ASTERN - The Floyd County rd of Education may soon have w option for providing instrucuon to students when inclement weather or other circumstances keeps the doors to schools closed.

Supt. Henry Webb addressed the board and those in attendance at a meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education at Allen Central High School on Monday, talking briefly about a suggestion from the Kentucky Department of Education to form a committee that will research ways to utilize computers and technology to continue instruction despite the fact that students are not in the class-

"We know that it will include using technology so teachers can provide assignments and instruction to students when they are at home and count that as an attendance day," Webb said. "The commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Education is open to looking at alternative kinds of ways to meet the needs of kids. The committee will be having conversations with the KDE about the feasibility of making this happen."

According to Webb, the committee to discuss the proposed idea will be formed this week and should meet soon to learn more about what the option will entail.

While Webb is excited about the idea, he also said there are plenty of questions that need to be addressed, including how to utilize the option for those students who don't have computers at home.

"It's a wonderful idea and a terrific option," Webb said. "It's just making it happen that is the next step. There are a lot of questions that we have to get answered before we go down that road."

Prestonsburg city employees and administrators loaded bottled water behind Wal-Mart Friday morning. The water, along with numerous other supplies, was shipped to Pike County the same day to assist flood victims.

PIKEVILLE - A flash flood that Pike County Judge-Wayne Executive-Rutherford, a five-term judge, said was something "unlike anything" he'd seen during his time in office, dropped nearly 10 inches of rain across Pike County Saturday.

The areas of Raccoon Creek and Harless Creek were hardest hit, according to statements released by county officials in the days following the flooding. Raccoon, it has been reported by emergency officials in Pike County, was close to being completely destroyed. "It's awful," Rutherford said. "I've never seen anything like it in all my years of public service. "It's a disaster if I've

Court clears way for state funds

PRESTONSBURG - The Floyd County Fiscal Court approved incoming funds through House Bill 1 Friday morning, authorizing them into a priority list covering 2010, 2011 and 2012.

"This list of projects that fall under that bill will be prioritized in the coming weeks," said Floyd County Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall.

For 2010, the court gave authorization to Marshall to prepare proper documentation for $65,000 in funding to the Disabled American Veterans Post 128 for equipment and operating expenses, according to court records provided during Friday's meeting.

For the list of projects relating to 2011, the county voted for the same authorization on some 20 projects when funding becomes available through the Department of Local Government.

Among those projects were $100,000

Rescue Squad deserves thanks from all of us

We could not be more proud of a group of people than we are of the volunteers who comprise the Floyd County Rescue Squad.

During the recent flooding in Pike County, the Rescue Squad pulled 36 people from the raging waters, some in their homes, some in their cars and some swept away. Surely, many of those could very well have perished had it not been for their actions.

Those who were rescued, and those who love them, certainly owe the Rescue Squad a debt of gratitude. And the chest of every Floyd Countian should swell with pride and admiration over the feats of these brave volunteers.

But we can also think of a more tangible way to offer thanks. Next week marks the 44th annual radio auction to support the Floyd County Rescue Squad. What better time is there than now for every Floyd Countian to give support to an organization that has proved its worth time and time again?

A legislative perspective

by REP. GREG STUMBO SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

For thousands of children attending school, the biggest challenge of the day may not be tied to the classroom, but to their

A little more than 18 months ago, the General Assembly's Program Review Investigations Committee began taking a closer look at this issue, to see what more the state might do to help those students facing a chronic disease or a potentially life-threatening allergy.

Though exact numbers are hard to pin down, the committee's survey of the state's school districts estimates that they have about 32,000 children with asthma, 2,500 with epilepsy and 1,700 with Type I diabetes the three most common chronic conditions in our schools — plus 4,600 children with severe allergies to such things as peanuts.

The report adopted by the committee concluded that Kentucky needs more statewide consistency when it comes to these students' healthcare. It recommended more oversight of school health services by the Department of Education and greater coordination between local health departments and the state's Department for Public

The results of the committee's survey suggest that more day-to-day care is needed as well. It found that about 17 percent of our schools don't have ready access to a licensed healthcare provider at all, while nearly half have one who is there part-time or on-call. Only a little more than a third have one onsite throughout the day.

If the districts hired additional nurses to provide what they think is adequate coverage, it would take over 370 more working full-time in the schools, according to the committee. That would increase the number currently working by more than half, and take us below the 750students-per-nurse ratio recommended by the National Association of School Nurses. When it comes to severe allergies, the best medicine is often prevention. The vast majority of school districts said they would make sure cafeteria staff is aware if any student had a food-based allergy. About two-thirds of the districts would provide a nut-free classroom if necessary, and a fourth would eliminate nuts from the school altogether.

This year, the state is taking further steps to improve the health needs of our youngest citizens. During the legislative session that ended in April, for example, the General Assembly adopted a prominent new law to extend better insurance coverage to children diagnosed with autism.

Those whose families are enrolled in large-group health insurance plans will now be eligible for up to $50,000 annually between their first and seventh birthdays, and $12,000 annually from then until they turn 21.

In the United States, one child in 110 is diagnosed with autism, and a 2006 study said that this applied to nearly 2,400 children in Kentucky. Research proves that proper treatment the earlier the better - can result in near-miraculous results. Without that care, other research shows that the societal cost for each child could top $3 million over his or her lifetime.

This cause is very dear to me and to our region. Recently, I was proud to host my annual fundraiser at Stonecrest to help families with their costs, and the Highlands Center for Autism is a renowned leader in providing world-class care. It is a true iewel for Kentucky.

In another healthcare-related matter, five- and six-year-old children entering public school this fall for the first time will now have to have a dental exam before next January, under a requirement that became law in 2008. This builds on other required health screenings for vision and immunizations. The General Assembly made this possible to better tackle the

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COLLINS

Keeping DUI offenders off the road with breathalyzers linked to their vehicle's ignition system is not a new idea.

It's certainly not new in Kentucky, where judges have the discretion to order ignition interlock devices for DUI offenders. What judges cannot do, despite recent legislative attempts, is mandate use of the devices as part of every DUI sentencing in the state. And some-including the Kentucky Department of Advocacy, which represents about two-thirds of the state's DUI defendants-want to keep it that way.

Public Advocate Monahan told the state legislative Interim Joint Commission on Judiciary in mid July that his office has three main concerns about legislation that would make the device mandatory: the cost of the device (estimated at $70 per month per vehicle), the effectiveness of the device, and taking away judicial discretion on when the device is necessary. Most states that have made the device mandatory for DUI offenders include provisions in their law that make the device affordable for indigent clients, said Public Advocacy employee

Damon Preston, but, he added,

there is still the question of the device's effectiveness.

Preston said there is plenty of information as to when the system do not work, and said "When they don't work, it's a real consequence." Failure or ineffectiveness of the device could, for example, prevent someone from getting to work or making an emergency trip to the hospital, he said, whether that individual is the DUI offender or a family member.

A representative of the Canadian-based Traffic Injury Research Foundation who spoke to the committee before the Department of Public Advocacy described the devices as very effective. Robyn Robertson said the devices generally reduce recidivism-or being re-arrested for DUI-at a rate of between 35 percent to 90 percent and are considered the third most costeffective way to prevent recidivism in some cost-benefit analy-

Then there are situations like a case in Laurel County that Preston shared with lawmakers. In that case, Preston said, a sober man with an ignition interlock device on his vehicle was unable to start his engine because his device confused the scent of bologna sandwich on his breath with the smell of alco-

Sen. Ray Jones, a Pikevillebased attorney who has represented many families whose loved ones were involved in drug or DUI-related crashes, said he believes the state should require probationary licenses for those who have been convicted of DUI and are on probation or who have had a prior license suspension as a result of DUI. Stricter penalties for those who do not follow an order to use an ignition interlock device could also be imposed, he said. Jones said he plans on drafting a piece of legislation between now and December of this year that would address the issue. A 2010 state law that Jones was instrumental in passing will discourage drugged or drunk driving by creating a "per se". DUI offense allowing drivers to be charged with DUI if illegal drugs or certain prescription drugs not prescribed to the driver are found during a blood test. The law will also make it easier to prosecute a DUI offender who injures or kills someone in a car crash while driving while intox-

Committee Co-Chair Sen. Tom Jensen of London asked Robertson if states which require use of ignition interlock devices are using the devices in lieu of suspending a person's license or in addition to license suspension. Robertson said suspension is limited when devices are used, in most cases, and suspension is short. She added that some states mandate the devices early "instead of letting (offenders) learn that they don't need a license to drive.'

Another survey several years ago discovered that most of our counties don't have a pediatric dentist, and 15 only had one dentist for the county's total popula-

All of these health concerns, not to mention the problems caused by seasonal and now swine flu outbreaks, underscore the importance of doing even more to improve the health of our children in school. Our task as a state is to make sure all of our students can focus on academics while knowing that care, should they ever need it, is always close by.

transition a child back to their home who has previously been removed," said John Schindlebower, the associate director of communications for Sunrise Children's Services.

Eligible families are referred by the Department of Community Based Services and will be contacted within 72 hours by trained specialists from Sunrise. These specialists will be available around the clock to work with the families, Shindlebower said. "The specialists will help teach skills, promote and model positive parenting and connect families with community services," he said.

The assistance will vary based on the needs of the individual families and can last anywhere from 4-to-27 weeks, Shindlebower added.

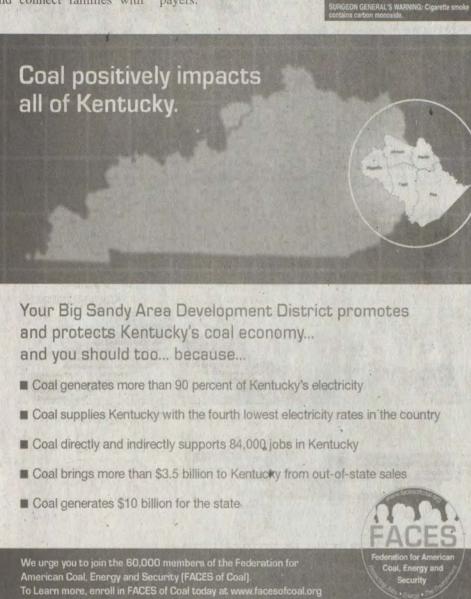

The program is envisioned as a "proactive step" to help families stay together and help them learn how to deal with situations in a "constructive, nonabusive manner." There is also the added incentive the organization says that a state evaluation of the program suggests it can be a significant savings to Kentucky taxpayers.

The program is available to families across the commonwealth's 120 counties through contracts, which is how Sunrise came about providing the service to Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike counties.

State Department of Education reorganiz

Kentucky Department of Education (KDE) is embarking on a new model of organization that is designed to make the agency more streamlined and efficient and to help provide services more effectively.

This reorganization proposal delineates a model that focuses on next-generation learners; next-generation schools and districts;

support and services for all the agency's constituents; information and data services; and more. KDE began operating under this new structure on Monday, July 19, and an executive order from the Governor's Office formalizing the new organization will be forthcoming.

"This proposed reorganization addresses two major issues," said Kentucky Education Commissioner Terry Holliday. "First, this model will incur annual cost savings of approximately $500,000 in salaries with the elimination of higher-level positions and increase the efficiency of the agency. Second, this model enables the agency to directly address priorities related to Senate Bill 1 and other legislative mandates, Kentucky's Race to the Top application and Kentucky Board Education's strategic plan.'

The highlights of this model include:

a structure that provides more direct reporting to the commissioner of education from KDE offices

a logical distribution of programs, projects and teams based upon KDE's core, guiding and support processes

grouping of efforts that address common activities and issues

The proposed organizational hierarchy is as follows:

■ The current structure of eight offices is streamlined to six offices, with a primary focus on the Kentucky Board Education's strategic priori-

■ The number of operational divisions in KDE also is reduced by a third due to consolidation and redirection of strategic priorities.

■ Some office, division and branch names have been changed to reflect the changes in priorities and

The attached organizational chart and listing give more specifics about the makeup of offices, divisions and branches.

Although office names have changed, and individuals within the agency may be assigned to new areas, KDE's mission is the same: to prepare all Kentucky students for next-generation learning, work and citizenship by engaging schools, districts, families and communities through excellent leadership, service and sup-

The proposed new organizational model will enable the agency to target the areas of greatest importance and provide the services schools and districts need to ensure student success, while complying with additional budget reductions required by the biennial budget shortfall.

AG warns against price-gouging in wake of flooding

FRANKFORT

Attorney General Jack Conway last week put Kentucky businesses on notice that price-gouging will not be tolerated during times of emergency.

Gov. Steve Beshear declared a state of emergency for the state on July 21, after severe thunderstorms and deadly flash flooding in a number of Kentucky counties on July 17 and 20. Gov. Beshear also signed an executive order to implement Kentucky's price-gouging laws statewide.

"Gov. Beshear and I both want to ensure that Kentuckians who are suffering as a result of these deadly storms are not victimized a second time by unscrupulous businesses,' General Conway said. "I will investigate and prosecute those who seek excessive profits during times of emergency.

Gov. Beshear's emergency declaration triggers several consumer protection measures that will remain in place for 30 days. As a result, the Attorney General is empowered to investigate and prosecute, where appropriate, those who sell gasoline, generators, building supplies, chain saws, hotel rooms and other necessary goods and services at an exorbitant price during a time of disaster.

Attorney General Conway launched a pricegouging investigation following Hurricane Ike and the subsequent wind storm that swept across Kentucky September Investigators followed up on more than 2,000 emails and calls from across the Commonwealth on possible price-gouging complaints related to the storm. General Conway's pricegouging investigation resulted in recoveries of more than $100,000 against eight retail stations in several different Kentucky com-

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE The queen of oils

by SANDY MILLER HAYS AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

A few years ago, my husband and I were lucky enough to take a vacation in Crete, a truly magical place. We stayed in the ancient city of Rethymnon, which apparently was built on the site of an even older city called Rithymna, which flourished during the Mycenean era between 1600 B.C. and 1100 B.C. Many of the buildings in Rethymnon, including the hotel where we stayed, date to the 1500s.

Mixed in with the unforgettable sights and scents of Rethymnon (especially at an eye-popping spice store located near a gorgeous Venetian archway) was the incredible experience of the foods there. Rethymnon is where I really came to love and appreciate the "queen of oils": olive oil, so light and lovely and flavorful, I was almost tempted to drink it from a glass!

Of course, if you're up on your health news, you know that virgin olive oil is a great choice for preparing meals or even dipping breads. But an international team that included a scientist from the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) has given us even more reasons to love the queen of oils: the impact on our genes.

The researchers already knew, from the findings of other studies, that consuming high-phénolic_content virgin olive oil reduces certain proinflammation, pro-oxidant, pro-bloodclotting biomarkers in our bodies, compared with consuming low_phenolic_content olive oil. But they wanted to find out if olive oil's beneficial effects could be the result of gene

The researchers fed 20 volunteers all of whom had metabolic syndrome - with two virgin-olive-oilbased breakfasts, one at a time. In case you're wondering what "metabolic syndrome" is, you probably know someone who has it: It's a combination of abdominal obesity, high triglycerides, high blood pressure and poor blood sugar control, all of which increase the risk of heart disease and diabetes.

One of the experimental breakfasts in the study contained virgin olive oil with high levels of phenolic compounds (398 parts per million), and the other breakfast contained olive oil that had lower levels of the phenolic compounds (only 70 parts per million). All the volunteers ate the same low-fat, carb-rich "background" diet during all phases of the study.

After the volunteers ate, the researchers tracked the expression of more than 15,000 human genes in the volunteers' blood cells. The results? Seventy-nine genes were "turned down" and 19 genes were "turned up" by the high-phenolic_content virgin olive oil. Many of these genes affected by the virgin olive oil are linked to obesity, high blood-fat levels, type 2 diabetes and heart disease.

Most important of all: Several of the genes that were "turned down" by the virgin olive oil are known promoters of the internal inflammation that often accompanies metabolic syndrome. This could help us understand why there's a reduced risk of heart disease among people living in Mediterranean countries where virgin olive oil is the main source of dietary Another important element to include in your diet: vitamin D. As I've mentioned previously, vitamin D is easy to find in the foods we eat; it's in cheese, butter, cream and milk, and it's also in fish, oysters, many fortified breakfast cereals, and margarine.

New information from research funded by ARS supports the evidence that there's a link between vitamin D and the functioning of the brain, called "cognitive function." Cognitive function is measured by the level at which the brain is able to manage and use information to carry out the activities of daily life. Metabolic pathways for

Battlefield Corridor Project shines light on need for park

by JARRID DEATON FEATURES WRITER

The recent Battlefield Corridor Project, an event designed to highlight the Civil War battles that took place at Middle Creek in Floyd County and Puncheon/Half Mountain in Magoffin County, was considered a success by those involved.

"It was also an effort to form closer ties between our respective counties and to acknowledge our common heritage and history," said Randall Risner, with the Battlefield Corridor Project. "But the main objective was for both counties to highlight the need for a Civil War park in south Magoffin County, and to explore, preserve and reenact the history of what took place

The group worked closely with officials in both Floyd and Magoffin County to promote the project.

"The effort proved fruitful and loads of fun for everyone who participated," Risner said. "We were able to forge strong ties with Freddie James and Sam Hatcher, of Floyd County Tourism, and we were able to work with the Friends, of Middle Creek with whom we already have a good relationship. We also formed close ties with the South Magoffin Community Activists group.'

"The competition serves as a shining example of the Job Corps program's success with nurturing the artistic talents of these gifted students," said Dr. Francis Cole, Job Corps regional director in Philadelphia. "Our students consistently display amazing creative ability, as evidenced by the number of inquiries we receive each year from the general public about purchasing their artwork."

They were arrested two weeks ago after a lengthy investigation by the Johnson County Sheriff's Department and Kentucky State Police into a string of burglaries and attacks on two Johnson County residents. The Prestonsburg Fire Department and Ambulance Service respond to the scene of one vehicle accident near the community of Dwale Wednesday. The driver of a pickup truck apparently lost control of his vehicle while traveling south on US 23. The vehicle left the right lane, crossed the highway and jumped the guardrail into the northbound lane. # Twenty Years Ago

(July 25 & 27, 1990)

How Floyd County plans to handle the out-of-county, out-of-state dumping of hazardous or household garbage was one question addressed during the Friday meeting of the Floyd County Fiscal Court. The answer on the surface appears simple: regulate it. But, according to County Attorney Jim Hammond, this is not such an easy task

The US House of Representatives last week approved a comprehensive education and labor funding bill that includes increases for black lung claimaints and the Job Corps training program, according to Congressman Chris Perkins. "The fund is the only means by which thousands of former coal miners can receive compensation for the problems afflicting them," Perkins said

In response to recent discussions with Kentucky Secretary of Transportation Milo Bryant, Prestonsburg City Council at a special meeting, Tuesday, made a formal request that the Bert T. Combs Bridge be removed from the extended weight coal haul road system. This relieved Prestonsburg from the liability for the bridge, said City Administrator Fred James. Once the resolution is received and processed by the Department of Transportation, the bridge will be permanently closed to trucks weighing more than 80,000 pounds. Trucks over that weight will be rerouted to the Mountain Parkway (KY 114) to Salversville and then over US 460 to Paintsville, where they may once again travel US 23 North. Unloaded trucks would be allowed to continue passage on the bridge

In a month or two, all property in Floyd County will begin to get a long-deserved second look. Floyd is one of 25 counties in Kentucky, most of them in eastern Kentucky, that will experience a complete property reassessment over the next two years, according to State Property Tax Commissioner James Coffman. The reassessment, Coffman said yesterday from his Frankfort office, "doesn't mean every parcel will go up in valuation. Some may go down, others will stay the same." The commissioner said the reassessments in the 25 counties are being made possible through additional funding approved by the General Assembly in its recent session with the extra $6 million in state monies, revenue officers can go into each county for a systematic reevaluation of property
