Burchett in Jail In Kendrick Death; Hearing Set Today

Warrants charging Adron Burchett, 32, of Ivel, with murder in the shooting death Saturday night of 19-year-old George Lynn Kendrick, of Tram, and with shooting at with intent to kill were issued Monday by County Judge Henry Stumbo, and his examing trial was set for 1:30 p.m. Thur-

Officers said Burchett brought the wounded youth to the Prestonsburg General Hospital but that Kendrick was dead on arrival here, and Burchett went to the courthouse and surrendered.

Kendrick died of a single wound in his head. The shooting took place in the road near the home of Billy "Reb" Howell, of Bobby Crum, one of those at the shooting scene, said Burchett accused him of stealing his tools. He stated in an affidavit Monday that he ran and that he heard shooting. It was on the contention that one or more shots were fired at Crum that the warrant alleging shooting at with intent to kill was issued.

Three revolvers were found in Burchett's truck, officers said. They were of .22, .32 and .38 calibre. State Detective Chester D. Potter indicated all three weapons would be fired and bullets from them compared with the bullet taken from Kendrick's body.

The victim was an employee of the Arthur Akers Television Service in Pike county. In addition to his mother, he is survived by one brother and five sisters. Steve Edward Stewart, of Tram, Judy, Priscilla, Teresa and Edna Stewart and Pamela Kendrick, all of Tram.

Funeral of the victim will be at noon today (Wednesday) from the home of Ida Crum, of Tram. Burial will be in the family cemetery at Tram under direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

3 Attacked Him

Sheriff Frank Leslie said Tuesday that the kidnap-robbery of a Prater Creek man has been reported to his office and that an investigation of the case has been begun.

Noah Nicholls, 54, reported that he was robbed of $130 by three men who entered his car on Mud Creek and beat him. Nicholls' right lower jaw was fractured and he had lacerations about his face and neck. He was taken to the UK Medical Center but later returned to the home of a daughter, Mrs. other employees and personnel. The Jean Sellers, near Allen.

MAN'S FEUD WITH AN ECHO This column now has the distinction of recording a possible first-a man's feud with an echo.

From time nobody knows when boys have jousted with the elfin spirit, sending their voices across hill-hemmed valleys and listening, entranced, as the mocking voice came back to them. But this story has to do with an echo that ceased to be fun.

It all happened at the homestead on Mare Creek of our former editorial associate. Henry P. "Buck" Scalf. A week or so ago. one of his dogs gave a bark, late at night outside Mr. Scalf's bedroom window. Back came a bark, and that set things off. The dog barked and counter-barked as replies bounced back to him till his owner was forced to rise from bed at an ungodly hour and chase him away.

A night or two later, the same sound duel was again waged, only this time both dogs gave tongue and answered, and were answered by, the pesky echo. There was little sleep at the Scalf residence that night.

But the situation was not yet critical. It became more so when, next night, Scalf's herd bull ambled down in front of the house, lifted his head and gave with a lordly bawl. And back came the answering voice. That set the bull to pawing the ground and sounding off in earnest, and the dogs joined in, and the cacophony of bawl, bellow, bark and howl became such that Scalf complained so loudly the echo almost answered

By this time it became evident that something must be done. The tormented householder took stock of the situation.

Five in Wreck Seriously Hurt

Five of the eight persons injured in a twocar smashup on US 23, at "Winchester," near Emma, last Tuesday were seriously hurt and have been transferred to Lexington hospitals from the Prestonsburg General Hospital.

The wreck involving an auto driven by 68year-old Kelsie Stanley, of Topmost, and that of Giles Lovern, of Broad Bottom, Pike county, was described by State Trooper Leeman Bevins as one of the worst he had seen. He said that the Stanley car apparently veered across the center stripe of the highway and that the two cars crashed.

In serious condition at the Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, are Kelsie Stanley, Toy Stanley, 37, and his daughter, Charlene, 10, both of Weaverville, N. C. Theodore Johnson, of Kite, Knott county, also was in an intensive care unit at Good Samaritan. Another occupant of the Stanley car, Joyce Darlene Stanley, of Weaverville, N. Probe Continues In Two Slayings On Beaver Creek

State and county officials continued this week the investigation into the slaying of James Clayton Conley on Steele's Creek, near Wayland, June 7, and the murder of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Conley at Garrett, a few weeks earlier.

Some progress is being made in the probe of the two slayings, both of which are regarded as assassinations, but officers are unwilling to discuss details of what they have found.

Authorities express the belief that the two slayings are interlinked, that the death of James Clayton Conley, somehow, developed from the shotgun murder of the Tests have been made at the State Police laboratory of a shotgun officers suspect as having had a part in the Lawrence Conley shooting, but the findings, if any, have not been disclosed. Entered as second class matter June 18, 1927, at the postoffice at Prestonsburg, Kentucky, under the act of March 3, 1879.

It's Not Private Industry's 'Baby'

The federal government is moving toward a further waste of money. Here's how:

It has decreed that every able-bodied welfare recipient must register for employment, but it is depending upon private industry to supply them the jobs. Since most private employers already have a full load of employees, it follows that few jobs will open to these people who should be working, and so the registration of welfare recipients for jobs will be wasted time, effort and money.

We like the idea of requiring those who are able to work to register for employment. There is a dignity and honesty about work that will be good for those on relief, and it will be good for the country. But the federal government cannot, even with promised tax-breaks for those private businesses which would, or could, hire relief recipients, expect to make wage-earners of those who register.

This country may never be able to improve on the old WPA of the 1930's as a system for getting the able-bodied to work. The federal government is committed to a program of cleaning up the environment, and this is another daydream unless the government puts its own money into the cleanup. There is much to be donestreams to be unclogged of their foul debris, countrysides to be cleaned of their disgraceful accumulations of old cars, tires, paper, rags, beer bottles and cans—anything that thoughtless man has used and has no further need of.

The cost to individual communities of all this, plus sewer systems and sewage treatment plants, plus the cost of controlling acid flow from coal mines and scores of other violations of the land and water and air, is too much. The major portion of the expense must be borne by the national and state governments.

They have the work to do. There is a large work-force waiting in the persons of strong men who are now doing nothing to pay for their keep. Call it WPA or something more modern and sophisticated if they must, the principle will be unchanged: If the United States is going to demand that able-bodied relief recipients go to work, it is going to have to get realistic about the matter and supply the jobs and do the paying for the work that is done.

Editor, The Times:

The write-up about the East Point and Auxier vicinity was real interesting for me, because all the names are familiar to me, and several of my relatives were mentioned, also three of my childhood

You see, being 83 years old gives you a chance to remember old times and many, many old people who are now in the "great beyond."

Things have changed so much since I was young. I don't mean to find fault with the late method of teaching, but it seems to me it takes a long time for children to really learn to read, write and spell, these days. When I first started to school we had only five months in the school year, but we used that time mostly at "book learning." My first teacher was Dora Combs. Later, George Music was our teacher one year, then we had Sallie Badget two years. They were all fine people, and it pleases me to remember them and many other teachers I had through my girlhood days. I had my 83rd birthday, June 18. I look forward each week for the "Times" and news in and about Floyd county.

Editor, The Times:

The Volunteer Services Committee of the Kentucky Arthritis Foundation has undertaken a very ambitious program. I am requesting your cooperation in helping us promote this project during the month of July. The project consists of attempting to register as many of the 250,000 arthritis patients in the state of Kentucky as possible. I am sure you well know that many arthritis patients have an apathy toward the disease and to not seek medical attention at all or wait until it is too late.

The basic purpose of the registration is to get into the hands of each arthritis patient educational literature that can mean so much to them. If they read it thoroughly, specifically the part where it encourages them to see a doctor, something can be done for their arthritis even though there is not yet a cure. We have placed packets containing registration cards in highly trafficked areas throughout the counties of Kentucky, but realize there are many arthritis patients who will miss them or are incapacitated and will not see the form. A generous person has donated the use of a WATS line from July 5 through August 5, 1972. I am requesting you to call to the attention of your readers this project and listing the number of the WATS line, which is toll free. The WATS number is 1-800-292-3567. I would hope that you would see fit to participate in this project and remind your readers frequently of the number they can call during this time period.

Kentucky To Get $46.6 Million In New Appalachian Funds

Works Appropriations bill for the coming year, including $302 million for the Appalachian Regional Development program and the Appalachian Development Highway program.

Senator John Sherman Cooper, ranking Republican member of the Senate Public Works Committee and co-author with Senator Jennings Randolph (D-WVa) of the Appalachian Development Act, explained will be $46.6 million.

Senator Cooper said that it is anticipated that $34.3 million will be obligated in Kentucky during the next 12 months for developmental highways-$33.8 million for the Appalachian corridor system and $500,000 for access roads.

It is also roughly estimated that $6.6 million will be available in Kentucky for health demonstrations and child development, Senator Cooper stated. The health demonstrations program provides grants for planning, construction, equipment, and operation of demonstration health projects and primary health care systems in the 11 County Health Demonstration Area. A variety of health care projects are funded including ambulant care facilities, outpatient services, home health services, and other projects designed to make medical services available to the residents of Appalachia. Child development programs include infant and maternal care services, nutritional services, daycare and infant pre-school education, and parent education.

Senator Cooper said an estimated $2 million will be available for the vocational education program which provides funds for construction, equipment, operating

The U.S. Senate has passed the Public the estimated share of funds for Kentucky expenses, and educational demonstration

The Appalachian Development Act which Senator Cooper co-authored with Senator Randolph authorized a supplemental grants program to assist communities which have been unable to participate in regular construction grant-in-aidprograms because of the lack of local matching funds. The appropriations bill will provide an estimated $2.7 million for this program in Kentucky over the next 12

About $400,000 will be available for the administrative expenses of local development districts and for demonstrations in the program areas of environment, education, youth manpower and veterans, Senator Cooper explained. Under a special provision in the bill, $1 million will be provided for the Pikeville, Kentucky Model Cities Program. These funds will implement the comprehensive undertaking to construct an "open cut" in the hills at Pikeville to rechannel the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River and provide for the relocation of U.S. Route 23 and the C & O Railway. Portions of the existing channel of Levisa Fork would be filled creating several hundred acres of land ideally suited for industrial, commercial, residentail and civic development.

"Back to Childhood" being entertained to join in on choruses or

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.

In early November, 1969, I attended the annual fall meeting of the Tennessee Folklore Society, held at Cookeville that year. This event is always a great occasion for us folklorists, but somehow the program this year took me back more completely to certain phases of my childhood than has any recent folklore occasion. This was particularly true with the music.

When I was a small boy, one of our neighbors, the village druggist, died. His two younger daughters spent several years in the Masonic Orphan's Home, since our neighbor was a member of the Masonic order. The mother and our nearest neighbor, who was another daughter, regretted that they had to give up the two girls but were highly pleased with the way the home took care of them. Each summer the girls would come back home for a visit to their mother and sister. The younger of the two was as nearly a natural-born musician as I have ever seen. Quite obviously, this being in a home where girls of all sorts lived gave her a chance to develop her ability to sing and to play on the simple harp that someone gave her as a present. And we other children gave her plenty to do when she came home, for we wanted to learn her songs and to hear her sing and play them.

In this way I learned probably 25 of the songs that have reappeared on many a program since I took up the study of folklore. The recent meeting at Cookeville had eight or ten of our neighbor girl's reperatory, such as "The Letter Edged in Black," "Little Rosewood Casket," and similar songs we used to sing. Fortunately, there were a good many folklore students who had had similar experiences, and we all enjoyed the well-rendered program. The most interesting feature of it was that the singers were young people, some of them still in the teens, but thoroughly in tune with the sentiments of the old-time singings that we older ones had known and been a part of.

As has happened so many times lately, I was the oldest person present at the programs, but I found that the next three generations got a great thrill out of my songs, that is, the ones I knew back in the 1890's. Some of the audience had been raised in big-city areas but had fortunately had a grandfather or old-maid great-aunt that knew and sang the songs of three quarters of a century ago. Every one I talked to enjoyed, as I did, the simplicity of the music and the naturalness of the singing. The auto harp, the banjo, the guitar, the fiddle-no matter which or how many helped in the music-seemed in every way appropriate. There was no injection of mannerisms into the singing or the simple acting. The singers might just as well have been sitting around a roaring wood fire when visitors had come in to sit till bedtime.

The folklorists, at least, like best the simplicity of older singing. Efforts to "jazz it up" at once irritate nerves that grew up attuned to intense, almost reverent, rendering of ballads and songs. At Fidelity it would have been almost as irreverent to make comedy with or about our traditional or semi-traditional songs as to laugh at a prayer or a sermon. You see, old-time singing was an art, a ritual, if you please, not commercialized, not trying to attract attention by gadgets and stage play. Often the singer requested the group of people

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

The Indians, Children of Nature

were living here when America was first discovered by white men. These had roamed the vast, primeval forests for thousands of years; they loved the land and lived off it. They knew nature as few whites can ever know it.

These original tribes were not weaklings by any means and had never succumbed to the diseases and "firewater" of the whites. But they were destined to be corrupted by the white man's diseases and manner of life. In our modern civilization, over 30,000 different diseases are known and treated by doctors, but the primitive Indians had to deal with a scant number-about 87 different kinds of ailments, which they knew how to treat and overcome by their many herb remedies and tonics.

These aborigines were not "savages," as we often think of them; they didn't become wild savages until after being despoiled by the whites, robbed of their hunting grounds and betrayed by the greedy and cruel Spaniards.

The Indian braves of those days were strong, and they scorned all manner of physical weakness. Some could outrun a fleet-footed buck deer and catch it; they could swim across almost any large stream or lake. They held their ceremonial dances and could beat any endurance record of modern times by dancing for weeks at the time. For their medicines they used herb tonics and all kinds of wild herbs and roots as food. Their medicine men were welltrained in the healing arts and had their own "apothecary's shop," where they prepared their medicines. The Indian doctor was chosen for his ability and wisdom in dealing with all kinds of ailments and accidents. The wisdom in using medicines from nature to heal others was handed down from one medicine man to the next. For certain diseases the medicine man applied steam baths to free the body of poisons; he also recommended fasting on

The names of many of our modern plants are traced back to the Indians. We have plants called "squaw root," "Indian tobacco," "Indian hemp," "Indian arrowwood," and many more; we also have trees that were named by the Indians: "sassafras," "hickory," "Osage orange" and others.

Before the coming of the greedy whites, the Indians enjoyed their wild, free existence in the land called America; they hunted, fished, held their ceremonial dances and enjoyed the wonders of Nature. They had pure water to drink, which was kept clean and sparkling by the laws of nature. They had pure air to breathe-it had never known pollution as it does today; they had virgin soil in which to grow their crops and they never used commercial fertilizers. Sometimes they would bury a dead fish when they planted a hill of corn, so that its elements could pass on to the corn and make it more vigorous. The fish they ate were not contaminated by mercury or other poisons; their foods were obtained form the good earth and were rich in vitamins and minerals. They made their soaps and shampoos from the leaves of Yucca lilies and the bark of the Quillaja shrub. They made their canoes from birch bark and their snowshoes from the hide of buffalo.

The Indians were the highly favored children of Mother Nature; they respected Nature and her laws; they believed in the "Great Spirit" whom they called Manitou, and they had many beautiful legends, some of which were put down in poetry by Longfellow in his lengthy poem, "Hiawatha." Some of the would-be "reformers" and "missionaries" who came to America to uplift the "poor Indian", for sook their mission and joined the Indian tribes in order to learn their secrets of life and easy living. The Indians taught these many valuable secrets of their healing arts. One writer who has studied the ways of the Indians once said: "If we had treated these people kindly and made friends of them, they could have given us the secrets of their physical vigor and long-lasting

I write herein of the wild Indians who endurance. They could have helped us create a fine literature, for they were marvelous in the beauty of their face, in their poetic thoughts, and in their marvelous imagery, such as the whites have > never known. Their souls were the souls of

> The Indians also believed in a life after death, and some of the tribes buried gun and dog with a brave who had passed on, so that he could have these in his "Happy Hunting Ground."

From many of their foods the Indians also got some of their best medicines. Take Indian corn, which Linnaeus named Zea Mays, or maize; the Indians knew how to make medicine from the corn silks-the female parts of the flower. They brewed "corn-silk tea" and used it to cure hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, bed-wetting in children. It has been determined that corn silk is rich in Vitamin K. The Indians also used corn silk mixed with corn oil for an ointment to heal ulcers and wounds.

It is said that there are more than 100,000 different kinds of medical preparations for treating man's 30,000 or more diseases. Of these, at least 30 per cent use plants to make the medicine; the rest use plants mixed with chemicals of various kinds. The Indians knew most of these secrets and taught them to the whites. They taught the whites how to make an antiseptic eyewash from the roots of Indian pipe, a pretty saprophyte common in the woods of our region. They taught them how to make sugar from the roots of milkweed plants; also how to make salt from the ashes of hardwood sticks. They taught them how to make "nut bread" from acorns and how to leach out the bitter tannic acid with water. They taught them how to cure the flux with the juice of ripe balckberries; and they told them of the value of eating cranberries in the fall to fortify the blood and liver against the ravages of winter colds.

High on the dry, acid spurs of our region there grow large colonies of a beautiful fern called "bracken." The Indians taught the whites how to dig up this fern's starch rooot-stocks to boil and eat. This helped to expel all intestinal worms, including the tapeworm. Our lovely bracken, a large, knee-high branching fern, dies out in the first frosts but comes back strong in the spring. Our bloodroot, a beautiful harbinger of spring, was one of the best loved plants of the Indians; they used its bloodred juice to paint their faces, perhaps in a show of vanity; they called the plant "red puccoon." The roots taste quite bitter and were used by the Indians for a spring tonic and for curing croup and asthma. They were also used to stimulate the action of a torpid liver.

Which Signify?

I have the word of Edgar Stephens that the longest word in the English language is "floccipaucinihilipilification." This word, it is said, was used but one time and then by Sir Walter Scott in one of his less lucid moments, and it means (perhaps), "the action or habit of estimating as worthless." Or something.

There are those who can glibly, and with some pride, rattle off "pneumonoconiosis," the medical term for what we of the hoi polloi prefer to call "black lung." But let them try this, which means the same thing, on their jew's harp: "pneumonoultramiscroscopicsilicovolcanoconiosis."

The same Mr. Stephens, for lack of something better to do, reminds me that the longest word in an English classic occurs in Shakespeare's "Love's Labour's Lost." and that it strings out to this distance and effect: "honorificabilitudinitatibus." Which means?

Health Commissioner Dr. William P. McElwain and Public Safety Commissioner W. O. Newman say they plan to take a closer look into the need for stricter safety and sanitation controls for summer youth camps in Kentucky. The state now has no laws covering such camps, but does have health regulations.

State Able-Bodied Recipients Of Welfare To Register

able-bodied welfare recipients to sign up for work or job training. The law also offers tax incentives to business firms to induce them to offer jobs to welfare recipients.

Mrs. Huecker said she hopes more jobs will be developed in smaller industries because of the tax-incentive inducement. "It will depend on how many slots can be developed for individuals with nominal skills," she said.

She said the department will "hone up its own publicity campaign" for better understanding of the tax-incentive plan.

Information about the new law now is being sent to the department's local offices. Under the federal law, lists of those who registered will be turned over by welfare offices to local employment service offices, which will be responsible for interviewing the recipients and finding jobs for them or assigning them to job training.

Kentucky has had a similar job-finding and 14 grandchildren.

Whatsoever Things

By DONALD E.

The Carpenter from Nazareth had about Him some very definite human qualities, for the very simple reason that He was very definitely human. Two of these qualities stand out. With them life is exciting. Without them, life can hardly be worth the effort of living.

The first quality which the Galilean had, and which we need, is that in every bad situation He saw some good. Things must never get so dark that we cannot still see the light needed for living. It was a bad situation that Christ saw the tax-collector Matthew in. But Jesus saw the good in Matthew, the man. It was a bad situation when Peter ran out on his Lord. But Jesus saw the good in Peter-even the faithfulness and steadfastness. Jesus even nicknamed him The Rock! The cross was a bad situation-man's highest contempt of God. But Jesus saw the good which would come from it.

The second quality of Jesus which you and I need is this-in every problem He saw a possibility. In every problem He faced, Jesus sought and found some possibility through which He could bring honor to His Father. In traveling through Samaria—a country avoided by the Jews-He used the occasion for the possibility of revealing who He was to a sinful Samaritan woman at Jacob's well. Faced with the problem of Discussion also included plans for road worried disciples on the Sea of Galilee in a storm, He found a possibility to show the power and concern of God.

The secret here is that we strive to be like Christ. In every bad situation we need to look for the good. If we look for the good we will find it. If we look for the bad, or look to find fault, we will find that. Thoro Harris once wrote: "Look for the beautiful, seek to find the true."

No person can honestly call himself a follower of the Galilean who continually looks for only what is wrong. Jesus was a positivist who believed in the power, and the goodness, and the concern of God. He believed in a God who could and would help in every situation.

We also need to look for the possibilities in every problem. John Wesley, with the church doors of England closed to him, turned reluctantly to preaching in the open air. It opened a whole new exciting and extremely rewarding way of life to him. There is an old saying which contains much truth: "Every adversity hides a possibility."

We can actually turn bad problems into good possibilities. "Pilgrim's Progress" was written in Bedford jail where John Bunyan was a prisoner because he preached for religious toleration and freedom. "Many men owe the grandeur of their lives to their tremendous difficulties." wrote the famous preacher, Charles

Occasionally, when our vision is blurred by problems, we cannot see sights which at other times are so clear. When this happens, we need more than ever to remember that the oyster turns into pearl the sand which annoys it.

In every bad situation, look for the good. In every problem, seek the possibility. If you will do these things they will help you live life and love it.

Pike Grand Jury Hits Silt Dams

A Pike county grand jury Friday termed the new Kentucky-ordered coal silt dams "potentially hazardous" and said the larger basins would present "grave dangers" when abandoned.

The grand jury, called to look into strip mining silt dams and slag pile structures in the county, also recommended:

That the appropriate state and federal agencies retain jurisdiction and control of coal companies in the area until after mining has ceased to assure abandoned dams and basins are made safe.

That the state assign a fulltime staff member to Pikeville to handle emergency complaints concerning waste impoundments and provide immediate action on such complaints.

Commission Acts To Save Bobcat

The Fish and Wildlife Commission last week adopted a policy of "preventive medicine" in regard to the bobcat and accorded the "cat complete protection from hunters in an effort to prevent this "uncommon" animal from becoming an endangered one in Kentucky.

A secretive, solitary animal, the bobcat is seldom, if ever, seen by most Kentuckians and until now has been fair game for hunters during legal open seasons.

The Commission's action, Game Management Director Joe Bruna said, was due to the fact that the extensive woodland cover which the bobcat prefers is fast diminishing in Kentucky resulting in a decrease in the bobcat population on a statewide basis. Good numbers, however, are still found in certain areas particularly in West Kentucky.

"Also," Bruna added, "the bobcat is a spectacular animal and is often killed unnecessarily because of mistaken fears for safety of livestock or human life."

"Seeing a bobcat in the wild," Bruna said, "is an extraordinary experience that we want to insure future generations."

2-Cents-a-Gallon Gasoline Tax Added

Kentucky's 2-cents-per-gallon increase in gasoline tax became effective last Friday midnight.

Although the motorist will pay the increased tax at the service-station pump, the state collects gasoline tax from wholesale dealers. This means service stations currently have on hand gasoline taxed at the old 7-cents-per-gallon rate when it was withdrawn from wholesalers' tanks, but on which 9 cents will be charged to the public.

To prevent a 2-cent profit to the service stations, the state Revenue Department was authorized by law to make a one-time collection of the added 2-cent tax from service stations on gasoline on hand as of midnight.

Maurice Carpenter, executive assistant to the revenue commissioner, said instructions and reporting forms have been sent to service stations and are being distributed through wholesalers to large industrial and commercial users who also may have fuel taxed at the old rate on hand.

The 2-cent increase was proposed by Gov. Wendell Ford and approved by the 1972 legislature to inject an additional $33.7 million a year into the state Highway Department, which operates on gasoline tax and other road-fund revenue.

Without an increase, the Highway Department was headed for financial trouble, primarily because of two factors: 1. The last $30 million from the $139 million highway bond issue voted in 1965 was obligated during the fiscal year ending today for matching federal interstate and Appalachian construction funds.

2. Large debt payments on toll roads built by former Gov. Louie B. Nunn start coming due in the new fiscal year, increasing the Highway Department's debt load by $12.4

The tax-increase bill also directed that, a year from now, in fiscal 1973-74, one-half cent of motor-fuels tax revenue will go for road projects in urban areas of 2,500 population or more.

The bill also moved up the reporting date for motor-fuels taxes from the 30th to the 25th of the month. This will provide the Highway Department a one-time, $7.3million "windfall" in fiscal 1972-73 because there will be 13 reporting periods included in the years' receipts.

Four-Day Weekend Traffic Impressive

By Dave Thompson FRANKFORT, Ky .- After reviewing traffic figures collected from the state's eight toll roads for the four-day July 4 weekend, Highway Department officials are repeating the phrase, "an outstanding weekend," in much the manner they did following the Memorial Day holiday.

For the period from 6 p.m., June 30, to midnight, July 4, the state's toll roads carried 741,397 vehicles, compared with 634,385 vehicles using the system over the three-day Memorial Day weekend. Although this figure (an average of 185,349 vehicles daily) may not be impressive, it becomes somewhat more so when you consider that only two of the eight roads registered less than 22,900 cars and four of them showed increases ranging The biggest gain was on the Kentucky

Turnpike, with 390,371 vehicles counted for the four-day July 4 period compared with 330,742 for Memorial Day holiday. Other parkways covered by the traffic count were: Western Kentucky (100,393 vehicles); Blue Grass (91,984); Mountain

(84,700); Purchase (34,874); and Pennyrile (22,909)The Daniel Boone Parkway, between Manchester and London, had 7616 vehicles over July 4 and the Audubon Parkway

figure was 8550. Highway officials said the total vehicle mileage for the July 4 weekend was 26,845,890, almost three times the total mileage for Memorial Day.

The Kentucky highway death rate when Gov. Wendell Ford launched a stepped-up safety campaign on May 22 was 20.6 per cent higher than on the same day in 1971. But, thanks to the "no fatality" record on the toll system for the last two multiday weekends, the rate now is only slightly above 15 per cent higher. Of the 13 accidents reported over the July 4 holiday, 11 occurred on the Kentucky Turnpike, one on the Mountain Parkway and one on the Blue Grass Parkway. All 20 injuries sustained in the accidents occurred on the Kentucky Turnpike.

Court Declines Ky. Welfare Case

The U.S. Supreme Court has declined to hear a plea that the state be required to grant all welfare recipients a hearingwhether requested or not-before cutting benefits without an evidentiary hearing unless the hearing was requested, the Circuit Court also backed the state in stopping benefits after such a hearing. Wilson's lawyers contended that, though most welfare recipients do not understand the legalities involved in objecting to discontinuance of their benefits or in requesting a hearing, all would "understand a simple written statement of proposed termination...and notice of a fair

The appeal was filed by Clinton Countian Fred E. Wilson and the Louisville Legal Aid Society after the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati rejected a similar suit last February.

Upholding Kentucky's right to terminate hearing." The state maintained that "due process does not require the conduct of a hearing unless it is in some manner, formally or informally, indicated by the recipient that he desires to be heard.' Continuing payments until all appeals, judicial and administrative, have been exhausted, the state argued, would be exorbitant.

Commissioner Damon Harrison says it would be "absolutely ruinous" for Kentucky to adopt a policy of slowing down 1t. industrial growth.

After the death of Pop Stoneman, the group stayed together and continued their success on special TV appearances, stage shows and a string of hit records.

Sets Goal of $200 To Aid Flood Areas

In the wake of the devastation caused by flood at Rapid City, S. D., the American Red Cross has launched a $5 million fund campaign to assist the approximately 6,000 families who were its victims.

Last week, unprecedented damage was created by heavy rains in the East, with Pennsylvania, New York and other states suffering their greatest recorded losses in lives and property damage.

How much the Red Cross will undertake to assist the victims of this latest disaster is not yet known, but Floyd Chapter of the Red Cross has set a goal of $200 for the assistance of victims of both disasters, it was announced Monday by Ella Neil White, executive secretary.

Floyd Red Cross Chapter raised $800 for the relief of victims of the Buffalo Creek, W. Va. dam disaster, and Miss White said she is hopeful that the people of the county will be generous in their help for these later disaster victims.

Program Provides Delinquents Foster Home Supervision

By Frank Coots leaving an institution except supervision in cut down on commitment."

Since home life was often partially responsible for the child's behavior in the they act out to get it." He said a foster home first place, this was not totally satisfactory. So Child Welfare initiated its Hard to Place Project, a program designed to insure a delinquent adequate supervision in a foster home setting. Funded with grants from the Kentucky Crime Commission and the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the Hard to Place Project currently has 100 children placed in foster care. Recently the project expanded its scope to include delinquents who have not been committed to an institution.

He explained, "A lot of these kids suffer from indifference. They need attention and can provide the attention the youth requires, thereby eliminating the child's need for socially unacceptable attentiongetting devices.

Anderson said the program appears to be quite successful. The recidivism, or rate of return to an institution, has been less than half the norm, he said, but added that the program has not been operational long enough to absolutely determine such a rate.

Foster parents who agree to accept a delinquent are paid a little more than foster parents who accept a child who is Ralph Anderson, the project's coor- dependent, and an effort is made to place the child in a community similar to his own.

But Anderson said he felt it is better to place a youth outside his community of origin so the details of his past are not common knowledge among his associates.

Bicycling Provides Leisurely View Of Countryside in Kentucky

By Pat Carr

Frankfort, Ky.-"Bicycling evokes this wonderful people thing."

Dr. Grace Donnelly, president of the Bluegrass Wheelmen Club of Lexington, "can't explain it, but it's happening."

In the midst of the third bicycling craze to sweep the country in the past century, riders are learning more about their neighborhoods, the surrounding countryside, and its people, in addition to getting beneficial exercise.

Dr. Donnelly, assistant professor of cell biology at the University of Kentucky, says that acceptance of bicycle riders by people she has met "in country stores and little crossroad communities" while touring by bicycle "has been fantastic.

"You get to meet the people in a way you never could if you were traveling by car," she said. "People will ask you how far you've ridden by bike. They'll tell you the history of the town. It's just a marvelous feeling."

But for her and many of the 75 million bike riders in America today, "the real thing is pleasure.

"The pleasures of riding are great—the good feeling of being on your own and selfsufficient," she said. "And you see things that you just never see in a car."

The bicycle is rapidly catching on as an alternative form of transportation, as the growing ecological awareness focuses the attention of many on finding a simple, convenient, organically fueled means of

"Few motorists realize that the bike is a vehicle and it has a right to be on the road," Dr. Donnelly said. "The bicycle has the same rights and responsibilities as the automobile."

Many members of the Bluegrass Wheelmen feel that there is a need for driver education about bicycles, and cyclist education about traffic. The group is also interested in developing bikeways and trails in Kentucky. Federal grants are being sought for this project.

"Bicycling is better in Kentucky, especially in the Bluegrass area, than anywhere I've ever been," said Dr. Donnelly. She has lived in New England, New York, California and Florida.

She feels that the terrain, climate, scenery, and well-paved network of back roads make cycling in Kentucky unique.

"The gently rolling terrain makes cycling interesting without being overly strenuous," she said. "And the lightly traveled, well-paved back roads which interconnect make it possible to do an unlimited number of different-length trips in a small area."

Because of Kentucky's relatively mild climate, the Bluegrass Wheelmen have been able to maintain a year-round schedule of events. The club sponsors "family night" rides on Thursday evenings in three locations, and plans at least one tour each weekend.

They have toured several horse farms, Frankfort, the Red River Gorge, and covered bridges in Fleming and Bath counties by bike. An overnight trip to Shakertown is planned.

Bicycle touring is not an athletic contest, training program or anything of that sort," Dr. Donnelly said, "but for the most part it is a case of people who are enjoying the countryside.

"Most frequently a trip will be designed to include a historic or scenic spot or some activity such as the Arts and Crafts Festival which was in Berea."

Although "bicycling with other people is fun, an organization isn't required," she

"One reason bicycling has caught on is because it is something you can do starting from your own back yard," Dr. Donnelly said. "You can do it by yourself on the spur of the moment and get as much or as little exercise as you want."

Bicycle touring does not require strenuous training. "Any healthy adult can become capable of going on a tour of 20 or 30 miles within a month," she said. "The trick is to start riding ten minutes a day, and then gradually increase your time on the bicycle.

"If you're interested in bicycling, the thing to do is get out and ride."

Higher Strip Mine Fees In Effect

The Kentucky attorney general's office says new, higher strip-mining fees should be charged for permits issued after June 16, even if they were applied for before that

The opinion, requested by acting Reclamation Director Buddy A. Beach, said, however, that if any fees for applications had been accepted before June 16 and the permits were issued after that date, no increase should be charged.

Authorized by the 1972 General Assembly, the new fees became law June 16. They raised the basic strip mine permit fee from $50 to $150 and the acreage fee from $25 to $35.

The new scale also raises the required bond from a minimum of $100 to $200, and the maximum from $500 to $1000.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Jackson D. Guerrant, who wrote the opinion, noted that permit applications take time and that some applications taken before June 16 might not be granted until after that date, and that the new fees should apply.
