears the scars of battle to this day from the time when he held this august office. Says he tried to put down a bit of claim-jumping, sought to restrict each of the gals to a certain plot of poke, and wound up getting in the middle of a hair-pulling contest.

Mrs. Lou Baldrige, 87, Resident Here, Victim; Funeral Held Sunday

Mrs. Lou E. Baldrige, 87, of Prestonsburg, died last Thursday night in a Paintsville hospital.

A native of Floyd county, she was born Jan. 27, 1881, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith. Her husband, Charles Baldrige, died in 1942.

Survivors include three sons, Otto Baldrige, Sr., of Paintsville, Rev. Albert Baldrige, of Portsmouth, Ohio, and Elzie Baldrige, of Greenfield, O.; three daughters, Mrs. Josie Wolf, of Pontiac, Mich., Mrs. Evelyn Roberts and Mrs. Martha Morgan, both of Portsmouth; a brother, Will Baldrige, of Prestonsburg, and a half-sister, Mrs. Fannie Lloyd, of Ashland.

Funeral rites were conducted at 1 p.m., Sunday, from the First Church of God at Paintsville. Burial was made in the Williams cemetery at Ashland under the direction of the Paintsville Funeral Home.

Pineville and Buckhorn Lake State Park at Buckhorn are the last major resort parks to open. According to the large number of advance reservations and early park visitation, it is apparent the 1968 travel season in Kentucky will break all previous attendance records, Commissioner Gable said.

Boat docks are now open at all the resort parks.

FEATURES MOONBOW

Cumberland Falls, scenic waterfall at Cumberland Falls State Park, Corbin, features one of the world's two moonbows. This rare spectacle may often be seen at night by the light of the moon.

Forests cover 45 percent of Kentucky's total land area.

Bourbon Stockyards, Louisville, received its name because it is on the site of Bourbon House, a drovers' tavern of early days, where, according to tradition, Louis Philippe, later king of France, stayed for a while.

EDA Funds To Help Expand Job Program

Approval of $150,000 to help the University of Kentucky expand a job-development program into all 80 economically lagging counties of the state was announced this week by the Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce.

The funds were requested by the University's Office of Development Services and Business Research in Lexington. The University will invest $89,167 in cash, services and facilities to complete the $239,167 cost of operating the project for one year.

For the last six months the University has operated a management counseling service for small businesses and prospective small businessmen in 17 counties on a pilot basis.

In that time the center has provided management advice to 30 businesses.

Under the expanded program, the University Center will establish four field offices to bring managerial and technical assistance to existing industry and technical assistance to community groups and local governments in community development. The offices will serve the 80 Kentucky counties qualified for Economic Development Administration financial assistance on the basis of high unemployment or low family income.

In applying for the technical assistance funds, the University said that first attention will be given to the 61 EDA-designated counties in the eastern area of the state.

STRONG EARTHQUAKE

JARS ALASKA

Washington — A strong earthquake struck near Kodiak Island, Alaska, Tuesday, the National Earthquake Information Center reported.

The center said the quake's magnitude measured six on the Richter scale.

I Say What I Think

By S. C. VAN CURON

Former Congressman Eugene Siler, of Williamsburg, who is running against Jefferson County Judge Marlow Cook for the Republican nomination for the U. S. Senate seat of Thruston B. Morton, remains one of the most interesting and unpredictable candidates in Kentucky history.

He's unpredictable to the point that he may take a stand on an issue that no one expected would come out in a campaign. And he isn't particularly concerned whether it is the popular thing to do. Once he makes up his mind, that's it.

He sets his own moral and social standards on his background of Baptist doctrine, practiced stringently over the years. He's lay leader in his church; an ardent dry; humanitarian and philanthropist; lawyer, investor, former congressman, and former Kentucky Court of Appeals judge.

He's a strong supporter and contributor to Williamsburg College, the Baptist School in his hometown.

As to unpredictability, the 1951 gubernatorial campaign when Siler ran against Gov. Lawrence W. Weatherby illustrates the point. Siler lost by about 54,000 votes, and a stand that he took which friends had advised him against, may have cost him votes.

No mention had been made of the wet and dry issues in the campaign, and no mention had been made about Catholic school children riding public school buses, or nuns in habits teaching in public schools. He took a strong stand against all of these late in the campaign.

In two separate press releases, Siler made these points:

He will give a $100 scholarship annually to the "neediest student of christian ideals" in every four-year college in Kentucky during his term of office.

To implement the Republican party's no-discrimination policy he will place on his office or field staff 10 percent colored help during his term as senator, if elected.

One press release said Siler will tell political leaders and voters, "I am neither a conservative nor a liberal, but I am a constitutionalist. I am as conservative as the constitution requires me to be, but I am as liberal as the constitution permits one to be without violating his oath to uphold and defend this hallowed instrument that guarantees the freedoms handed down to us by our fathers."

To be sure that Siler had understood his press releases, I called him at his Williamsburg office, and went over these points with him.

"That's right," was his answer, "these people have been mistreated." His only qualification was, "if I'm elected."

Knowing Siler, to accuse him of taking a page from Bobby Kennedy's campaign manual to appeal to ethnic groups would be wrong. It's a conviction he has arrived at on his own, popular or not; he'll stand on it.

When he was in Congress during the Korean War, he made the statement he would not vote to send a mother's son to war on foreign soil until enemy troops marched down the Main Street of Williamsburg.

That's Siler and his convictions.

When he retired from Congress after serving four terms, he said he did so because he thought he had served his usefulness there.

Now, at 68, he's apparently changed his mind and wants to go to the U. S. Senate. But don't expect him to compromise his conscience to gain a single vote.

Pre-Registration Set At Community College For Summer Classes

Pre-registration for new freshmen will be held at Prestonsburg Community College, Saturday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The pre-registration is for the summer session only.

Although this time has been set aside for new, incoming freshmen, any person who would like to take classes this summer, and who is not presently enrolled at the college, is asked to pre-register at this time also.

Tuition will not have to be paid at this time. Saturday's registration has been set aside only to provide a place in class for those who will be attending summer school.

The steamboat "New Orleans," first successful steamer on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, made its first run to New Orleans from Louisville in October, 1811.

WOMEN'S CLUBS VOTE TO OPPOSE DAM PLAN

The Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs last Friday announced its opposition to the planned Red River Reservoir "pending further study and possible relocation."

That stand was taken in a resolution adopted during a four-day convention attended by more than 430 members of the federation this week in Lexington. The group's new president, Mrs. Oscar Sowards, Pikeville, said it has a membership of more than 13,000.

The women's clubs joined the Kentucky section of the Sierra Club and other conservationist groups in calling for "preservation of the Red River Gorge."

Their resolution said that the dam, scheduled for construction by the Army Corps of Engineers, "will flood the Red River gorge in parts of Powell and Menifee counties and . . . destroy one of the truly wild rivers left in the eastern United States."

"There are alternative methods of flood control . . . and alternative sites . . . for dams to supply water to down-stream cities and towns," the resolution said. The federation asserted that "irreparably impair the scenic grandeur" of "unique" areas of the gorge. It said the reservoir would have adverse effects on plant and animal life, on "scientific and educational values" and on "the growth of many forms of outdoor recreation."

In another resolution, the federation called for measures to alleviate air and water pollution.

It recommended such steps as increased research, more public support of interstate air compacts, and "equitable tax treatment" of industries that invest in anti-pollution equipment.

NOW-TO CLEANER COOKING

To cook on a new flameless ELECTRIC range is to make a clean break with the past. Bottoms of pots and pans don't need scouring because there's no flame to make them black. The oven cleans itself. All you do to clean an electric "self-cleaning" oven is set a dial. Baked-on food and grease disappear. Electric surface units clean themselves. Join the trend to better, cleaner cooking, baking and broiling. Move up to a self-cleaning flameless electric range. Only electric ranges have self-cleaning ovens.

RATLIFF BLASTS NUNN, PUBLICLY APOLOGIZES

Frankfort, Ky. — Commonwealth's Atty. Thomas Ratliff, of Pikeville, said last week, "I publicly apologize to the people of Kentucky for running for lieutenant governor on a ticket with (Gov.) Louie B. Nunn."

In the unprecedented statement, Ratliff charged that Nunn had deceived the voters through his numerous campaign pledges. "He would not have been elected governor had I refused to join with him following last year's primary," Ratliff said.

The Pikeville attorney was the running mate of Jefferson County Judge Marlow W. Cook, who lost to Nunn in the GOP gubernatorial primary, and who is now seeking the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator. Cook's entire slate won in that primary and ran with Nunn, although Ratliff subsequently lost to Wendell Ford.

Ratliff said he felt it was his duty then to run "in spite of my deep-seated misgivings about Louie Nunn."

But, he said, he cannot condone by silence now what he has fought outspokenly in the past. "I foolishly took Nunn's word that he would bring good government to Kentucky through a unified, responsible Republican Party.

"I foolishly believed Nunn when he promised to make an honest effort to stop waste and bring efficiency to state government in order to prevent more and more tax increases," Ratliff said, adding:

"I believed him when he promised to stop the suspicious and wasteful practice of giving personal service contracts to people like Bill May (of Brighton Engineering, Frankfort, whose dealing with Democratic administrations were criticized during the campaign).

"I believed Nunn when he promised to return state government to the people by taking it out of control of a greedy political machine."

DOGWOODS, THE GLORY OF OUR SPRINGTIME HILLS

The unfolding of the dogwood blossoms upon our hills is both a miracle and a mystery. We pass through the barren winter woods and see the round-door-knob buds studding the naked branches. Each of these knobby buds has four bracts that enclose the true flowers and keep them snug against the winter cold. Let the April sun beat down warm upon them and a miracle unfolds. The buds expand, the bracts tear loose from each other at the ends, leaving a notch, and then they first unfold in greenish-yellow. A day or so of hot April sun turns these bracts sheer white—a glossy, glistening starched white that is almost dazzling. Dogwood blossoms are the whitest white of all the blooms that appear on our hills. And if the rebuders are still out in their reddish-purple, strawberry-wine color, we have hills that are garnished with "strawberry and cream."

I like to think of our springtime hills, when the dogwoods gleam white upon their slopes, as large, green ships with white sails unbarled in the gentle spring winds, and it isn't hard for me to imagine that they are sailing on a sea of azure blue.

The dogwoods also turn our hills into white shrines that gleam in the bright sun and lend them a touch of magic splendor. The dogwoods are the glory of our April and Maytime hills. Go north or south, east or west, and behold thousands of white dogwoods in array. There are many more of them to be seen than we had even dreamed, might exist. Yet we need many more dogwoods. Everyone with a place to set one should do so and be rewarded with a mass of sheer white, —a chaste white that lends a touch of the sublime to our hills in spring.

The dogwood has received many honors. It is a small tree that thrives in the understorey of the forest. It is tolerant of shade and grows under oaks, beeches, ashes, as well as in glades or other open places. The dogwood has been honored by three of our states. Missouri has designated it as her state tree. It is also the state flower of both Virginia and North Carolina. It deserves these honors and more. It has many fine characteristics and properties. Its bark is medicinal, often being used as a substitute for quinine. The bark is bitter and clothes the trunk like an alligator's checkered hide, as it has many small, scaly blocks. The bark is a dull reddish-brown and is rich in tannin, coramine, resin, gum, oil, wax, lignin, lime, potassa and iron. It is valuable as a tonic and has been used in lieu of Peruvian bark. The bark should always be dried before being used. It is a good stimulant and is valuable in treating colds, chills, flu and such ailments.

The wood is heavy, close-grained, hard as iron when seasoned and often has a delicate tinge of pink. It is used to make jewelers' shuttles, blocks for jewelers and engravers, and in pioneer times the dogwood furnished the wedge to split the rails for the old-time worm fences. These wedges were called "guts" and were so tough and hard they could take weeks of beating with a heavy knot maul. Abe Lincoln often split rails with dogwood guts and the knot maul.

At the old-time log-rollings, men made "hand spikes" out of dogwood for use in turning and rolling the heavy logs.

The leaves of the dogwood are at first rosy and have a glossy sheen. They soon turn green and grow large and oval in form. The leaves always appear in opposite pairs on the twigs, and have no teeth on the margin.

The autumn dogwood is just as colorful as in spring. The leaves turn to a deep, rich shade of crimson, and among them we can see the copious clusters of bright red berries grouped on the branches. The berries are oval, with a black tip, and each contains a small, hard nutlet. These berries are excellent food for birds and other wildlife. They also add beauty and color to the autumn tree. In winter, when snows cover the ground, the birds seek out the red dogwood berries and survive on them. They are also a favorite food of squirrels.

The dogwood is a fine ornamental and is much planted along highways and in parks. Its rugged alligator hide enfolds a heart of beauty—a heart that dreams of beauty and adds a pure white chastity to the pageant of the springtime hills.

HOMECOMING NEWS

Students of Maytown school are starting to learn the Homecoming school song, written by former music instructor, Mrs. Thomas Patrick. The tune is the Battle Hymn of the Republic. Homecoming president, Mrs. James Allen plans to use the song during the event.

Several students are submitting Homecoming poems. Many will be exhibited, and the winners in elementary and high school will appear in the Homecoming booklet, being published by the Maytown Homecoming Association. Some students are helping with histories for the booklet, descriptions of the old May mill, ancient swinging bridges, recent floods, etc. Ernest Hagans, of Pikeville, has furnished a history of the long-ago carbon plant at Lem. Commander Herbert Dyer, who left here 41 years ago, writes that he plans to attend, so Homecoming plans are marching on, with many in community, school and churches helping in varied ways. School pupils brought change to provide pins for the identification tags.

Reaction to a national report charging that residents of 11 Kentucky counties are suffering from severe hunger and malnutrition drew strong reaction from a number of Kentuckians.

County officials generally reacted with anger and dismay. Anti-poverty workers, however, mostly reinforced the charges made Monday by a blue-ribbon citizens' group which said 10 million Americans are suffering from hunger.

The citizens' group ended nine months of study by reporting a "shocking and shameful" degree of hunger in 256 counties across the nation, including Bath, Clanton, Fulton, Garrard, Knox, McCreary, Lewis, Martin, Morgan, Powell and Robertson in Kentucky.

The committee recommended great expansion of existing federal food programs. But Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman said that since he became secretary in 1961, the number of needy persons receiving food aid has been increased from 3.5 million to 5.8 million. This aid is extended through direct food distribution, a donation program or through food stamps.

Seven of the 11 Kentucky counties singled out by the citizens' group participate in the federal food-stamp program. The other four have the government's surplus food commodity program, which doles out such food items as butter, beans, corn meal and flour.

How Many Winters?

Winter, as identified on the calendar, is past, but Kentucky—particularly, our section of the state—has a whole passel of other cool periods which are identified as "winters." How many there are of these may not be definitely known, but two have passed—Redbud and Dogwood winters. Yet to come are the others—Blackberry, Elderberry, and so on, you name 'em.

REED LAUDS GOV. NUNN

Governor Is Speaker As Coal Association Holds Annual Meet

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Louie B. Nunn was the keynote speaker at the annual meeting recently of the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Operators Association in Lexington.

He was introduced by B. F. Reed, of Drift, who praised Nunn for "courageous leadership which, in spite of pressures, resulted in the legislature passing the $2.5 billion biennial budget without change."

Reed commented, "We need leaders with stout hearts; in Kentucky we have such a leader in Governor Nunn."

Gov. Nunn reviewed the research and care used in preparation of the budget and commented, "Thorough research and planning, based on the needs of the state, paid off. It passed the legislature by the largest margin of any previous budget."

Outlining the benefits that are to accrue to Kentucky, through his accelerated education program, Gov. Nunn said, "The major thrust in our budget is in the area of education for which we are committing 66 cents out of every general fund dollar."

"If there is any better way to encourage long-term industrial development, if there is any better way to get at poverty except by educating the poor, if there is any better way to enhance the advantages of all Kentuckians, except through an enlightened, modern educational system, I don't know what it could be."

L. N. Thomas, Kentucky Carbon Corp., presented a 60 pound ash tray, made of coal, to Gov. Nunn, on behalf of the association.

Mrs. Perry To Head Midway Area Drive

Julianne Williams Perry, of Paintsville, has been appointed area chairman in charge of donations and publicity for an auction to be held on the Midway Junior College campus on Aug. 24. The auction is sponsored by the chapel committee of the Midway-Pinkerton Alumnae Association. Midway Junior College is located in Woodford county on the east side of the small town of Midway.

Mrs. Perry, wife of G. C. Perry III, is a graduate of Midway Junior College and is an active member of the Alumnae Association. The area assigned to Mrs. Perry includes the counties of Wolfe, Breathitt, Lee, Perry, Knott, Letcher, Pike, Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin.

Future of Local Colleges Is Bright, Says Dr. Oswald

Special to The Times

Lexington, Ky.—Foreseeing a "glorious future" for the University of Kentucky, its president, Dr. John W. Oswald, also envisions the day when community colleges will offer higher education in every region of the Commonwealth and will provide more services to Kentuckians.

Dr. Oswald, who has resigned effective Sept. 1 to accept the executive vice-presidency of the University of California, told a faculty audience at the UK Student Center that "the people of Kentucky no longer consider the University an institution of the Blue Grass but an institution related to the needs of the whole state."

The UK president received standing ovations before and after his talk, given at the annual dinner meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

"We must not believe," he declared, "that the community colleges should be made in the image of Lexington. They have a broader function."

He went on to say that the community college is fitted to the needs of its area and that it can provide technical training and services adapted to those needs.

"It used to be that the argument was over research versus teaching," the speaker said, adding that it had been feared the funding of research activity would impinge on efforts to attain excellence in education.

"But I do not worry too much about that except in isolated cases," he added. "I think that now it is teaching and research versus services. We are called on more and more for service to this or that agency — national, state and local."

"We must gear to this problem, perhaps with certain of our (Lexington) faculty who could be more effective in the field, working from the community college as a base, than they could be here. . . . In addition to fundamental teaching we can bring the community colleges closer to the University by getting the ablest possible faculty without impairing their ability to relate to their communities."

The 17 community colleges now established, projected and funded or authorized by the General Assembly, Dr. Oswald said, place Kentucky in the vanguard of a nation-wide effort to expand community college systems. Across the country, there now are 900 community colleges.

Ratliff said that since the November election Nunn has broken his promises "to me and the people of Kentucky."

He charged that two former Democratic governors and a Democratic legislature aided Nunn in this purported deception.

"Neither Nunn nor his Democratic partners in this conspiracy can pass the buck to each other," Ratliff said. "They are jointly and irrevocably guilty."

Ratliff apparently was referring to Nunn's successful push for a five percent sales tax, approved by a Democratic-dominated General Assembly, which included former Gov. Lawrence Weatherby.

In addition, former Democratic Gov. A. B. Chandler broke with his party to support Nunn in the election, but his role, if any, in the legislature is not known.

Ratliff said that Nunn cannot hide behind the excuse that he did not know the financial condition of Kentucky while he was running.

"Anyone who did not know . . . had no business running for governor or the legislature, much less being elected," he said.

Ratliff said Nunn has made no earnest effort to try to eliminate waste and inefficiency before imposing burdensome tax increases.

"I believe the people should have been told the truth instead of being promised the moon and at the same time absolutely no tax increases," he said.

The Pikeville official said it "gives me no joy to publicly criticize the first Republican governor in 20 years, but I have waited in vain for Nunn to honestly meet his obligations to the people."

He said he intends to work "with others who feel as I do, to see to it that the people of Kentucky never forget what Gov. Nunn and his Democratic accomplices have done. . . . They have not told the truth and they should bear the consequences of never again being trusted by the voters."

Asked what prompted his surprising statement at this time, Ratliff said his comments speak for themselves.

with an enrollment of 1,665,000 students. Another 150 two-year schools are in process of formation and an additional 1,000 are in prospect within the next three or four years.

"About 25 percent of high school seniors now go to community colleges," Dr. Oswald said. "In the next 10 years, 60 to 70 percent will be freshmen and sophomores in these schools."

The UK president pointed out that Kentucky's community colleges "are closely tied to the University so that our resources here can be felt in the communities. They are part of the 'mother' institution. But they also have sufficient local autonomy, through their local boards, that they can be responsive to the needs of their communities."

During the course of his address, Dr. Oswald expressed gratification at "the responsible way in which the faculty, and also the Governor (Louie Nunn), have acted in creating a new screening committee to select a new president."

The UK faculty has chosen four members of the committee, including one representing the community colleges, and four have been appointed by Governor Nunn from the UK Board of Trustees.

"My Kentucky experience has been one of the most exciting and rewarding periods of my lifetime," Dr. Oswald told his audience. "I begin now to see the kinds of faculty being added to the fine faculty we have already here. I will leave with great affection for the University and for the Commonwealth, and with confidence in the future of this institution."

"I travel about the nation to some extent and I become rather full of pride when others recognize the progress we have made. I am grateful that I may have played some small role."

"With the surge and impetus the University now has, my successor, with the support I have enjoyed, can look forward to a glorious future for this institution."

Dr. Oswald was introduced by Paul Oberst of the UK College of Law, who praised his "belief in academic freedom," his successful efforts to upgrade the faculty and his contributions to improved relations between administration and students.

Noting that faculty salaries had been raised to the point of competition with other major universities, Oberst added: "We have been fighting not so much for money as for a university of excellence."

The introductory speaker said Dr. Oswald "has brought gen-une faculty participation" in University affairs. He drew a wry smile from the outgoing president and a laugh from the audience when he added:

"But he has not always been successful in his relations with students. Once he kissed the wrong queen at a homecoming game and he has had sometimes less than applause from The Kernel (student newspaper)."

Responding that he had come to UK from the University of California as "an unsuspecting plant pathologist," Dr. Oswald remarked that, on the West Coast, he had been researching potato diseases. The major difference in his change of responsibility was that, "In California I was dealing with cold potatoes; when I came here it was hot potatoes."

The AAUP presented the outgoing UK executive with a commemorative plaque, inscribed, "1963-68: In appreciation of courageous promotion and defense of the highest principles and objectives of the academic community."

IT HAPPENED IN LOTS OF PLACES

When I went away, at Christmas, 1906, to attend school in what seemed a far-away place, actually only two counties away, I had accumulated a store of stories that I regarded as true. I had heard them all my life, and they were told with exact references to some of our local people. The tellers, I had supposed, believed them as they were recounted again and again. Who was I to doubt these racy yarns?

And then something rather lamentable happened: I found that the same stories, with exactly the same episodes and the same endings, had also taken place elsewhere, authentically sworn to by tellers of stories in my new home. For a long time I was positively hurt, for I knew the stories as actual Fidelity history; why, I knew the people who had been the heroes or villains of the stories. But that made no difference when I told the new yarn-spinners that their yarns had come from my home neighborhood. For some years I kept finding my choicest stories were already known and could be proved by the best witnesses. Did I have a haunted house? The same house mysteriously appeared in some other county. Did I know about a mysterious murder? I knew just where it took place and the suspicions that everybody had as to who was the murderer and who had not yet been caught. But the same type of murder, in all its lurid details, had been committed in fully half a dozen counties. Murders were plentiful in those days, to judge by the accounts of them that I ran into. Sensational elopements, with all the accompanying shotgun and horse-whip trimmings were also common, so common that it was a relief to find that most couples had not eloped so sensationally but had been married right in their own neighborhoods by the preacher or the justice of the peace.

Some years of this puzzling contradiction of my best stories finally brought me around to a study of folklore, though I did not know it by name. First I found that the tallest of the tall tales were told as actual fact, especially on every new frontier. Some of the people I knew early in my life had gone west, got dissatisfied, and then reversed Horace Greeley's advice and gone east, back home. Some brought back souvenirs of their wild-west adventure, in the shape of spurs and hats and guns and such; but everyone of them brought back yarns, all of them authentic, just like the ones back home. Dumb as I had always been, I took a long time to decide that there just could not have been so many authentic stories of events that just happened. Occasionally some elements would creep into the yarns that showed that the teller had forgotten to adapt his events to the place where they were supposed to take place. If he sang some song about events that he knew and had participated in, he was almost sure to throw in a word or phrase or attitude that I knew now he had heard but had not taken time to adapt to his own experiences.

While I was getting my attitude toward folk yarns straightened out, I was also becoming fond of the folk way of telling things, even the localization of events that had really happened elsewhere or had merely been dreamed up. Then by degrees I came to like the local yarns, to wish to find in them the very motifs that I knew would be showing up. For example, when I heard about a haunted house,

ANCIENT CEMETERY FOUND

I wanted the exact account of the wild sounds emanating from it, the precise time when ghosts and other semi-visible creatures stirred abroad. Some of my associates got cynical about these yarns and denounced the tellers as liars. They were this, but in a good sense. When a man lies for the fun of it and does not harm thereby, he becomes an artist; and who would want to take away the literary pleasure that the listener gets from the well-told lie. Now I wish I had set down, in every detail, the yarns that I regarded as history, to examine in the light of modern scholarship to see what our local tall-tale had added or subtracted. What an exciting bit of research that would be, in my old age.
