Fate of Contract Still in Doubt

Union Members In Study Here Of Labor Pact

A gathering of miners and union representatives which almost filled the circuit courtroom here heard last Saturday the proposed coal contract read and explained, article by article, prior to the beginning the next day of miners' balloting on acceptance or rejection of the pact.

Some balloting was done Sunday. Monday's snow cut into the voting, and Arnold Miller, UMWA president, extended till Tuesday the time for testing the individual miners' sentiments. If the proposed pact is approved, the miners could be back at work next week. If it is rejected, the strike could continue for weeks. Ratification of the contract as it now stands is no certainty. It has run into stiff opposition in West Virginia and Ohio and in some Kentucky local unions. One veteran miner at last Saturday's meeting here remarked, "I believe District 30 will approve it. If it doesn't, it sure won't pass anywhere else."

The agreement calls for a 64 per cent increase in wages and benefits over a three-year period, and Miller terms it the best contract any union has negotiated. One of the objections voiced by union members is that the proposed contract has no provision for a right to strike over local grievances. (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Jaycees To Turn Interest Toward

All the County

Announcing new guidelines for Jaycee participation in community affairs for the coming year, Thomas Hereford, III, president of the Floyd County Junior Chamber of Commerce said this week there will be a shifting of Jaycee activity from the Prestonsburg area to other areas in the county. He explained that this does not mean that the Jaycees are deserting Prestonsburg or its needs, but the plan is to focus on the problems and the needs in the county where there are few resources to combat these problems.

"Programs that are now in the planning stage," Mr. Hereford continued, "include projects planned for Auxier, Spradlin Branch and Dwale." Mr. Hereford also issued an invitation to residents of the many communities throughout the county to send suggestions to the Jaycees on the needs of their respective communities so that the Jaycees can plan their programs to encompass these areas. Any correspondence may be directed to Thomas Hereford, III, Rt. 5 Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653 or Robert Darrell Castle, secretary of the Jaycees, Box 233, Auxier, Kentucky 41602. Each suggestion will be considered promptly and will be acted on as time and money permit. Other Jaycee programs that are now in

This Town . . . That World

With Lenna Moore in dry dock for repairs and Watt Hale hibernating, I am far from abreast the latest in droll stories and other earth-shaking matters.

REASSURANCE OF A SORT

The public prints tell us that pawnbrokers are doing a land-office business in some parts, these days, what with inflation catching up with folks who haven't learned to do without (and who has?). They run short of cash and pay a surreptitious visit to ye olde pawnshop and there leave in hock even valued heirlooms. One poor soul was so desperate, he pawned the gold fillings in

One of the stories told of such ventures has a sad sort of twist to it. A pawnbroker named Jim Ellis says it actually happened. This woman had pawned her diamond ring for enough cash to pay for a dress she didn't want her husband know she'd bought. In due time she was back to redeem the ring.

"He'd kill me if he knew I had pawned this ring," the woman told the pawnbroker. "It was a gift from him, and I hate to do things like this, we have always been honest with each other."

The broker reassured the woman about her husband killing her. "The diamond is just glass," he told her.

That's one part of the inflation story. There are others. Another story says they aren't jailing cattle rustlers, these days, the price of feed being what it is. They're after them with a butterfly net.

THE CATTLE-KILLERS

Now I learn that those cattle you and I saw being killed while the TV cameras ground didn't belong to real ranchers. My source of information is one of the most trusted, and he writes:

Revenue Dept. County Mapping Slated in April

The Kentucky Department of Revenue will begin next April a work which will result in the complete mapping of Floyd county for tax purposes, it was announced this week by Lovel Hall county property evaluation administrator (tax commissioner)

The work will begin with aerial photography, this to be followed by visits to each piece of property, the drawing of boundary lines for each plot of real estate and photographs of all buildings and improvements.

Mr. Hall said the work will require from 18 months to two years and will cost more than $100,000. In addition to mapping and photographing property, those involved in the program will also set up a filing and indexing system to facilitate the recording of changing ownerships and values.

The only expense the program will be to the county is office space and telephone facilities, Hall said. County Judge Henry Stumbo said the county will do its part. "If we can't find office space in the courthouse, we'll rent space."

The mapping work will be done in response to a law enacted by the General Assembly requiring such a program to be completed in every county of the state by

Court of Inquiry In Deaths of 2 Held Doubtful

The twice-postponed court of inquiry slated in the slayings of Phillip Neeley and Earl Vanderpool, Jr. the night of Nov. 24 in a fight on Salt Lick Creek, near Hueysville, by State Trooper Roy Boleyn may not be held at all.

It was indicated this week that statements from witnesses for the officer are pretty well complete and that the further interrogation of witnesses in a formal court hearing would perhaps serve no valid purpose.

The court of inquiry was originally scheduled last Friday, but a newly employed attorney for the Neeley and Vanderpool families asked a day's continuance for preparation. Next day, the hearing was ready to begin when word arrived that Trooper Boleyn's wife had been killed in an auto wreck on the Mountain Parkway, near here.

The gathering at the courthouse Saturday for the court of inquiry was enlivened by an attack on Trooper Boleyn by Mrs. Helen Buntello, sister of Phillip Neeley. Mrs. Buntello was named in an assault and battery warrant charging her with scratching Boleyn about the face and threatening "to scratch his eyes out."

Shortly afterward, Henry Boleyn, of Hueysville, father of the trooper, was named in an assault and battery warrant by Charles Vanderpool, who accused Boleyn of striking Mrs. Buntello on her back with his fist.

Meanwhile, Trooper Boleyn remains under $5000 bond required by Magistrate Kenneth Roberts for his answer to possible grand jury action in January. The bond was asked on a murder warrant issued by the Magistrate on the affidavit of Earl Vanderpool, Sr., father of one of the fight victims.

Three Standing Trial Acquitted By Juries Here

All three defendants who have taken their cases to decision by jury at the current term of circuit court have won acquittals.

But during the term, which has been extended from November, 12 defendants have entered guilty pleas and five have received pen sentences.

Defendants winning acquittals were Timothy Miller, charged with breaking and entering, grand larceny and knowingly receiving stolen property; Terry Lykins, possessing liquor; Piggy Hall Collins, grand larceny and knowingly receiving receiving stolen property.

Drawing pen terms were Dawson Deel (Deal), knowingly receiving stolen property, one year; Arnold Ray Gunnels, knowingly receiving stolen property, one year, sentence later probated; Denver Holbrook and Gary Little, same offense, one year each (charges of grand larceny and breaking and entering dismissed against them; trial of Reon Slone, who had been jointly indicted with them, set for Dec. 12); Carl D. 2 Counties Feel Effect of Blast; Beaver Area Hit

An estimated 14,000 persons in Floyd and Johnson counties were affected by loss of natural gas last Tuesday night and until late Wednesday afternoon as the result of an explosion which destroyed a portion of a 12-inch pipeline and broke a 10-inch main line leading from the Dwale compressor station of the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company. The larger line delivers gas to the Columbia Gas System, and the rupture of the 10-inch line shut off the gas supply to Prestonsburg, Paintsville and the Johnson County Gas System and Mountain Utilities, Inc. which serve rural Johnson county.

The explosion, the ninth since members of Local 3-510, Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, went on strike Oct. 16, hit hospitals, schools, nursing homes and public offices at a time when the temperature was reported in the low 20's.

The OCAW local in an advertisement this week denied responsibility for the explosion and said the gas company could have restored service quickly by taking advantage of a "standby" supply that is available from the Columbia System. An effort to reach gas company officials here and at Ashland for a response to this charge failed Monday.

The Dwale explosion followed by a few hours a hearing in the Floyd circuit court of the company's petition for temporary injunction restraining workers from interfering with the gas company's operations. The restraining order was

Wife of Trooper, One Of 2 Wreck Victims

A two-car wreck on the Mountain Parkway near the Floyd-Magoffin county line Saturday morning claimed the lives of two women and left one person injured.

Mrs. Drucilla Boleyn, 22, of Salyersville, and Mrs. Olive Justice, 65, of Covington, Ky., were fatally injured when the car driven by Mrs. Boleyn, travelling east, apparently slid sidewise on an icy bridge and was struck by a car headed in the opposite direction in which Mrs. Justice was a passenger. Mrs. Boleyn was almost instantly killed and rescue workers worked more than an hour to pry the wreckage from the body. Mrs. Justice died a few hours later at Highlands Regional Medical Center here. The driver of the car in which Mrs.

Justice was killed, James Burdsal, of Pikeville, a nephew of Mrs. Justice, received minor injuries, while his wife, Elsie, was in satisfactory condition Saturday at Highlands Regional Medical Center with several broken bones.

Mrs. Boleyn was driving alone, en route to Prestonsburg to attend the examining trial of her husband, Roy Boleyn, state police trooper involved in the Nov. 24 shooting near Hueysville in which two Salt Lick residents were killed. State Trooper Boleyn, also en route to the hearing here, was said to have been in one of the first cars to arrive at the scene of the tragic accident.

Mrs. Boleyn, a daughter of Kelly and Nerva Lawson Chaffins, of Garrett, was born at Martin, December 31, 1951 and at the time of her death was employed by the U.S. Shoe Corporation here. Besides her husband, she leaves a brother, Bobby Darrell Chaffins, of Harold, and two sisters, Mrs. Sherrill Manns, of Hueysville, and Miss Tammy Denecise, at

Funeral rites were conducted Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the home of her parents. Burial was made in the Chaffins cemetery, near Mousie, under the direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral

Mrs. Justice, a native of Davy, West Virginia, was a daughter of the late William and Evelyn Williams Crothers. A retired employee of Western Union, she was preceded in death by her husband, William S. Justice. Survivors include two brothers, William Crothers, Jackson, Ohio, and Danny Crothers, of Douglas, Arizona.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. from the Jones-Preston Funeral Home chapel, Paintsville, with the Rev. Charles E. Milam officiating. Burial was made in Highland Memorial Park, Staffordsville.

The bridge across Middle Creek, which linked West Prestonsburg with the old county road leading toward Prestonsburg in one direction and to Spurlock and other sections of the Middle Creek Valley in the other, was nearing completion when this photo was snapped in the early 1900's. The men shown "inspecting the job" are not identified.

There were snowflakes in the Commonwealth on Oct. 19, but Eastern Kentuckians recall that date in 1967 when "there was a right smart frost." That was nothing to compare, however, with one Oct. 9 many years ago that brought two inches of snow to the hills.

But the people of Morgan county take all this stoically. As C. M. Peyton says, "I've planted corn and it snowin' and I've cut corn and it snowin'."

In the winter of 1966, a writer for the Lewis County Herald stated, "Man, oh, man! Old-timers who tell of old-fashioned winters of their childhood got to give the present generation a demonstration of what they were like..." He was referring to a blizzard that swept in at early dawn, piling up to 10 inches of snow through the county. But Lewis county and much of northeastern Kentucky had experienced a bad blizzard in 1951, and Vanceburg once recorded a low of -30 degrees in 1890.

There was a story once that old-timers became numbed with the cold before they could get their clothes on. Winters were so bad that hotel guests passed up breakfast and refused to get out of bed till the weather had moderated some.

Lawrence countians remember the winter of 1918-'19 as particularly cold. A big freeze hung around for a long time, causing rivers, creeks and ponds to freeze. Farmers had to break the ice each day for their stock to have drinking water. One family was not prepared for the freeze. When their cattle rushed to the ice, one cow fell into the pond. Neighbors and a section had from a train crew used ropes to rescue the animal.

In 1905, Mason countians recount that the Ohio River had so much ice on it the ferry couldn't operate. Ice was so thick on the river during the winters of 1913 and 1917 that automobiles crossed on it from Boyd county, Kentucky to Lawrence county, Ohio.

As can be seen, one of the most interesting characteristics of Kentucky is its weather. With extra seasons like Indian Summer and Dogwood Winter interspersed throughout the year, the Commonwealth can never be described as monotonous.

"Kentucky is like a beautiful woman," commented one observer. "She is lively and capricious in spring, full-blossomed in summer, a bit flirty in autumn dress, but winter—in winter she can be anything, wrapped in a soft ermine stole, running with the wind, moaning or laughing, or warm and cuddly."

And upredictable, too.
On Oct. 20, 1929, 20 inches of snow fell in parts of Kentucky. In 1899, there was such extreme cold that trees exploded like cannon shots in mountain forests. Even earlier, on May 20, 1892, Kentuckians were presented with six inches of snow.

Don't be dismayed by the weather forecasters who count foggy mornings in deep summer or measure the fur on wooly worm's backs to predict the number of snows. It might not be so.

The old-timers were used to at least one good freeze a year. So, take a tip from them: Pop some corn, roast apples, crack nuts and make, a few platters of fudge. Above all, enjoy the cold spell while it's here. It might not come again for 10 years.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

The Wheelwright Woman's Club held its November meeting in the clubroom. The president, Alma Souleyrette, presided. Virginia Hagans led in the Club Collect and the Pledge to the Flag. Myra Salisbury gave the treasurer's report.

Alma Salisbury discussed the Seventh district meeting. Jewel Little and Mary Ellen Wilson also attended that meeting. Some of the members present worked on candleholders and discussed plans for other decorations to be made.

Refreshments were served by Jimmy
Lou Johnson and Judy Meade to Alma
Souleyrette, Margot Lee, Myra
Salisbury, Betty Mullins, Ruth Daniels and Virginia Hagans.

In April, 1899, the Rev. Thomas Staggs, a recent convert to the Mormon faith, left Lewis county as an advance to a county colony expected to leave for Utah.

City Officials Praise Employees, Elliott Glass

While it is the duty of our employees in the City Utilities to render service to our consumers, we want to call to the public's attention the excellent services they rendered to the people of Prestonsburg during our recent gas cut-off.

No only did they work around the clock, in very cold weather, to restore gas service to the city but they handled the situation in an excellent manner. There was no panic, every precaution was taken to prevent explosions in our homes; also, many customers had to call on them to relight their furnances and water tanks, which they did cheerfully.

This kind of work from Bill Harvey
Howard and his crew, working as a team, rendered an excellent service that we know our citizens appreciated very

On behalf of the citizens of Prestonsburg, we would like to use your newspaper to convey our deep appreciation to Ted Nairn and the Elliott Glass and Electric Company for their help during our natural gas crisis.

Only a small number of experienced men are now employed by the City Utilities Commission and we were facing a dangerous situation until Mr. Nairn volunteered his full staff of experienced people to assist in turning off all meters and purging the lines of air, and then helped to turn the meters back on and assist people to relight their pilot lights and furnances.

Without their help we could have had some serious accidents; and it would have been many more hours before services could have been restored. This service was rendered to our citizens without any charge whatsoever, with Elliott Glass Company picking up the labor tab for their employees.

We believe this is further proof that new companies locating in our city are co-operating and pulling together to improve our city.

Music Program Entertains November Club Meeting

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club was entertained at its November meeting by the music of Buddy Ratliff, of Martin, and his daughter, Angela, at the home of Mrs. Otto Martin, Wayland.

Mrs. Ratliff, "strings" instructor at the Prestonsburg Community College, was formerly associated for a period of six years with Little Jimmy Dickens and also with Tom T. Hall. He plays the violin, base guitar, and other stringed instruments. Angela, who is a student at Allen Central High School, plays the piano, flute, and other musical instruments. Among their selections were "Sunrise, Sunset" from "Fiddler on the Roof," "Make It Through the Night," a country "hoedown" and a flute-violin and rendition by Mr. Ratliff on the violin and Angela the flute. Mrs. Gaye Barnett, Allen Central music instructor, introduced the musicians.

The club voted to assist with the Central Kentucky Blood Bank program and also to co-sponsor the purchase of a fire truck by the raising of funds for the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland area.

The Christmas dinner honoring the "daughter" clubs to be held December 9 at the May Lodge was discussed and the menu decided upon. Mrs. J. C. Wells, club president, gave a report of the recent 7th District KFWC meeting. Money for Veterans' Christmas gifts was collected from clubmembers and a report was given on the sale of Bicentennial carriage throws, and it was noted that more throws had been ordered, also that pecans have been ordered and should be received in time for Christmas baking. The sale of pecans has been a fundraising project of the club for many vears.

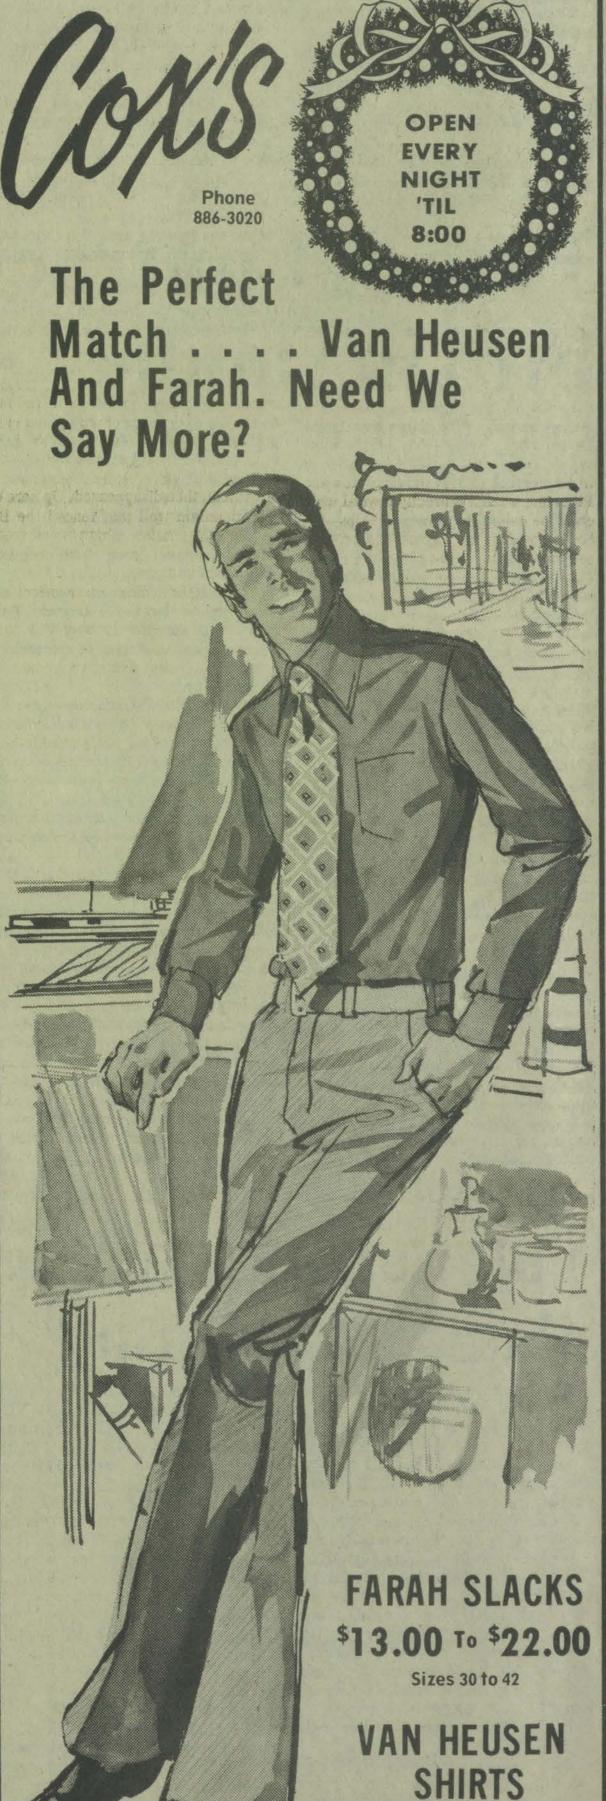

Those present were Mrs. Marie C. Mullins, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. Stanley Bamer, Mrs. Joyce P. Stevens, Mrs. Bill Castle, Mrs. Don Hughes, Mrs. James E. Martin, Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. Mervil Dixon, Mrs. Otto Martin, and the guests, Mrs. Gaye Barnett, Mr. Buddy Ratliff and Miss Angela Ratliff.

The next meeting will be the club's Christmas dinner at the May Lodge, December 9, with Dr. Mary Pauline Fox as guest federation speaker.

Labor Department evaluations indicate that the Public Employment Program designed to provide transitional jobs and needed public services during an economic slowdown, has had an impact both in reducing unemployment and in expanding useful local public services.

Intersection Routes 23 & 460

Up the Big Sandy on Sunday

By JESSE STEWART (Part II) Now to the Levisa Fork again. We've come to land level enough for a short runway and small planes. They take off and climb up and like hawks they come down between mountain tops against the skies! What if our ancestors could have seen this beside the Levisa Fork where the little packet used to run. This little airport has to be on the ground, only flat area between river and mountain. They had to ride horse and mule, or walk here. Maybe they rested, ate and fed or let their herds and flocks forage here. The road, four lanes, is as curved as the river has been. It is as broad and snaky. Not any straight-aways now. How much did it cost per mile? Two, four, five millions per mile? Could have been ten millions for some 47,507 of the miles! The road is running parallel to the Levisa River, where little packets used to navigate in their day. Do we see more from the windows of our car than our pioneer kin looking up from their packets at green mountains in spring and summer, at desolate dark and barren mountains in winter and at the few log houses in little valley? And here is Prestonsburg, named for my people. My mother's people, the Prestons, founded this city. When I was a little boy and hadn't travelled more than fifty miles from my W-Hollow home, I used to hear my old ancestors talk about this city and how my old ancestors' old ancestors had founded it. Here, Naomi and I stopped for some hurried refreshments. For we wanted to finish our journey and return home the same day.

settlements along the river in this

We couldn't believe we had a four lane highway from Prestonsburg to Pikeville. I don't know how many years past, maybe ten or twelve, when we drove up this valley, over U. S. 23, they were working on this road. Half the side of the mountain had come down here. In some places dirt and stone had been trucked across the Levisa Fork here to make fills and level acres. Level acres meant something in this area. I knew a semilevel area just north of Prestonsburg where an acre sold for forty thousand! When an item is scarce it brings a price.

On our right flowed the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy which looked broader here, even wide and deep enough for the packets of yesteryears. The Levisa looked broader here than it did south at Louisa and Paintsville. Here is one of the most scenic roads, from Prestonsburg to Pikeville, in America. On its left is the high stone wall, while on the right is the Levisa Fork. Here is one of the most expensive roads to build in Kentucky or in America. For, driving toward Pikeville, we drive directly toward what could be called the American Alps—the Southern Alps, the Kentucky Alps. You see this country and choose the name. But we were driving toward the headwaters of the Big Sandy Valley and that formidable wall of ranges that hemmed it in. In early days when the pioneers came over there was only one way to get through, Pound Gap.

What a pleasant drive, and a scenic highway to Pikeville. Now if you want to see each square foot of level ground utilized and even the steep slopes with streets and houses it is here. Pikeville is a city that could be referred to as one that can give Kentucky, American and world cities lessons on the utilization of space. We motored all over the city until we found Pikeville College. We even visited stores and shopped. The stores were filled and people were buying like mad. A city of five thousand with fifty-four known millionaires, according to a press article. At least, Pikeville isn't as poor as it seems or as people would have Appalachia to be.

Leaving Pikeville, we knew where we were going. We followed U.S. 23 out of Pikeville, which followed the Levisa Fork. And this far up the Big Sandy Valley the early steam-driven packet could have navigated. In pioneer years Pikeville had been its destiny. The packet from 1800 up-perhaps to 1840when this valley didn't have any roads at all, then blazed trails and semipassable roads around mountains, had been the mode of popular travel up and down this Valley, carrying passengers and much needed supplies from Gate City (now Catlettsburg) where Ohio River boats had brought supplies-even all the way down from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and up from Cincinnati, Ohio, to be reshipped up the Big Sandy River to Louisa, then up Levisa Fork to Paintsville, Prestonsburg and Pikeville and many little stops between. The packets were the main communications for their supplies and travel.

We followed U.S. 23 to Shelbiana where I used to visit my first Cousin Mitchell "Mick" Stuart (named for my father), his good wife Eunice and their daughter Jean, and a favorite red-headed grandson. We didn't stop in Shelbiana. We didn't have time. But in the cemetery up on the hill, above their home, where the tombstones glared in the sunlight like extra white teeth, I waved that way to Mitch and his grandson who both sleep there now. I never had a first cousin on my father's side of the house I liked more-all man, six feet five and two hundred sixty. The Stuarts were in Pike county, too Kentucky's largest county and produced more coal than any county in Kentucky.

Now we left U.S. 23, which went on to Pound Gap. We took 460 for a distance. We left 460 for the road that went up Russell Fork toward the Breaks Interstate Park which is in both Kentucky and Virginia and is operated by joint agreement by both states. Going up Russell Fork, we found a fair road, with many coal trucks. But coal is the product of this county. We found more than coal trucks. In the beginning of the Russell Fork road, there were some small bottoms and a little farming.

Then we began our climb, up and up and around hairpin curves where we pulled our car over to stops formed along the way. When we looked down into the valley below at one Russell Fork we "ooed" and "aahed" at the tumbling waters, jumping high with white spray on the blue summer wind. Higher and higher we drove up this mountain. We stopped and looked down.

"This is like the Alps," Naomi said, remembering our visiting Switzerland and the Alps.

The Alps, yes," I replied, "only prettier. There is grandeur here."

We drove on to the Breaks Interstate

Here we got this breathtaking view as we looked down into the canyon, largest east of the Mississippi River. It was 1650 feet below down to the churning, dancing, prancing waters, leaping over huge boulders, seeding spray high into the air, forming little white clouds that remained a moment, then disappeared. Up here on this mountain wall that fenced the Big Sandy Valley below, there were trees, large trees, that grew close together, hardwoods and pines.

"We're going to make reservations and come to the Breaks Interstate Park before this summer is over," I said. "This is a scenic dream of a place."

"I'll make them when we go home,"

Naomi said. We had reached Virginia, just over the Kentucky border. This was the land from which so many of our early pioneers had come. At three p.m. we started down the mountain on our way back down the valley. We had come the distance and would return in a day-it took our early pioneer ancestors two weeks or more to

On this Sunday we had also had a sermon, reviving our faith and our belief in our ancestors who believed, had faith in God on whom they relied in going into practically an unknown country, one of the most rugged, inaccessible valleys in the world to make new homes with so Manyprivations before them, with wolves, bears, panthers, wildcats, copperheads and rattlesnakes. They eventually conquered the Big Sandy Valley and now have almost accomplished building a four-lane highway part of its entire length. Naomi and I would be home by eight. If we stopped in Ashland for an evening meal we'd get home at nine. And what a sermon we had seen and felt going back into the heritage of my country and

The Blame Should Be Fixed And the Guilty Penalized

One optimist remarked last Wednesday while Prestonsburg's supply of natural gas was interrupted by a dynamited line for long, chilly hours:

"It makes us appreciate the more what we ordinarily enjoy." Most others weren't so philosophical. They were bitter. They pointed not only to their own discomforts but to the dangers which cold homes and hospital rooms bring to the very young, the very old, the sick; to the closing of schools, to the cancellation, even, of church services and suspension of some functions of government.

We are inclined to accept both viewpoints. But that is not to condone the act which created this situation.

We make no attempt to fix the blame for it all upon any individual or either party to the current labor dispute. We in no sense attempt to link such vandalism with the dispute.

But whoever has such little regard for the helpless and for such institutions as schools, hospitals, rest homes and churches—for them, whoever they may be, we can only hope early and undeniable detection, full prosecution and the justice that the law has for their kind.

The West Virginia Parents May Be Winning the Fight

The Times confesses, it was at first dubious about the validity of the objections made by the West Virginia group known as Concerned Parents Protesting Texbooks. We wondered about both text and context. Frankly, we were not certain that fogyism on the one hand wasn't as bad as the other isms that might be in the textbooks.

But the doubt has been dispelled. We have seen excerpts from the textbooks. Not many, but enough.

We have read one such excerpt which debases the Christ upon Whom the Christian religion is based.

We have read from another page that " all that is good and commendable now existing would continue if all marriage laws were repealed tomorrow. . ."

We have read of the imaginary sexual concepts of little boys and little girls as pertaining to their own bodies and those of their fathers and mothers.

We have read the "street" words for intimate parts of the body, the dirty, four-letter words.

Most of the West Virginia textbook "samples" which came our way are from textbooks used by children beginning with the seventh grade. Bless the children!

These textbooks, in effect, sneer at the Christian religion, the institution of marriage and whatever impulses to decency that are left.

The parents protested. The situation has become tense. But one sees some hope ahead.

Now comes a sharp departure from earlier policy as U. S. Education Commissioner Bell has asked schoolbook publishers to print "only materials that do not insult the values of most parents." Bell urges publishers to concentrate on "good literature that will appeal to children without relying too much on blood and guts and street language for their own sake."

Singling out the Bible, McGuffey's Reader and the Wizard of Oz as examples of books which present interesting stories and which teach values, Bell said:

"We could use more emphasis on some of those values today." Now, couldn't we?

The Severance Tax Funds

The concern voiced by Rep. Bill Reynolds and other coal-county legislators about the future of severance tax funds returning to coal-producing counties in future years apparently is justified.

The allocation has only a two-year lifespan, as of now, and any continuation will depend on the next Legislature. At least one representative made it clear here last Friday that there will be no future funds if the intended purpose is not

Established guidelines for use of the money emphasize industrial development, recreational projects, and similar programs. The main intent, and the reason for legislative approval, the visiting legislator said, was to assure development to replace a coal economy, when it declined.

Failure of coal counties to seek that goal, he said, would guarantee there would be no special allocation of excess severance tax revenues beyond the two years already approved. Since a number of the projects proposed thus far don't directly concern economic development, he felt that the Legislature will not support a continuation.

We feel, quite frankly, that judging coal county reaction this early is unfair. In the first place, not many Eastern Kentucky counties have any real background in economic development. Few of them have ever had funds to invest in land or improvements. . . or much of anything else, for that matter, until revenue sharing came along. These are not industrialized counties, which is precisely why they need development funds to work with. But they also need time, and assistance. Our quarrel is not with the restrictions. We agree that Eastern Kentucky needs to plan for the period when coal is less significant, and that lasting improvements, as well as alternate means of employment, are crucial to the area's

But we feel this would be more likely an end result if there was some permanence to sharing in severance tax returns. Instead of cutting off the program after two years, it should be given a decent period to survive and develop. If the coal counties knew that funds would be available so long as coal production thrived, they could plan acquisition and development of industrial property, access roads, recreation, and the many improvements which are just as essential to job opportunity and economic development as a piece of available ground.

Martin County, for example, will probably be allocated more than $1 million over these two years. It could promptly spend every cent for industrial sites, but never attract an industry. If the county knew, however, that it would have a reasonably steady income so long as it produced coal, it could plan a consistent investment in industrial sites, health facilities, recreation development. . . and it could plan in conjunction with the construction of a decent highway, at least six years away. Once it was on the way to planned development, the county might justifiably divert funds to other worthwhile uses.

In any event, Kentucky's noncoal legislators should give the program a fair chance to work before condemning it. It is hardly realistic to expect counties with little experience in economic development to suddenly become active and expert in that complex field.

These excess severance tax dollars might be the boost Eastern Kentucky needs to become more self-sufficient. They are minimal, compared to the total the state receives. And we believe, given reasonable opportunity, all of Kentucky's coal counties will show that they can use the funds wisely and well.

A gas company spokesman said the blast site, which is high on a mountainside, rendered any attempt at repairing the line Tuesday night impossible. Company supervisory employees began repair work at daybread and stoves and furnaces here were beginning to be relighted late Wednesday

The Lackey-Garrett area was without gas Saturday for the second time when a 20-inch line supplying gas to the Ohio-Kentucky Utilities Company was broken by an explosion on Right Beaver Creek in afternoon.

The 1:35 a.m. blast ruptured the mainline from Right Beaver Compressor Station, cutting off the gas supply to approximately 380 families in the Garrett-Lackey area for the third time since the strike began. John Allen, owner of Ohio-Kentucky Utilities, reported that some homes still had gas service from another source but the majority of residents in the area were cut off by the explosion.

In addition to the individual homes affected, the Golden Years Rest Home at Lackey suffered severely from the outage. According to Mrs. Ollie Mae Grimm, owner of the facility, the gas pressure into the rest home was insufficient to run the furnace and the facility was without heat since 5 a.m. when the outside temperature in the area stood 26 degrees. Mrs. Grimm said that the 87 elderly residents at the home were being wrapped in blankets, and electric heaters were being utilized for heating purposes until gas service could be restored. This is the second time the rest home has been without heat in recent weeks.

Company supervisory personnel restored service to the Ohio-Kentucky Utilities Gas Company system at 10:15 a.m. Saturday by isolating the blasted section of pipeline while repairs to the damaged line were being completed.

The explosion was the tenth such incident since the strike began.

Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company has posted cash rewards totaling $50,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons involved in acts of sabotage against the company's property or equipment and urges anyone with pertinent information to contact the company or any law enforcement office.

"Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company will continue to exert every reasonable effort to maintain a dependable gas supply to its customers," a company spokesman said.

A second bargaining session between company officials and union representatives was scheduled in Lexington Tuesday by a federal mediator.

many ranchers real well. But I don't know a single one who would even consider this. Back in the drought of the early '50's many of them went broke but none resorted to this and many of them would stay up all night with a sick animal they knew they were going to lose money

"Most reporters confuse farmers as one and the same with ranchers, but this is incorrect... Those guilty were described as farmers and ranchers but in reality they were mostly post-war farmers and speculators. These speculators sometimes buy or lease a 10-acre space and hang a ranch sign on the property, but they lack an awful lot in both acreage and character of being what is really a rancher."

WE'RE ASKING, ANYHOW

If we have the story straight, the state fisheries boys are refusing to stock Dewey Lake again with bass. This could be incorrect. Seems strange that they can haul rockfish to lakes in the far western end of the state from the state hatchery at Morehead and still refuse this lake of ours, only 60 or 70 miles away, helping of black bass.

They have the last word about this matter, true, but we shouldn't be afraid to ask.

CARD OF THANKS We would like to take this opportunity to express our thanks to all those who brought food, flowers, or in any other way expressed their sympathy upon the passing of our loved one, Walter Porter. We extend a special thanks to the Revs. Bill E. Campbell, Abe Vanderpool, and William Campbell for their consoling words and to the Floyd Funeral Home for its kind and efficient service.

Miller told miners that if the contract is rejected, the strike could last from five to seven weeks, bankrupting the union which has no strike funds, and inviting government intervention through the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Saturday meeting here was attended by Squire Feltner, Pikeville, president of District 30; Billy Joe Floyd, president of District 19; J. D. Trout, District 30's International executive board member; Lonnie Brown, who serves District 19 in the same capacity, and Harrison Combs, UMW associate councel.

Combs urged ratification of the contract. He said it would cost operators of UMW mines $4.6 million over the three years of its life. He added that if the Taft-Hartley Act is invoked, union leaders would be called upon to explain why the contract was rejected and that these leaders would have to say that they negotiated for the best contract they could get but the rank-and-file membership would not accept it.

The long reading and discussion here of the 30 articles in the proposed contract was held while a telephone line to national UMW headquarters was kept open. Objections to several articles were voiced by local union representatives.

The result of the voting is expected to be known today (Wednesday).

Consumer Comments

By Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock When you go into the supermarket or grocery, "what you see is what you get."

Read the label and find out what you're The Fair Packaging and Labeling Act of 1966 requires that labels on interstate goods inform consumers of the ingredients and weight of an item. This act is limited to food, drugs, cosmetics and medical devices and does not include meat or poultry. The idea behind the law was to make labeling information more meaningful to consumers and to protect consumers from misinformation or misleading labeling.

There are two basic kinds of labeling: nutritional labeling and ingredients labeling. Nutrition is the eating of proper foods for a healthy body. Nutritional labeling tells you the amounts of particular substances contained in your food. This kind of labeling, nutritional, is voluntary except with foods that are enriched (like enriched bread), fortified (like fortified milk), have a nutrient added or claim to be nutritional. All nutritional information must follow a basic format, telling you the size of a serving and the number of servings in a container, and the number of calories and of grams of protein, carbohydrates and fat per serving. In addition, a package must state the percentages of the U. S. Recommended Daily Allowances for proteins, vitamins and minerals-in other words, the amount of each of these an adult should eat to keep health. Look for the nutritional labeling and compare brands to see which gives you more nutrition for your money.

The second kind of labeling is ingredients labeling. Ingredients must be listed in order of decreasing quantity. There will be more of the first ingredient than the second ingredient, and so on. There are certain foods which do not have to list the ingredients. Foods like this have what's called a standard of identity. The standard defines what a food of that name must contain, and if it does contain those things, the ingredients do not have to be listed on the label. For example, ice cream has a standard of identity; there are certain ingredients that ice cream must have to be called "ice cream" and so it is just labeled "ice cream" without listing the ingredients.

A manufacturer or distributor must state the truthful net weight or volume of the contents of a package. No matter what an item's size or shape, the weight of the item helps a consumer figure the best value. The law also prohibits the use of misleading terms like "jumbo pound." A "jumbo pound" is 16 ounces, the same as any other pound. Finally, the name and address of the manufacturer, packer or distributor must appear on labels. Don't forget-read the label for nutritional labeling, ingredients labeling and net weight. Better Apparance Is Better Business

The Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club has adopted a program, Business for Beauty, that will encourage improved appearance standards by local firms acording to Mrs. Janice Allen, club

The primary purpose of the program will be to convince businesses that simple landscaping and renovation can do much to give their firms a new look and improve the community's environment.

Business for Beauty, which has been conducted nationally since 1968, is cosponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and Cities Service

Mrs. Allen said that, "A community's environment depends upon many things, among them the visual standards of businesses and homes. Business establishments which do not reflect high standards of design, landscaping and maintenance can be a particular liability since they are usually located on heavily traveled streets and highways. On the other hand, good appearance helps both the business and the community."

All local businesses completing any kind of improvement to their exterior appearance between February 16, 1974 and February 15, 1976, will be recognized with certificates of commendation from the club. One local firm will be singled out for additional recognition and go into state competition. Winners from all states will then enter national competition.

Local businesses are encouraged to let the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club know if they have made or are planning to make improvements so that their efforts may be recognized. Firms should contact Mrs. Allen at 484 Riverside Drive, City.

To provide businesses with landscaping and renovation hints, the club will be distributing a Business for Beauty Idea Book, containing many practical tips on improving the appearance of a property. Clubwomen will also be making presentations before civic and business groups.

Since its adoption by the General Federation of Women's Clubs in 1968, the Business for Beauty program has recognized improvements by thousands

In state judging the top two entries from clubs will earn cash awards of $100 and $50 respectively. The winning business in the state will receive a beautiful plaque from Cities Service

Company. The six national business winners in the program will receive trips to an awards program, scheduled for late spring, 1976 in Washington, D. C. A representative from the sponsoring club and state will also attend this event. Cash grants totaling $6,000 will be distributed among the clubs sponsoring the six national winners, with a first prize of

The Blackcats in their first game won over Elkhorn City, 70-31. The Cats were led in scoring by Robbie Herrick with 20 points and Collins with 17 points and 16 rebounds. In the semi-finals Coach Fred Setser's team had to overcome a 7 point deficit going into the final quarter, and Herrick's last-second shot gave Prestonsburg new life, the Cats coming back and wining over Johnson Central, 60-58. Herrick and Gormie Collins Pikeville Panthers, 62 to 55. Best teamed to lead the Cat comeback when they trailed, 45-38, at the end of the third quarter. East Team Wins Turkey Bowl; $500 Available for Grant

Turkey Bowl stalwarts who literally would rather play football than eat had at it last Thursday afternoon at the high school athletic field here.

Loyal fans watched a scoreless first half as both East and West seemed too mud-bound to score. Early in the third quarter, things began to move with a 31yard pass thrown by "Broadway Joe" Clark, East quarterback, to split end Steve Crabtree who carried it over for the first time and also scored the extra point on another pass from Clark.

West's score came in the fourth quartet on a one-yard run by Fred "Elmore Homesick" James after J. B. "Wimpy" Clark, halfback, threw a pass to Jeff "Which Team Wants Me" Wells on the three-yard line. The extra point attempt failed, leaving the score East, 8, West, 6. Cited for outstanding defensive play were Steve "The Cat" Fritz, Tommy "Bull" Howell, and Mike "Buck Wild" Meade who contained the running attack of John "Poe" Leslie, "Wimpy" Clark, and Fred James.

With this year's Turkey Bowl just a muddy memory, the score for the past seven years' play stands, East, 4 wins, West, 3.

As one perennial player commented after the game, "No one was hurt; nobody got mad, and we'll even it up next year-if I'm able to walk by then."

A senior member of Prestonsburg High School's football squad will receive a $500

Tourney Begins At Betsy Layne

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

The 32nd Floyd county pre-season tournament gets under way tonight (Wednesday) at the D. W. Howard Fieldhouse at Betsy Layne, with the B team tournament starting at 7 p.m. each evening and the varsity games to follow. Coach Fred Setser's Prestonsburg Blackcats are the only undefeated team in the tournament. The Cats have a 6-0 record and the Jenny Wiley tournament championship under their belts.

In the Varsity upper bracket tonight the J. H. Allen Central Rebels, with a record of 3 and 2, will face the Wheelwright Trojans (1-1). Thursday night in the lower bracket, the Prestonsburg Blackcats (7-0) will tangle with the home-standing and always dangerous Betsy Layne Bobcats. The McDowell Daredevils, with a record of 5-1, drew a bye and will face the winner of the Allen Central-Wheelwright game on Friday

Broad Form Deed Comes Alive For Perkins as Drilling Begun

HINDMAN-Preparation for natural gas drilling on the property of U. S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins is under way, protected by a 70-year-old broad form deed.

And he's rather upset, but did not try to use his considerable influence as chair man of the powerful Education and Labor Committee to dissuade Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co. to halt drilling.

The firm is preparing, under the hated broad form deed which has come under attack by many mountain folk, to begin drilling, and has already bulldozed a quartermile road past Perkins' barn and a picturesque hollow.

At the head, a wide bench has been leveled, pushing earth downhill towards

The Hindman Democrat, who is the dean of Kentucky's congressional delegation, has been aware of the controversial broad from deed complaints for several decades.

And he won't be compensated for his damage, nor will he receive any royalties from the gas drilled.

Perkins pointed out that the mineral rights for the land were sold "or practically given away for 25 to 50 cents an acre" around the turn of the century. In 1938, before he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives 11 years later, Perkins purchased the surface rights.

He said that he found out about the gas company's intention to drill on his land much the same as have hundreds of other Appalachians who have watched helplessly as gas and coal companies have excavated their lands for mineral wealth.

In early October, Perkins continued, the gas company came in and informed Mrs. Perkins and their son, of their drilling intentions.

The congressman told of giving his consent, noting that the courts have construed the deeds in favor of the coal and gas companies.

Originally, he thought the damage would be slight. He worked on gas drilling crews himself as a youngster. At that time, he claims they did little to harm land in Knott county, seldom leaving more than a small rig to mark the drilling site.

"It's their modern methods that do the damage," he complained one morning recently as he hiked up the newly bulldozed haul road in back of his modest, clapboard farmhouse. "Of course, I've seen a lot of drilling around here in the last few years. But to tell the truth, I never paid much attention to it."

The bulldozer crew took some care not to disturb the congressman's front yard more than necessary. Several trees were transplanted and a fence around the road has been begun.

But Perkins was obviously upset as he showed visitors the wide swath the dozers made through the middle of his old cow pasture and the size of the drilling bench.

He pointed to several potential drainage problems and places where the hillside was beginning to slip onto the road and the bench. "You can see it sliding already," he said. "Wait a few months and we'll really have trouble."

Perkins' wife was more distraught over what had happened. "It's destroyed the whole beauty of the place," she said in a separate interview. "We used to stroll up there all the time. They've taken that away from us. I don't even want to go up there anymore."

Compared to what strip miners have done to many East Kentucky farms under the broad form deed, the damage is slight. Few trees have been disturbed. And the road is barely wide enough for two cars to pass.

Perkins says there are coal seams on his land. Hew was asked, "What would happen if someone decided to strip his land for coal?"

"It would destroy us," he replied. "But the legislature has given them some guidance on that one."

A bill passed by the 1974 General Assembly requires the written permission of the surface owner be obtained before a strip mining permit can be issued by the state Division of Reclamation.

The law, which rejoins surface and sub-surface rights to property for stripping coal, is scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1. However, it is now before the courts. For more than 70 years, Kentucky courts treated the two as separate entities.

Tom Daniels, a spokesman for Kentucky West Virginia Gas in Prestonsburg, said he wasn't aware that drilling operations were under way or planned on the congressman's land.

If they are, he said they would be treated the same way as those on anyone else's land.

A company field representative in Hazard, who asked not to be identified, confirmed the work on Perkins' land.

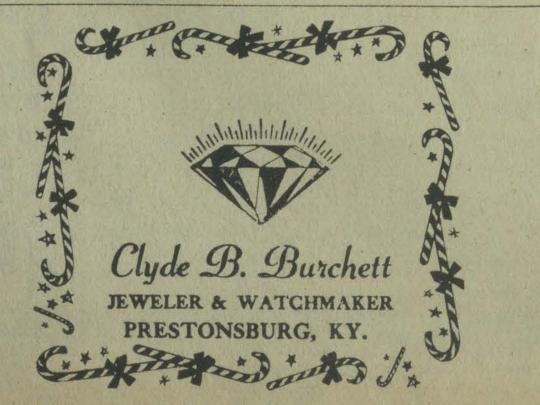

"It was handled the same way as all our operations," he said. "We always try to do our best to get along with surface owners."

Road Opened Over Big Black Mountain

By CELIA BREWER

Harlan, Ky.—There are some very happy people in Slope Hollow today. They're celebrating a marriage that took place recently between Cloverfork and Cloverlick. And the honeymoon should last for years.

The "marriage" united the Cumberland and Louellen communities by a newly built eight-mile road over Big Black Mountain in Harlan county.

Previously the two towns were over an hours's drive apart. Local traffic had to use US 119 to Harlan, then KY 38 to Louellen. Both roads follow winding mountain terrain, and there's not much possibility of going over the 55 mph limit imposed on four-lane highways.

Addressing those gathered for a ribbon-cutting ceremony, Secretary of Transportation Billy Paxton said that he was "really performing a marriage" between Cloverfork and Cloverlick."

"I'm very happy to unite these two communities by officially opening this road," Paxton said.

Paxton said the road would enable more people to pursue higher education at the Southeast Kentucky Community College in Cumberland—a branch of the state community college system.

Built with state forces using rented equipment, the special forces project was completed after only two years' construction. It combined the efforts of highway engineering personnel in the central office in Frankfort, the district office in Manchester, and the highway personnel in the field.

Funds for the half-million dollar project came from the Kentucky Department of Transportation.

With the new road, many of the people on both sides of The Big Black Mountain will be reunited with their neighbors and more will have access to the college.

The cars of several good people were vandalized Saturday night, November 16, while the church was gathered in a revival meeting led by Elder Bill Campbell and Elder William H. Amburgy.

The Katy Friend Free Will Baptist Church and the Kentucky State Association offer a reward of $200 to any person or persons furnishing to the church or to any law enforcement agency in Floyd County or in the Commonwealth of Kentucky information leading to the arrest and conviction of such person or persons.

The Church reserves the right to determine the person or persons entitled to the reward.

The Free Will Baptist of Floyd County will prosecute person or persons to the full extent of the law.

Elder JACK DeROSSETT, Asst. Pastor

Elder Wm. H. Amburgy, State Moderator

No price increase on over 1100 items for the next two months

We're as tired of rising food costs as you are. When we pay more, we have to charge more. So, we have bought enough of over 1100 items that we can promise not to raise these prices before February 1, 1975. We will do our best to keep all our prices down of course, so many other prices will stay down, too, but these you can definitely count on. Look for the blue "KROGER PRICE FREEZE" shelf markers and a list of over 1100 items at your nearby Kroger food store and start saving

He explained during a recent interview at his Monticello home that as he grew older his interest in nature expanded to include zoology, archaeology and forestry. While in the Navy, he decided to make a career of painting his beloved animals.

"I thought that maybe as a wildlife painter I could contribute more to mankind-that I could go to the public and make them more aware of nature,"

Studying at the University of Kentucky and graduating from Ringling Bros. School of Art, Gray's early career began Court in favor of the Plaintiff based in the as an artist for sporting goods companies in North Carolina. Allen Brewer, a close friend, persuaded Gray to come to Lexington in order to set up a business, having assured Gray of the high caliber of his prints, an art form beginning to gain in popularity. Brewer, however, was killed in a plane accident before their plans could be finalized.

Gray took over his deceased friend's job as instructor of an art course at Montgomery Ward's, but still aspired to a business of his own. Chuck Starr, Gray's manager, wanted to escape transfer to a western store and offered to take Brewer's place in promoting the prints. The deal was soon settled.

Gray's first print was released in 1966. "Apparently we did some things right and maybe some wrong, but there is no book on limited edition prints," Gray

Perhaps the success was too good as the pair began buying related businesses "lock, stock and barrel." Hospitalized for nine days with colitis, Gray found himself signing prints to keep their venture going. Then, feeling too much "like the goose that laid the golden egg," Gray bought out Starr's interests and in turn sold them except for his printing operation, Animal Graphics.

The breathless spiral began to wind down, although Gray refused to shut himself off completely from the rest of the world. So, he continues to instill his respect for nature to others, especially through extensive public school lectures.

"You can't have your cake and eat it too-you have to cater to the public. Wherever I am today, it is because of the people who have bought my prints," he Explaining that Lexington was becoming too crowded for his life style since he found himself flying great distances to find a place to paint, he decided to buy the tract near Lake Cumberland.

Gray had long felt that his numerous memberships in wildlife organizations were not fulfilling in themselves. So, he allocated a portion of his estate to the Kentucky Wildlife Society, which he founded last year for future development, mainly as an educational facility.

Gray said the land will include accommodations for the handicapped and will utilize senses rather than just sight.

He noted, however, that the $52 million project cannot be completed without federal and state grants, which the society now is awaiting.

Vocational Schools To Be Accredited

Kentucky's 70 area vocational education centers and 14 state vocational-technical schools are scheduled to be accredited by the state Board of Education no later than June 30, 1975. Royce Justice, coordinator of planning in the Bureau of Vocational Education, explained that the state board for a number of years has accredited elementary and secondary schools in the state, while by-passing Kentucky's post-secondary vocational schools.

"I believe that within the next three to five years," said Justice, "there are going to be a great many changes in vocational education in Kentucky." He added that there are several state vocational schools accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. State vocational schools in Elizabethtown, Somerset and Mayo are currently applying to that association.

Accreditation by the Southern Association will be optional and will in no way affect the plans of the state board, since state accreditation will be required.

One primary reason for state accreditation is to make federal money available to students attending vocational schools so that they can continue their education. Unaccredited schools are ineligible for federal grants

According to Justice, the state of Kentucky has been designated by the United States Commissioner of Education as the body which determines the quality of post-secondary vocational education in the state. Justice said that review teams from the Bureau of Vocational Education will begin on-site reviews of all state vocational-technical schools and area vocational education centers no later than Dec. 1.

Some of States Locks, Dams Among Oldest in the Nation

By JENNY PULLIAM Hoover dams are famous for their size, but age makes Lock No. 4 near Frankfort a standout. It's 90 years old and still Kentucky may have more old dams still operating than any other state. Many are more than 100 years old.

According to Steve Thrasher, assistant director of the division of water resources of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Kentuckians began building locks and dams in the early 1800's to raise the water level and aid navigation. The materials used to build the locks and dams were crude and common. The walls of the lock chambers were made of native limestone blocks. The dams were rock-filled timber cribs with wood-sheathed crests.

Many of these old dams were built on and channel correction resumed. the Ohio and Kentucky Rivers. According to Thrasher, locks and dams were developed on the Kentucky so produce and timber could be transported from the upper Kentucky River Valley. The project was begun by the state in 1835 and continued until funds ran out in 1844. By then, the first five locks and dams near the beginning of the river were completed.

The improved section of the Kentucky River transported commerce for years. But, the condition of the locks and dams gradually deteriorated because there wasn't enough money for operation and

When a renewed interest in Kentucky River navigation arose in 1879, Congress appropriated funds for work along the main stream from its mouth to Beattyville. In 1880, Kentucky ceded the first five locks and dams to the United States. The federal government restored them and completed work on the last nine in

The Ohio River was another navigation FRANKFORT, Ky-Boulder and problem for steamboats-travel was hindered by rocks, snags, gravel, sand bars and low water levels. The width of the channel varied and the depth at the extreme low water level could reach a shallow one-foot in some places between Pittsburgh and Cairo. When that happened, river traffic halted and waited for high waters.

To solve the problem of snags, Congress allocated $75,000 in 1824 for their removal and called on the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to do the work.

Stone training dikes were built to narrow the channel and make it deeper. The first dike was built near Henderson in 1825. Others were built later at Scuffletown and at Sisters, French and Cumberland Islands.

Lack of funds slowed construction from 1844 until 1866 when river improvement

Even after the snags were removed, low water levels crippled river traffic. Congress instructed the Corps of Engineers to build a series of low-lift locks and dams in the river to increase the water level.

By 1885, a moveable dam, copied from those operated in France, was completed on the Ohio at Davis Island. Pittsburgh finally had a low water harbor large enough for steamboats and coal fleets.

By 1923, Congress had appropriated a total of $56 million to complete the construction of the Ohio River dams. When finished in 1928, the locks handled 20 to 30 million tons of freight transported yearly on the river in the 1920's and

Diesel-powered towboats began appearing on the river during the 1930's. Their greatest horsepower and load capacity pushed the steam towboats into obscurity and made it necessary to enlarge the original locks on the Ohio

Augering: Most Wasteful Mining

By JENNY PULLIAM
Frankfort, Ky.—Of the three ways to mine coal in Kentucky, the least known—and the most wasteful-is auger mining.

William Hayes, regional supervisor of the Eastern Kentucky coal fields for the division of reclamation in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, explains that most coal companies prefer strip mining to auger mining in order to recover more coal. Augering removes only 35 to 50 per cent of the coal.

According to Hayes, mining with an auger employs boring or drilling machinery. The coal auger consists of a large-diameter auger drill which cuts, transports and loads the coal onto trucks.

Before drilling begins, dirt is pushed over the side of the hill to expose the coal. At the same time, a 35-to 40-foot wide ledge, called a bench, is formed.

Then the auger moves in and begins drilling into the hill. By adding 12-to 14-foot long sections called flights, onto the bit of the auger, a miner can drill as far as 150 to 180 feet into the hill.

The coal is extracted from the seam in the same way that wood shavings are produced by a carpenter's drill. The coal then can be carried on a chute to a truck or piled on the ground and picked up by an end loader.

Although the auger bits vary in size.

Although the auger bits vary in size, the average diameter is usually 24-28 inches wide. On auger, the Kelly Giant, at one time the biggest in the world with its 6-foot diameter bit, was in operation from 1966 through 1968. It is now retired in Breathitt County.

After the auger reaches full depth, it is retracted and each flight is taken off as it

After the coal has been extracted, the dirt is pushed back over the auger holes and the ground is prepared for seeding.

State regulations require that coal operators push back enough dirt to reach a height of four feet above the auger holes. If only auger mining has taken place, this must be done within 15 days. If both strip and auger mining has occurred, the coal operators have up to 75 days to regrade the land.

Surface mining companies often combine strip and auger mining methods. In those cases, the company first prepares to strip-mine by removing the overburden—the dirt, trees and rocks above the coal. With the removal of everything over the coal, it is possible to extract most of the coal in the seam. For those places where it is impractical, both physically and economically, to remove the coal by strip mining, the auger is moved in to extract as much of the coal as possible.

Dangers associated with auger mining are much less than those of deep mining. "Usually," said Hayes, "outside work is less dangerous than putting men underground." The possibility of rocks or trees falling off the side of the clifflike highwall does exist. However, safety regulations require stabilization of the highwall to prevent accidents.

Due to the low recovery of coal in auger mining, coal operators prefer other methods. "However," explained Hayes, "because of slope regulations or because there is no other way they can get to the coal, there is still a considerable amount of coal mined by augering."

The pillars, or supports, of coal left between the auger holes are one reason auger mining recovers less coal than strip mining or deep mining. Another cause of low recovery is a curving highwall, which is usually the case. When a highwall is not straight, there are pieshaped areas of a coal seam untouched by the auger. A third reason is the practice of drilling each hole 30 per cent under size to allow for downward leaning of the hole.

In Kentucky, coal can be strip-mined on slopes of up to 27 degrees. Coal can be removed by augering up through a 33degree slope.

In 1973, there were 795 underground mines and 127 strip mines in Kentucky. There were 77 auger mines and 499 auger-strip mine combinations.

Mountain Manor News

Mountain Manor Nursing Home employees and their families observed Thanksgiving with a covered-dish dinner, November 23. After dinner, games were enjoyed and door prizes were given to four winners.

Preceeding the evening meal, Eleanor Robinson, administrator, announced that Mountain Manor had received the 1974 Outstanding Facility of the Year Award. She expressed her appreciation to all the staff for their cooperation and help that made this award possible.

Tuesday, November 19, the nursing faculty of Prestonsburg Community College and the directors of nursing service held their regular meeting at Mountain Manor. A dessert course was served to the group.

Plans are now being made concerning Christmas for the residents of the home. Volunteer services would be greatly appreciated.

In Bullitt county an old cemetery created a mystery. There were no headstones to indicate persons buried there, but conjecture led to the belief it was a graveyard for victims of a cholera epidemic or soldiers killed during the Civil War.

No 'Postage Dues' To Go Thru Mails

Postmaster Jack Stumbo, of Prestonsburg, reminds customers that effective Sunday, November 17, the U.S. Postal Service discontinued delivering mail on which there is no postage as of as of Nov.

Stumbo said the new policy was instituted because of the high costs being incurred by the Postal Service in its attempt to deliver such mail. Officials estimate that such costs total approximately $18 million annually.

Letters now mailed without postage are returned to sender if there is a return address, or to the dead letter office, instead of being delivered to the address as postage due mail as has been the custom. Postal officials will attempt to find the sender of unpaid mail and return it for a slight fee, if there is no return address.

"Naturally we realize that someone could inadvertently forget to put a stamp on a letter or that a stamp could come off to be sure to include a correct return address on their mail," Stumbo said.

Commission Checks Strip Mines

By MARVA GAY

Frankfort, Ky.—"Show me" came the reply of the Environmental Quality Commission after being told about some good strip mine operations.

So, the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection showed them.

State reclamation officials recently took members of the commission to some Eastern Kentucky strip mines. For two days they traveled through intermittent drizzle, tramped through mud and hung to the sides of trucks to take a look at strip mines—the good ones and the bad

It was the first field trip for the 18months-old citizens advisory commission to the state environmental protection agency. And, according to Jackie Swigart, head of the citzins' group, it was prior to cancellation, so we urge mailers on this trip," said Mrs. Swigart. "We learned a great deal about surface mining by taking a firsthand look at what is actually being done. What we saw reinforced my belief that reclamation can be done right. But it takes work, close scrutiny of the mines by welltrained inspectors and vigorous enforcement of the laws. That is absolutely necessary.'

"It is the responsibility of this commission," continued Mrs. Swigart, "to keep the public informed about environmental issues and to speak for the public on those issues. We took this trip because we wanted to see for ourselves how reclamation was being done in Eastern Kentucky and to see how the state's wild rivers were being protected from the effects of strip-mining."

The group questioned reclamation officials, strip-mine owners and operators about laws and techniques. They viewed a controversial mine in Wayne county, a finished reclamation site in Pulaski county and active jobs in Breathitt county.

Both the Wayne and Pulaski county mines are near rivers protected under the state Wild Rivers Act. At the Ikerd and Bandy operation in Pulaski county Mrs. Swigart and the others saw soybeans and sugar cane growing near grazing cattle. That land had been stripped a few years ago.

At the West Coal Company in Wayne county, they viewed one of the first blockcut mining operations in Kentucky. Block-cut mining has been successful in preventing erosion and landslides in Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Using the block-cut method, a barrier "We picked up more than muddy shoes of land left around the active mine prevents dirt from going over the mountain side. The coal is then mined in sections. Dirt removed from the first section is placed in an approved disposal site. Then, dirt removed from each successive section is placed in the vacant spot behind it. That way, reclamation is done as the mining progresses and dirt is not pushed over the hill where it may slide into the valleys and fill up the

According to John Roberts, director of the state division of reclamation who accompanied the commission members on the trip, the West Coal Company permit as originally proposed was denied because the planned method of operation would cause siltation of the wild rivers portion of the Little South Fork of the Cumberland River.

At an administrative hearing, the company proposed using the block cut method on a trial basis for a smaller area. The division approved that permit.

In Breathitt county, the group had a graphic lesson in good and bad reclamation techniques. Landslides were obvious in some areas. But in other areas companies were using newer techniques to prevent landslides.

"Now that coal people are making such a profit," said Mrs. Swigart, "they can certainly afford reclamation. Now is the time to keep well-trained inspectors at the strip mines making certain proper reclamation is obtained. The state of Kentucky cannot afford to do it any other way. The future of coal mining as well as the protection of the public depends on proper reclamation."

Current Addresses Necessary for VA

The necessity for veterans and their dependents to keep the Veterans Administration informed of their current addresses was emphasized in an incident that received national attention recently.

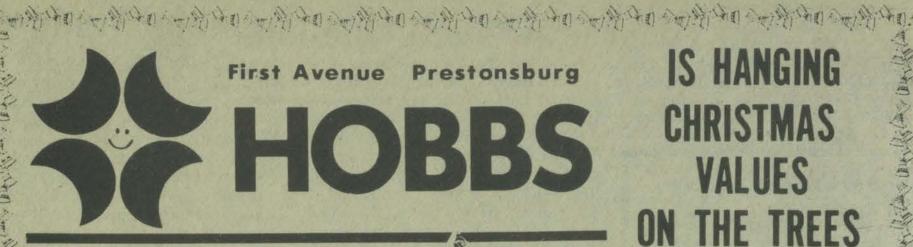

A new tenant in a Dallas apartment complained that she was unable to stymie a flow of government checks in the mail. The checks were not addressed to anyone in her household and repeated requests to stop delivery were to no avail,

Officials at the VA Regional Office in

Not one, but as many as six educational assistance checks had been mailed to a disabled veteran and his three sons, who had listed the apartment as their residence as late as July.

After enrolling at a Dallas college in June and July, the father and three sons took up separate residences on Aug. 1. Family plans also deferred college registration until the spring term, but this fact was not reported to the VA until the college completed its fall registration.

Located at their new residences the veteran's family helped VA officials unravel the mystery. A VA spokesman said that all of the errant checks would be

The Attorney General's County Court Clerk Gallie Isaac, Jr. asked if a write-in candidate could legally assume mayoral duties, even though the office of mayor was not on the ballot in the November election. The former mayor died in office and the city council filled the vacancy. The term runs through 1975. The Attorney General's office stated that the appointee who filled the vacancy should continue to serve until the November, 1975 election, when the office of mayor would be officially on the ballot. The Attorney General's office stated that private schools are not covered by an amendment which reads in part, "Any secondary school which maintains a basketball team for boys for other than intramural purposes, shall maintain the same for girls.' They said that the law applies only to public schools, which may lawfully qualify to receive funds from the Public School Foundation Program.

Responding to a request from James S. Tincher, London chief of police, the Attorney General's office released an opinion that time worked over 40 hours per week, including time spent testifying in court, must be paid at time and a half. Time in court only counts as overtime if the officer has worked over 40 hours that week, though.

The Nicholas county sheriff currently has one deputy. He requested Nicholas county fiscal court for one additional deputy. The Attorney General's office responded to an inquiry from the Nicholas county attorney on the legality of hiring additional deputies by stating that the number of deputies for each county is prescribed by law. The ban against increasing the number of deputy positions involves a rigidity which can change only through legislative action. This is apparently a statewide problem, which suggests that the county officials of Kentucky must appeal to their elected legislators for relief.

CUBIC

Johnny Bench, all-star catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, and songstress Vikki Carr share an interest in music-and in the Christmas Seal Campaign. The baseball star, chairman of the 1973 effort against lung disease, coaches the popular vocalist for her role as 1974 National Honorary Christmas Seal Chairman. Winning the fight against emphysema, TB and air pollution, both agree, is a matter of life and breath.

With Thanksgiving over, most of us turn our thoughts toward Christmas and the problem of the right gift. If you are buying a present for a hunter or fisherman, this problem can be eased considerably, for there are literally hundreds of items in all price ranges that the sportsman will welcome.

The best bet for the person who knows little about hunting and fishing equipment is to seek the advice of a knowledgeable salesperson in a sporting goods store about brand names, styles and sizes. A safe practice is to stick to the medium-priced article, which is usally of high quality and lacks only the frills or the flash of a more expensive counterpart. The lower-priced items may not meet the needs of the sportsman, or they may be poorly constructed of lowquality materials.

Anyone contemplating a major gift, such as a boat and motor, should forgo the element of surprise and let the recipient choose his own, since he will probably have some definite ideas about what he needs and wants.

For the fisherman, choice gifts are tackle boxes, lures, ines, tools, fish stringers, hooks, sinkers, filleting knives, bait knockers, flashlights, small first aid kits, reel oil and gear lubricants. Or the fisherman may welcome some of the newer electronic gadgets, such as electric trolling motors, depth finders, electronic thermometers, or oxygen meters.

For the hunter, there are rifles, shotguns, bows and arrows or other archery equipment, gun cases, elescopes, binoculars, gun racks, shells, decoys, hunting coats, pants, boots, caps, duck and goose calls, reloading tools, pocket and sheath knives, shooting glasses, cleaning kits or even sharpening stones.

For either the hunter or fisherman, there are tents, sleeping bags, air matresses, lanterns, thermos jugs, insulated inner and outer wear, rain gear, life-saving devices, ice chests, camp cook stoves and heaters or even camp cooking utensils.

Or if the sportsman on your list also likes to read, you might consider giving him a subscription to a hunting and fishing magazine, or making a gift of one of the many books on hunting, fishing, camping or woodslore which are available at most bookstores. Another possibility is "Kentucky Happy Hunting Grounds," the official publication of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. A one-year subscription (6 issues) costs $1.00 and is available from the Division of which any sportsman will find an absolute necessity. This gift will be good for an entire year, and the hunter or fisherman will need it each time he goes into the field or to the lake. This gift is a 1975 hunting or fishing license ($5.00 each) or a combination license ($9.00), good for both fishing and hunting. The 1974 licenses expire on Dec. 31, so one for next year can be used almost immediately.

Public Relations, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Finally, there is one gift

Licenses are available at the offices of all county clerks, and many sporting goods stores also sell them. You don't need to worry about a license being the wrong size or color, and it's a gift no sportsman will return. So get your shopping done early and avoid the rush.

Troy Bolen

Troy Bolen, 69, of Hueysville, died last Tuesday, November 26, at his home following an extended illness.

A retired miner, he was born January 28, 1905 at Boleyn, Ky., son of the late Lewis and Evelyn Sparkman Bolen. He was a member of the United Baptist Church.

Gallery To Publish Floyd Artist's Work

At age 23, Gary Akers has achieved a distinction few artists ever attain.

Two of his works are being published in limited editions by the Heritage Gallery Prints, Lexington.

One is entitled "Tattered Curtains," the other "Rusty Cans." They are among his favorites of the many he has done in the hills of his native Eastern Kentucky.

Today, Gary and his wife, Lynn, reside in Northern Kentucky, Florence, and both are teaching in the Kenton County school system.

He, armed with a master's degree from Morehead State University (MSU), is an art instructor at Turkeyfoot Junior High School. She, with a bachelor's degree from MSU, directs the ninth grade art class at Twenhofel Junior High School.

Gary has more than the distinction of limited edition prints. Last week the Ashland Area Art Gallery concluded a month-long showing of 50 of his works. It's not the first show for the young Floyd Countian who began sketching with a pencil when he was but five years

His work has been on display in the Huntington, W. Va., Art Gallery and at the Ashland Community College's Appalachia Artists '73 project.

Morehead also has seen his works in a one man show at the Johnson Camden Library on the university campus.

The two paintings now on limited sale are done in egg tempera, a medium used prior to the Renaissance when it was replaced with oils by many of the major masters. It lends itself to rich detailing, great light, translucency and brilliant color. The qualitities are evident in

He explained how egg tempera must be applied "a section at a time." Additionally, he said, the paint must not be applied too thickly or it will crack off the

"Tattered Curtains" and "Rusty Cans."

"Thus," he continued, "you must paint and repaint, section after section with thin coats until it has developed light, shadows and colors."

The Kenton County teacher also enjoys water color and drawing.

He gets his subject matter from "rural America for which I have a strong feeling through exposure to nature and farm-

Akers came to Northern Kentucky from a graduate teaching assistantship at Morehead. He credits his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Lum Mitchell of Grethel in Floyd County, with encouraging him in his work.

"Lynn, too, has been a help with her suggestions and comments and because of that my work is much better," he said. The modest young teacher, however, is not yet satisfied. "I feel," he explained, "I have a long way to go before I am completely satisfied with my work."

Health Notes

The Floyd County Health Department announces that a health nurse will conduct an outpost clinic Monday in the basement of the Methodist Church at Wayland from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The following free services will be available: TB skin tests, diabetes screening, blood pressures, immunizations and hemoglobin tests.

Region 11 Board Told Surplus Fund Applications OK'd

Representatives of Big Sandy school districts at a meeting here last Tuesday revealed they have received approval of forms asking for use of surplus federal funds for equipment. The application, which primarily precludes loss of such funds not only this year but in future years, was the subject of a trip to Washington by educators.

Disclosure of the approval came during the regular meeting of ROPES Region 11 board of directors.

Bronelle Skaggs, assistant ROPES director, told the board an application submitted for a pilot work experience program in the region's junior high grades is still being considered by the Appalachian Regional Commission. He also discussed competency based instruction whereby advanced credit is possible for students who demonstrate competency, and the forthcoming state evaluation of the region's vocational schools

Board members and guests also heard presentations by the following:

Dr. Fred Edmonds, Dr. Frank Colton, of Education, and Dr. James V. Bolen, Kentucky Center for Professional Development, who discussed the three main thrusts or functions of the Center. The Center offers services in continuing education, educational research, and educational services. These services are available on regional, district, and individual school levels.

Dr. James Powell, dean of the College of Education, and Dr. James V. Bolen, regional graduate programs coordinator, Morehead State University, discussed services available through MSU. Dr. Powell told the board Morehead has established graduate centers to meet the need for graduate classes off the Morehead campus and that Morehead's graduate enrollment has grown from 300 students in 1968 to 1,800 at the present

Dr. Bolen discussed the operation of the graduate centers. He said that the attitude of graduate students attending the centers is that they are glad to have opportunity to earn graduate credit without the necessity of leaving the region. He also stressed the importance of being able to work with graduate students on an individual basis.

Valentine acknowledged the group's gratitude to Mr. Reed and his coal company for their donation of matching funds; to Quentin Allen and Big Sandy Health Care, Inc. for their willingness to serve as the third party in handling the matching funds, and to James Thompson, of the Department of Human Resources, "for his creative openness in the negotiations leading to the sigining of

Seperate Raids Net 3 Prisoners

Ottis Hall was arrested Saturday night at his mobile home at Galveston after a search by Deputy Sheriffs Doug Lewis, Linzie Hunt, Sherman Williams, and Ray Reynolds netted the officers seven beers, two pints and one half-pint of whiskey. Hall was booked on a second offense possession charge in Magistrate Dewey Roberts' court.

An earlier raid, Friday by Deputy Sheriffs Slone, Lewis, Hunt, Williams, Ray Reynolds, John D. and Danny Martin, resulted in the arrests of two juveniles on possession of alcoholic beverages charges. The youths were arrested on a graveyard at Drift where 102 cans of beer were seized.

Allen City Policeman Virgil Conn charged Charles W. Deer, of Indiana, with possession of Marijuana and drunk driving Friday night at Allen. Officer Conn took a sandwich bag of "grass" from Deer and booked him in Allen police court. Deer paid a fine of $157, plus court costs.

Also within the week the Garrett Sundries store at Garrett was broken into and approximately $215 worth of merchandise was stolen. Entry to the store was gained by smashing the store-front plate glass window with a large rock and damage estimates roughly equal the amount lost in stolen merchandise. One juvenile has been arrested in the incident.

In another incident Phil Hall, of Branham's Creek vicinity, was arrested by Sheriff's deputies and charged with illegal possession of fireworks.

Others arrested over the past week, charges against each, and arresting officers follow:

James Roy Owens, drunk driving and no operator's license, by Deputy Doug Lewis; James Poston, Jr., drunk driving. by State Trooper Webb; Donald Haller, concealed deadly weapon, by Wheelwright Policeman H. Johnson; Michael Akers, drunk driving, by State Troopers Bevins and Estep; Darwin L. Taylor, drunk driving, by State Trooper Bevins; Polly Spaulding, shoplifting, by City Policemen Potter and Lafferty.

MCCC's Maytown Center Services Discussed

Members of the Maytown Women's Club met with officials of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center (MCCC) November 25 to discuss services being offered at the new Maytown Adult Activity Center there.

The center, housed in the old Maytown Grade School building less than three months, offers a wide range of activities for mentally handicapped persons.

Robert Wildman, supervisor of MCC-C's Developmental Disabilities Services program in Floyd county, told the group MCCC has hopes of expanding the center to allow for a larger number of students in the future. With its present staff, the center is at or near its capacity.

Additional space isn't a real problem for expansion, however. Currently, the center's entire operation is housed on the third floor of the old school, with the two bottom floors vacant.

Charles Hicks, teaching supervisor for the center, conducted the group on a brief tour of the third floor facilities.

"The center is intended primarily to provide services for retarded adults," he explained. At present, the age range for students who participate in the center's activities is from 16 to 45.

"Our purpose is to help these people become as independent as possible," he said. "For the first time in their lives. many of them are being treated as adults."

Tim Atkinson, director of all MCCC activities in Floyd county, briefly summarized the history of local mental health services, noting that MCCC, actually a non-profit corporation, is the functional arm of the 11th District Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc.

The MH-RM Board is made up of five citizens from each of the five counties in the Big Sandy Area Development District. The other counties are Pike, Martin, Johnson and Magoffin. County mental health associations elect representatives to the district board from their respective areas.

Centers such as the one at Maytown, which is open five days a week, will do much to cut the number of persons who have to be hospitalized outside the district, Mr. Atkinson noted.

"As a result of their availability, very few people will have to be hospitalized at Eastern State Hospital at Lexington in the future," he said.

The Maytown women have shown a great deal of interest in the activity center located here, offering to donate time, money and materials.

"We're certainly glad to have the center here," one of the women remarked during the tour of the facility.

Paintsville Group Asks Local Option Vote, January 31st

A petition asking a local option election for the city of Paintsville was ready for filing with the Johnson County Court this

The election, to be held only in Paintsville's five voting precincts, is being requested for Jan. 31: The petition bearing approximately 1,000 signatures specifies that only packaged liquors—no beer-be sold at four licensed dispensaries in the city.

If the vote is approved, it will be the first local option election since Paintsville was voted dry in 1944 by a margin of about 3 to 1.

Paintsville's City Council will later be asked to adopt ordinances governing liquor sales, it was said. This legislation would provide for an alcohol administrator and usage tax on liquor sales of perhaps 6 per cent.

Workers Agree On Wage Scale

Union employees of Columbia Gas of Kentucky and the Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. last Friday voted to accept terms of a one-year wage contract which raises basic pay of all employees 42 cents an hour, with hourly wage increments nine job classifications.

The new contract was accepted a day prior to expiration of the old wage pact. Effective Dec. 1, the new contract will end Nov. 30, 1975. Approximately 1,500 union employees in Eastern and Central Kentucky and in portions of West Virginia and Virginia are affected.

A second hourly pay increase by work grades will take effect next June 1. The increases by job grades which became effective Dec. 1 follow:

Grades 2 and 3, 2c; Grades 4 and 5, 4c Grade VI, 8c; Grade VII, 6c; Grade VIII, 11c; Grade IX, 13 cents.

The June 1 raises by grades, II through IX, are, respectively, 3, 2, 4, 4, 4, 6 and 9c for the last two grades.

Prior to the new agreement, the wage scale ranged from $3.49 an hour to $5.12.

Hilltop Community Plans Announced

A community of at least 30 homes in a picturesque mountaintop location near here is envisioned by two local developers.

The development, which will be known as Mountain View Estates, begins at a point near where old US 23 crests Abbott Mountain and extends along the hill overlooking Abbott Creek a distance of more than a mile.

Two $50,000 homes already are under construction in the development area. Building will be restricted so that no home of less than 1600 square feet of floor space will be built there. Lots will range from 100 to 400 feet in width.

Adrian Lafferty and Bill Bayer, the developers, have under construction a six-inch water line from the Prestonsburg municipal system to the development area and will install a 10,000-gallon water reservoir. This work is being done at their expense and the improvements will be a gift to the water system, they said. Electric power and natural gas will

The developers have built 5,500 feet of roadway through the property and are now preparing for gravel surfacing of the road. Improvements being made are valued at $45-$50,000.
