Floyd County to Have 4 Magisterial Districts, Appeals Judge Decides

COURT OF APPEALS GRANTS INJUNCTION IN ELECTION CASE

High Court Holds Re-Districting of County Into Eight Districts Invalid

The race for magistrate and constable in Floyd county was thrown into turmoil Saturday as Judge Gus Thomas of the Court of Appeals granted an injunction to restrain County Court Clerk A. B. Meade from printing ballots for candidates in the recently created eight magisterial districts of the county. Judge Thomas directed the clerk to print ballots for the four original districts and include in these four the names of candidates who were running in the eight districts. Validity of the reapportionment of Floyd county into eight magisterial districts had been attacked in a suit filed against A. B. Meade, as clerk of Floyd county, by Attorney C. B. Wheeler for Lee Alley, et al.

Grounds for the suit were based upon the fact that there was no necessity for the change and the redistricting was made without an adequate survey of the county. Before the injunction was granted by the Court of Appeals, the suit was heard in the Knott circuit court at Hindman by Judge John W. Caudill who upheld the division of the county into eight districts. Attorney Wheeler immediately appealed the case.

CHARLES HANSFORD SHOT BY JOHNSON, WOUND NOT SERIOUS

Versions of Hansford Shooting at Martin Monday Conflicting

With conflicting rumors abounding, and public sentiment reported to be aroused at Martin a correct version concerning the shooting of Charles Hansford by Deputy Constable Gus Johnson at Elam's cafe in Martin, Monday, is still a matter of conjecture. This shooting happened near the place Johnson shot and killed Alton Patton almost a year ago. Hansford is now recovering from a pistol wound in the shoulder at Stumbo Memorial hospital, Lacey.

SPANISH WAR VETS PLAN YEARLY JAUNT

Vets Will Go To Ohio For Annual Trip Aug. 22

All Spanish War veterans will start their annual pilgrimage Aug. 22 to Columbus, Ohio, where the National Convention of the United Spanish War veterans will convene for four days.

Owing to the central location of Columbus, this will be the largest gathering of the vets of '08 ever held. They will come from every quarter of the globe. Every county in the state of Kentucky will be represented. These conventions are the one bright spot in the lives of veterans, as old acquaintances are renewed and old yarns retold; reunions of companies, regiments and brigades will be held.

On Wednesday, August 25, the streets of Columbus will resound to the tread of thousands of feet marching to the martial music of drum corps and old tunes by many bands. Columbus has spared no expense in preparing for this occasion and arrangements have been made for entertainments that will long be remembered by every man and woman who attend. Their slogan is "On to Columbus."

Kentucky headquarters has been established at Hotel Fort Hayes and reservations are coming in fast.

FLOYD CCC BOY SHOT FLOYD SENDS 20 TO IN CLAY CO. AFFRAY ANNUAL CLUB MEET

Noah Alley, 23, Son of Lee Alley, is Killed Near Manchester

Shot in the abdomen with a pistol during an affray in a roadhouse near the CCC camp in Clay county where he was stationed, Noah Alley, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Alley of Branham's Creek near here, succumbed shortly afterwards in a hospital at London, Ky., Aug. 4.

At Manchester, county seat of Clay county, officers reported they were holding two men, Bert Lawson and Taylor England. Charges against them of shooting with intent to kill were changed to murder after Alley's death. Officers declined to discuss details of the shooting. Alley died without naming his assailant, or explaining the cause of the affray.

With Alley at the time of the trouble were two fellow CCC enrollees, Lieut. Eldon Evans and Roy Anderson, 19, of Barbourville. Anderson, who was also wounded in the fight, was treated at the camp for an arm injury. Alley's body was returned to Floyd county for burial on Branham's Creek. Funeral services were conducted at 2 p. m. Tuesday by the Rev. Pack Hall and E. V. Hamilton. Burial was made by the Ryan Funeral Home.

Alley is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Alley, two brothers, Edward and Orrin, and by two sisters, Mrs. Betty Newman and Miss Mary Alley.

Fish Fry, Annual Rally Planned For "Breaks"

Plans were made at a meeting of the directors of the Pike County Fish and Game Association Monday evening, held in Pikeville, to entertain several thousand who will attend the Fish Fry of the Breaks Reserve and Restoration Association to be held at the fish hatchery at Elkhead Sunday, Aug. 15.

This will be the annual meeting of the Breaks Reserve Restoration Association at which over five thousand were present last year. Notably known speakers will express their views on the possibility of adding the 128,000 acres to the Jefferson National Forest, which project will be taken before the National Forest Reservation Committee in Washington late this month. If the project is approved, this area will become one of the mecca for hunters of wild game and millions of dollars will be spent in this section by the government purchasing land, and thereafter millions will be spent annually by hunters on their annual vacations.

The deer herd recently released in this area is being watched carefully and many have reported seeing these wild deer roam the ranges accompanied by several of the newly-born fawn. Game wardens are protecting these deer.

Several Congressmen have promised to speak before the gathering if a recess at Washington permits them to leave the capitol. Lee Long, of Dante, Va., president of the reforestation group, will preside and the 12 directors of the Kentucky Virginia area will be present.

The fish fry will be in charge of a committee composed of E. D. Wells, Beech Grove, Herford, J. E. Carney, Robert Johnson, and Game Warden Jude Williamson who have arranged for sufficient fish for 2,000, which will be fried at the picnic and served as a plate lunch at a charge of 25c per plate. Booths have been planned where food other than

Four Magistrates, Four Constables to Be Elected Here Instead of Eight

For the second time within two weeks, Floyd county's candidates for magistrate and constable met at the courthouse, Sunday, to draw for position on the August 7 election ballot. County Court Clerk A. B. Meade placed the names of all candidates running in the eight districts on the election ballots, to be printed for the four original districts. The names follow in the order in which they will appear on the ballot, barring last minute withdrawals.

Democratic candidates for magistrate in District 1:

- Sam G. Rice, Bob Damron, Glenn Burchett, Fred A. Baldridge, Sherd Waddle, Jerry Stephens, Ed J. Horn, Evelyn Harris, Corey, Mill Stanley, Melvin Webb, W. H. (Hager) Ussley, Elmer Wright, Jesse Holbrook, John Derossett, Darvis Pitts, John B. Laferty, Penn Fitzpatrick.

More candidates have withdrawn this week, than in any other. Those officially marked

Hugh Bradley Says

Pros and Amateurs Alike Beat Rules So More Fun's Due

IT PROBABLY IS just as well that the Congressional Record keeps the more pious fretters about the nation's naughtiness so busy that they have no time for the sports pages.

For instance, there was the recent merriment in Brooklyn when the young Red, Lee Grissom, slid into Babe Phelps, raked his spikes into the catcher's meaty arm and received a few pokes in the lugs.

It was a moment which, no doubt, horrified the good citizens of a borough which is not accustomed to such boisterous doings from mere $8,000 a year ball players.

Ever since David found a way to beat the weight in his well publicized contest with Goliath, the rules of sports have been subjected to considerable monkey business.

There was, for instance, the Old Oriole device for persuading runners to linger at third base.

There are certain other episodes which also have been mentioned in connection with purely amateur sports affairs, lest it be considered that too much stress is given here to the carryings on of the pros.

When Don Meade initiated a regiment of Cossacks while winning a Kentucky Derby some seasons ago, there were numerous high class folks who roundly deplored such tactics.

One of the events was for lady riders and it was evident from the start that only two of the girls had a chance.

After that they really got down to business. They finished the race whipping. But, for once, both horses got a break.

Golf also has had its moments. Once—this is for the greater education of those who squawk that the United States has exclusive privileges along such lines—an American went to England to compete in a tournament.

For the greater glory of the homeland, the tournament committee—probably composed of the same gees who bowed the winning American Ryder Cup team—moved the tees a mere 20 yards or so farther away from the greens.

This was almost as good as the not too distant season when the hospitable French soaked their tennis courts so that their soft game players would not be inconvenienced against hard-hitting Americans.

Perhaps the crusaders for a better life would be immensely soothed if this space contained a moral directed at the young men who have been waving bouquets on the ball fields this season.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: HURDLER SPEC TOWNS IS RECALLED

Colters insist that the National Open scoring next year will be a joke, with the winning mark probably as low as 200.

Summer vacations have not halted the arguments at Lafayette, once one of the better football institutions.

Jerry Day, Hill's tennis star, and Tommy Pierce, eastern intercollegiate golf champion, are passing up college studies to enter Babson institute.

Lawson Little feels something should be done about the amateur golf situation.

Francis is the only team to score in every game it played at Wright field last season.

Fred Fitzsimmons and Waite Hoyt have carried on a friendly yet persistent argument ever since they joined the Dodgers.

Lee Grissom of the Reds pitched two shutouts in one day while performing for Fort Worth against Houston in 1935.

The hint is out that Ducky Pond is nearly through at Yale.

Golden Text: Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father." — James 1:17

Last week we had the account of the wonderful delivery by God of the children of Israel from the pursuing Egyptians at the brink of the Red Sea. This event had a remarkable effect upon Moses and they expressed their jubilation in song. Miriam, the prophetess-sister of Moses, sang a song of praise unto Jehovah and Moses also delivered a song of praise and adoration unto God for his wonderful deliverance.

It is surprising then to find the Hebrews in a very short time murmuring against their fate, when after a three days' journey into the wilderness, they complained that the waters at Marah were bitter. Moses, by divine direction, cured the waters so that they could all drink. Shortly after wards the Israelites made their next stop at the beautiful oasis of Elim.

After a month's stay at Elim, the Israelites took up their journey again and began marching through the desert country east of the Red Sea in a southeasterly direction. Realizing the nature of the country through which they were passing and the large number of people they had with them, they naturally began to wonder, and with their wondering, came the fear that there would not be food enough to supply their needs.

Once again they began to be dissatisfied with their Lord. Forgetting their hardships and cruel treatment in Egypt, they began to murmur among themselves against Moses, accusing him of having selfishly created their hardships in Egypt to perish in the wilderness. "How like the childish extravagant words of complaint heard today their words sound. They have all ready forgotten the hardships of their life of bondage, the taskmaster's lash and other cruelties. They remember the hardships, but not the afflictions. Human nature does not change. Furnitures still have short memories. The spectacles of regret magnify past blessings and dwarf past sufferings."

God proves, by his healings which murmuring Hebrews, that he knows our hearts, he knows our needs and his knows, better than any one else ever will know, whether we love him and are willing to trust him and do his will. God knew the needs of the Israelites and, better still, he supplied those needs. He made miraculous provision for these people, sending an adequate supply of food for them throughout their forty years of wilderness wandering. Every morning for six days of the week he sent bread or manna, and every evening for six days he provided meat, in the form of quails, food for the seventh, or day of rest, was to be gathered on the sixth day and no matter how they looked, they could find nothing to gather on the seventh day.

"The supply of manna," says Cunningham Geikie, "has been variously explained. One theory which has met with favor from many is that manna was simply the sugary exudations from the twigs of the tamarisk tree, which from the earliest years has been called 'man' or 'manna' by the Arabs. Another idea has been advanced, that of its having been derived from the manna, a plant known in various countries. There is an ediblelichen which sometimes falls in showers several inches deep, the wind having blown it from the spots where it grew, and carried it onward."

However miraculous seems the sending of the manna from heaven, it is no more miraculous than the "seed" and "sowing" times of our day. Just think of the miracle of growth — we plant seeds of various kinds. Each little seed knows exactly what it needs to extract from the soil for its own needs. Thousands of varieties of seeds may be sown, and each one has something in itself that guides it true to its own particular "type" and form, to its own color and particular fragrance. A miracle — certainly no less!

There is one thought which might be profitable for us to dwell on a bit in connection with the sending by God of his blessings to these Hebrews. It is this: They had something to do in order to avail themselves of the benefits. They were commanded to "gather" the manna and "catch" the quail. We want to have the benefits of the blessings of God, we must be willing to "do" the will of God.

Later, passing on deeper into the desert, the people complained again and became so insistent in their demand for water that Moses called upon God for help. God told Moses to go to Mount Horeb, where he would find a certain rock. He was told to strike the rock and water sufficient for the people and all their cattle, would be supplied. Obeying, Moses struck the rock and water gushed forth. Surely, these provisions for the material needs of the children of Israel by God should have caused them to have a deep, undying faith in him, just as God's provisions for our temporal needs should prove to us our dependence upon a merciful and beneficent God.

HANSFORD SHOT BY BYS JOHNSON

According to information gleaned from the county judge's office here, Hansford, accompanied by Lewis Lloyd, was driving toward Martin in an automobile. En route they picked up Harrison Stone, who claimed they robbed him of $50 at the point of a gun and then ejected him from the car. (An affidavit to this effect is now filed with County Judge pro tem T. B. Akers.)

When Stone informed Officer Gus Johnson that he had been robbed, Johnson, accompanied by Officers W. J. and Sol Warrick, found Hansford and Lewis in Elam's restaurant at Martin.

Judge Akers said that Gus Johnson told him that his boy was "accidentally" discharged into Hansford's shoulder as he struck him while making the arrest. Hansford and Lewis were brought here and lodged in the county jail by the three officers. Jail records charged them with highway robbery.

Judge Akers stated, however, that the gun, reported by the officers to have been used in the robbery, was not found. Neither was the $50 found.

The conflicting version of the affair as told by eyewitnesses in Elam's restaurant is to the effect that Hansford and Lewis were acting suspiciously. Hansford was drinking coca cola and Lewis was preparing to place a nickel in a phonograph machine when the officers entered.

Witnesses advised that Gus Johnson's, whose recent Floyd circuit court sentence for the slaying of Alton Patton at Martin was reversed by the Court of Appeals, attacked Hansford without making any statement to him. After Hansford was knocked to the floor, Johnson shot him, the bullet entering the back of the shoulder. At this time other officers were said to have been arresting Lewis. (Some time that night Lewis was kicked in the head.)

Judge Akers said that near midnight Monday he was awakened by jail attendants.

Pilgrims, Puritans Were Not Excessive in Dress

For reasons of conscience and economy, the Pilgrims and Puritans frowned on extravagance in dress, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News. Massachusetts records show that each settler was provided with four pairs of shoes and stockings, two suits of doublet and hose, four shirts, one woolen suit (leather-lined) with extra breeches, two handkerchiefs, one cotton waistcoat, leather belt, black hat, three caps, a cloak and two pairs of gloves.

In 1634, laws passed by the Massachusetts general court forbade the use of silver and gold ornaments, lace, silk and ruffs. Young men who defied this law by wearing long hair and silk were arrested, and one Hannah Lyon, aged sixteen, was haled into court for "wearing silk in a haughty manner."

Before the arrival of the cavaliers in Virginia, the dress of southern colonists was not unlike that of the Puritan. As the colonists acquired wealth, they began to order swarthy robes from London. In 1737 Col. John Lewis ordered for his ward "a cap ruffe and necktie, one pair white stays, eight pairs white kid gloves, two pairs colored kid gloves, two pairs worsted hose, three pairs thread hose, one pair silk shoes laced, one pair Morocco shoes, one hoop coat, one hat, four pairs Spanish shoes, two pairs cat shoes, one mask, one fan, one necktie, one girdle and buckle, one piece fashionable calico, four yards ribbon for knots, one and one-half yards cambric, one man's and coat of white string."

Men among the earlier settlers wore their own hair, the cavaliers dressing theirs in elaborate styles, while the Puritans and Quakers wore theirs plain and long to the shoulders.

Wednesday) the warrant had not been served. When interviewed Sheriff M. T. Stumbo said that no such warrant had passed through his office. He said, however, that the warrant "could have been given to a constable or a deputy, without the knowledge of anyone in the sheriff's office. Judge Stumbo said that Hansford and Lewis had been "electronering" for John Allen, who is running for nomination as county attorney, while Gus Johnson was electronesing for Allen's opponent, Forrest Short; hence the trouble in Elam's cafe.

Judge Stumbo also obtained the release of Lewis, who was left in jail after Hansford was removed to the hospital. All the money taken from the men, $10.66 was returned to Lewis by pro tem Judge Akers.

Judge Stumbo added that there was no truth to Harrison Stone's statement that he had issued a warrant for the arrest of Gus Johnson.

Although the warrant was issued Tuesday morning, at the time of writing, (late Wednesday) point of a pistol. He corroborated pro tem Judge Akers' statement that neither the $50.00, which figured in the alleged robbery, nor the gun were found in the possession of Lewis and Hansford.

To the Voters of Floyd County

This is an answer to an appeal recently made by Norman Allen, in which he attempts to play upon the public feeling for support in his race for County Court Clerk. In that document he attempts a rather bitter attack on Banner Meade. This article will not reply in kind, but will touch on a few of the points brought up by Mr. Allen, and several of them will not bear too close scrutiny.

Mr. Allen pleads poverty as a reason for your support. Indeed he seems to make that the main plank in his platform, so let us examine his case for a moment. He is apparently unemployed at the present time. He QUIT a steady $125.00 a month job to run for this office. He owns valuable property here in Prestonsburg, with a beautiful new house, just finished last year. He knows a trade which he could at any time go back to work at, and make a very comfortable living indeed. How many of you good people for whom he sheds so many tears would like to be in such a hard fix?

Again, Mr. Allen asks, "has Mr. Meade been a friend to the miners?" implying he has not. Well let us take a look at that. A couple of years ago the mines at Glo were idle, and a committee came to Prestonsburg from there to try to get relief of some kind for those miners and their families. They met with no success until they came to Banner Meade. Headed with a liberal donation by him, a popular subscription in their behalf was made up enough money was raised to purchase a truckload of groceries which were taken back to Glo by the committee. Ask those miners at Glo about Banner Meade. They KNOW! When the tippie at Betsy Layne burned, throwing several hundred men out of work, and at about the same time the mines at Ligon shut down a committee came before the fiscal court to try to get a Certification Officer employed to these men could get WPA work. The fiscal court declined to pay the salary of such a person as is required by the Government, and BANNER MEADE and two other officials paid out of their own pockets the salary of this Certification officer. As a result of this generosity of Mr. Meade, and his keen interest and sympathy about 350 of these miners secured employment. In addition to this, 87 boys were certified for CCC camps, and commodities to the value of about $3,000.00 were secured. Ask the miners of Ligon, and Emma Clark, of Wheelwright who was the Certification officer, about this. They KNOW! In addition to these specific instances, there are many more. Too numerous to mention. Mr. Meade has contributed liberally to schools and churches, and has been a source of real and genuine service ever since he entered public life. He has tried for and attained a goal of public service unsurpassed in the annals of Floyd county, and in recognition of this, the voters will nominate him by an overwhelming majority.

We will take notice of just one more of Mr. Allen's planks. He says that if he is elected, he will return to the county all money in excess of the $5,000.00 allowed him by law. Why does he think that there will be any such excess? Mr. Meade's office is the only one in Floyd county which keeps a daily operating sheet. That is an exact account of all money taken in, and what for. This shows precisely what the income of the office is, the Boyd Fiscal Court would like to and there can be no getting around it. A know. For that matter, comparing Boyd county with ours is about as fair as comparing Knott and Floyd, there is that done so. It is true that Boyd county, for such difference in the income of the office. The last few years has shown an excess. A large part of our business goes to Pike county, due to road conditions where did Mr. Allen get that $10,000 he says the Boyd county clerk returns to the county each year. We bet tonsburg.

In conclusion, let us make this plea to you. Cast your vote for a man who has proved his worth, who has shown himself competent, courteous and devoted to the duties of the office which safeguards the titles to your property. Do not let your judgment be swayed by foolish, unfounded statements such as these we have shown up for what they are.

Mr. Norman Allen is trying to make a sucker out of you-- don't bite at his bait.

Floyd County to Have 4 Magistrate's Districts putting names of candidates on ballots for the new districts.

If, after Floyd county elects four magistrates according to the new ruling the Court of Appeals upholds the division of Floyd county into eight districts, the county's magisterial political situation will be thrown into upheaval. All the appeal judge's ruling does is to stop the printing of ballots for the new districts; the main issue is yet to be finally determined.
Judge Wesley Wick Perry concurred in Judge Thomas opinion.
According to Circuit Judge John W. Caudill the question of whether Floyd is to have four or eight magisterial districts is yet to be decided, as the injunction granted by the Court of Appeals merely prevents the Floyd clerk from

A Word To The Wives
A Dusting Hint
To prevent dust from settling on nearby furniture while beating upholstered furniture or mattresses, dampen an old bath towel, wring it dry and sweep over the part of the surface you wish to beat. Then beat right over the towel; the dust will be removed yet will not settle on other furniture.

Eliminates Soaking
To eliminate soaking and parboiling of dried fruits and baked beans, place the raw food in the Thirt's cooker and put in the burner. Cover food with water and proper seasonings, cover and switch to LOW. Cook until tender. This requires no attention.

New Muffin Flavor
Try dropping a teaspoonful of peanut butter into each compartment of your muffin tin before pouring in the batter. This gives the muffins a delicious nutty flavor.

Novel Debris Saver
If you drive a nail into the end of an old broomstick and then flatten the head you will have an excellent saver with which to gather up debris that has blown onto your lawn.

One-Step Meals
Get in the one-step meal preparation habit. It's easy, economical and efficient. Instead of cooking part of each meal in the oven, part on the surface unit, part in the Thirt's cooker and part in the burner, plan your meals so that everything will utilize one source of heat. Suggestion for oven meal: Ring mold meat hot noodles, scalloped tomatoes, golden corn bread, baked apple tapioca pudding.

Thirt's Cooker Meal
Ham loaf, green beans, potatoes, steamed chocolate pudding.
Surface unit meal: Skillet of beef patties and vegetables, angel pudding with custard sauce.
Broiler meal: Broiled meat cakes wrapped in bacon, broiled tomato halves topped with buttered scallops, broiled cracked carrots, scalloped tomatoes.

TO THE VOTERS OF FLOYD COUNTY

I am appealing to Floyd county voters and taxpayers for their support in my candidacy for County Judge of Floyd county.

I became an orphan an age nine. My mother, Rebecca Martin Hayes, never re-married. She used a plough and did men's work on rented land until I was old enough to take her place. In my struggle and desire for an education I have swept school houses and built fires to pay my tuition. In one instance I was about to be forced to abandon my education for lack of money. Hon. Bill Mayo, deceased, who had faith in my honesty, signed a note with me to the First National Bank of Prestonburg, which enabled me to become a teacher. I do not make this statement in order to get your support through sympathy, but only to show you that the struggles that I have had through life has better fitted me to fight the battles of the taxpayers and citizens of Floyd county. One of my opponents states on one side of his picture exempt about one fourth of the Floyd county citizens from taxation, and reduce tax on real estate. On the other side, he says Build Roads! An exemption of the poll tax will force a raise of taxes on your real estate. I will not insult your intelligence by making an impossible promise. I do pledge to you that I will stop all graft in Floyd county. When there is a piece of public work to be done for the county it will be advertised for bids on the property to be improved stating the day and the hour bids will be received. All such bids will be opened in your presence and without leaving your sight after you have filed such a bid with me. The best bidder will then add there be awarded the contract regardless of politics. There will be no "hocus pocus" way of handling public work of Floyd county to pay political debts. I further pledge to you that I will spend four days of each week in the office and two days of each week going over the county looking after improvements. The public will be notified what days I will be in the office which will be the same days of each week. I further pledge when two neighbors come before me with their grievances in the form of a law suit that I will use my efforts to compromise the matter and get them to shake hands and leave the Judge's office friends rather than to encourage their enmity in order to receive costs in a law suit.

Before pledging your vote for any candidate, ask him the simple question: "Will you quit the work you are now doing and give the taxpayers your entire time and services for the salary the County Judge receives?" If you do not do this you perhaps will be voting for a pro tem rather than a County Judge.

During the last three years the dark clouds of misfortune have settled over me. I have lost two of my family and my home was burned, with its contents, and some make the remark that others have a better chance in this race because they have plenty of money. I do not believe that the good citizens of Floyd county will allow the Judge's office to be sold at auction. You taxpayers of Floyd county who desire a sober and honest and economical administration of the affairs of Floyd county go to the polls and see that no slates, clique or clan elect a pro tem judge for Floyd county. Make your fight for O. C. Hayes who pledges you his entire time, with no graft attached.

Junglefowl, of Pheasant Family, Daddy of Poultry

The Chinese ring-neck is one of about 108 species of pheasants which inhabit parts of the world that lie in the temperate zone, and so not only furnish sport and food to civilized man but to the savages of the jungle.

The most gorgeously plumed pheasant species, the Tragopans, stand supreme, with magnificent plumage of cherry red or crimson, interspersed with other harmonious colors of delicate shade. To add to their beauty, nature has equipped them with brilliantly colored wattle. The tragopans are extremely shy birds and inhabit areas that are not easily accessible to man.

Among the long-tailed pheasants, beautiful in form but not so rich in coloration, is the Chinese Silver Pheasant, with a long hairy crest and breast of purple. His silvery tail is considerably longer and bushier than that of the ring-neck. The Reeves' pheasant, also a native of China, carries an exceptionally long tail, but the feather colorings are more subdued.

Outside of the tropics we find the plumage of all species of pheasants a varied mixture of brown, red, gold and purple, but body shapes differ, some being stubby and others elongated.

Balloons First Used in War by France, in 1794

Balloons were first put to a military use in France, states a writer in the Chicago Daily News. At the battle of Fleurus in Belgium on June 26, 1794, Capt. J. M. Gontelle, the world's first military balloon observer, floated in his balloon, L'Entrepreneur (the Venturesome), above the cannon flashes and clouds of smoke of the opposing French and Austrian armies. By signaling with flags to the French artillery, Gontelle demoralized the Austrians and was an important factor in the French victory.

During the siege of Paris in 1870-1871, balloons played a strategic part. Cut off from supplies by German troops surrounding the city, starving Parisians were reduced to eating rats and zoo animals. Their only means of contact with the outside world was by balloon. Dozens of them, like great striped gourd, were, hastily made in railway stations. Between September, 1870, and the following January, about sixty-eight rose from Paris, sagged safely over the circle of German gunfire, and enabled 164 Parisians to escape. One of their most famous passengers was the French statesman Gambetta, who took the French government with him to Tours, where he set up his headquarters and organized fresh troops which offered the Germans fierce but vain resistance. Other passengers were pigeons, which afterward brought back news to the besieged city.

SYNOPSIS

Preparing to close her summer home and spend the winter in France with a great aunt, Anne Vincent, a middle-aged widow, accedes to the pleas of her adopted daughter Rachel, twenty and pretty, that she tell her about her real mother. Anne, an unselfish, understanding, and tactful woman, since she feels Rachel is putting in a barrier between them, tells her that her real mother was beautiful, eighteen years old, Edith May, deserted by her young husband, before Rachel's birth. In desperate financial straits, Edith had fled to New York, where she met Peter Cayne, a wealthy New York business man, and had a son. To soften the story for Rachel, Anne omits telling her that her mother had been cold and selfish. Rachel goes to her job with Edith, a local boy who runs a library and does wood carving. She meets his boss, who in Rochester and marry him instead of going to New York to look for her mother. The next morning they leave the keys with Mr. Kiesel, a French artist, so that it is time for Rachel to learn more self-dependence. Rachel makes arrangements to stay in New York for the winter with "Mink," a been-vicious girl absorbed in her job. Anne tells Rachel for Rachel's finances in case of need and leaves for Europe. Edith, who has been bent on seeing her real mother, looks up Edith Cayne's name in the phone book. She meets her in town. Pink takes Rachel to dinner at the Rialto, where she meets Oliver Land, a shabby gentleman who tells her that he is a photographer that she apply for a job as a photographic model for advertising illustrations.

"Shush—able to wear smart clothes and not be conscious of them, with enough business sense to keep appointments on time and to what they're told. Oliver's hunch is right, Rachel, the model game is your pigeon and nothing but!"

But see here, I don't know how to model nor where to apply, nor anything," said Rachel. "If I tried it, I'd probably get a floor mat."

"I know a fellow who has a good agency, one of the best," said Oliver. "I'll take you over there and introduce you, if you'd like to go."

"That would be awfully kind," said Rachel, "but I don't want to be a bother."

"Not a bit. I'll come for you tomorrow afternoon—morning would be better."

Rachel, looking up, saw an odd glance pass between Rhoda and Tom, and she was glad to know that she was not the only one who was making an appointment with Oliver Land for the next day. The next evening was over and she and Pink were ready to leave, Rhoda came close to Rachel and whispered quickly, "Listen, girl, I don't want you to lend Oliver any money, ever."

CHAPTER V

It was high time, Rachel felt, to arrange and settle her thoughts. She had been with Pink for nearly six weeks, but except for knowing the streets of the city and how to get about in it, and its parks and big stores and theaters, she might have been in a foreign country. Her life with Anne had run in an entirely different pattern, the quiet upstairs apartment, Anne's friends, the people who all lived in the same general locality or in prosperous suburbs, the days of the evenings with Anne to concerts or movies or an occasional play. Looking back at it, Rachel felt that the thing that Anne had made efforts to bring more young people around her, but she had never known—still with that resentment which had possessed her since the last day in Rochester, when she had tried very hard, Anne hadn't needed anyone except safe dull stupid people who lived safe dull stupid lives. She'd avoided the lively irresponsible fringe of New York's social fabric, made up of the lesser figures in the arts and professions, people like Tom and Rhoda Steele and Oliver Land. Anne had liked Pink only because Pink was a good housekeeper, Rachel silently accused her.

She worked up her case against Anne, stressing the things Anne hadn't done, overlooking the years of tireless care and affection, overlooking Anne's own nature and limited means, overlooking her own nature with equal blindness.

The two letters that had come from Anne added to Rachel's fret against her. Anne had written that there had been agreeable people on board the ship and that the impressions of the villa near Bordeaux and Madame de Bernard were better than she had hoped. The letters were loving and solicitous of Rachel, but Rachel chose to forget that and to stress that Anne had been having a diverting trip and was likely to have a beautiful winter. Her real mother, Rachel accused Anne, would never have let her alone merely to amuse herself.

All the time Rachel knew she was childishly refusing to accept what was in the mood when she needed a grievance. It wasn't nearly as much fun as she'd expected. Anne with Pink Matthews. Pink had become a fanatic about her work. If she had a hard day's work, she would drop out of the dullest party at half past ten, or she would turn lingering guests against the apartment incriminator. "Nobody gets on these days by playing round all the time," Pink said, when Rachel rebelled.

"But what do you want to get for? What does it get you?" asked Rachel. "You'll only be promoted into another job where you'll have to work harder still. It doesn't make sense."

"I'm here, Rachel," Pink replied, "it may not make sense to you, but it does to me. I may be funny that way, but I've got something in me that wants to go ahead. I like to use my brains and see if they aren't a little better than the brains of the people around me. You can call it ambition or vanity, or greed or rank individualism, if you want, but this lopping along like a tame rabbit with a lot of other tame rabbits is nothing to me. I want to be the rabbit that's yard or so ahead and setting the pace. It's my way of enjoying life."

"You weren't like that at school," "I'm like that now. This work's my form of self-expression, much as I hate this muddled world. I like it and I can do it well and I get better at it all the time, and that's a right agreeable feeling. And I don't want to be a rabbit that's a yard or so ahead, your new dress may turn out a bust, your best head may be another gal, but a day's work is a day's work, like a good old block of granite."

"I don't feel so enthusiastic about it," said Rachel.

"Pink was sympathetic. "I know that photographic-model stuff must be stupid, but it's only till you land something you really want to do."

"It May Not Make Sense to You, But It Does to Me."

Rachel had turned silent there. The only thing she really wanted to do was to meet and know Edith Cayne. She hadn't told Pink, she was this long, urgent, to discover her real mother, for in so doing Rachel assumed she would discover her real self and couldn't disaffection lay at the root of all the others.

"The moment she felt nothing but those innumerable dissatisfactions. The first day when she had to pay bus fare, she felt that she had felt excited. Oliver Land had called for her, looking just as he had looked the night before, shabbily smart, but quite sure of himself. He had taken a couple of cigarettes from the box on the table, "I'm down to carfare and couldn't buy any," he explained, as if it were the most natural thing in the world, "I'll save one of these for later in the day."

Rachel had been embarrassed, sorry for him, but Oliver was sure she offered, "We have heaps more."

"I'll fill my case, then, if you don't mind."

"Then when they were outside, he said, 'Shan't we walk? It's a grand day.'"

It was a grand day, but the distance was over 30 blocks. Rachel wondered whether she might offer to pay bus fare. She had never met anyone so frankly penniless, and she remembered what Rhoda had whispered in her ear about not lending money to Oliver. They had walked along and she was uncomfortably silent, but Oliver was quite at ease. He had talked amusingly about shows and parties and night clubs, apparently he went everywhere, did everything and had glanced round at her quizzically. "I believe you're worried about this job. But you must be, you'll land like a house afire, you'll panic the whole outfit. You're very beautiful, you know, keep on thinking about that and don't be nervous."

"I'm not nervous," said Rachel, "but I don't want to be a rabbit that's oughtn't to be looking for a job, for your instead of taking so much time on it."

"Oh, that'll run across something sometime. One of my friends is arranging a radio audition for me and I've got a couple of other plans. Anne there are so many nice people in the world. Rhoda gave me so much dinner last night that I didn't want any breakfast, and you've given me cigarettes and I've an invitation to lunch—you see?"

"But haven't you any home, or any people?"

"Oh, I've parents and a couple of brothers, but they live over in Jersey. I can't depend on them—I mean, I can't—live on them."

"I see—but—"

"My dear girl, I believe you're worrying about me! That's flattery, more than I deserve. But you mustn't be one of the many bright lads about this town, who've discovered how to live very well indeed without any money."

As they neared their destination he told her a little about the agency.

"Vinco, the head of it, is American, though his name sounds foreign; the fact is he uses it because he made enough money betting on a horse named Vinco to set himself up in business. He's supercilious. I hope to goodness this is one of his jobs, he's sour as an apple if you strike him about him, but he's a right guy when he's seen the moon over his left shoulder."

"But he sounds terrifying!"

"You should be terrified, with those eyes! Hold your head up and be nonchalant. Not bored or indifferent. Vinco wouldn't like that. Don't seem to be asking for anything—you'll get a lot more that way."

The Vinco agency was big and bare with a long counter dotted with telephones across one side. There were some chairs and one man and one girl waiting the man looked attentively at Rachel, but the girl turned her head away. Louis Vinco and his two assistants stood behind the counter busy with the telephones and behind them on the wall were engraved signs which they themselves constantly turned. As Oliver and Rachel came in Vinco put down his phone.

"I've found you a new model," said Oliver, shaking hands, "Miss Rachel Vincent."

The short baldish little man beamed with pleasure. "Vinco, Vincent? Why, that's lucky!" Then he turned suspicious. "Is Vincent your real name? Oliver here didn't suggest it to you to get me going?"

"The thought of her name came vividly to Rachel's mind, but she could not speak of it to these two; besides Vincent was her name, the only name rightfully her own. So she assured Vinco that Vincent was her real name and his smile came back.

"And you want to be a photographic model? Any experience? No, of course not, but're overall, but you're not fat, your head's right in proportion, your features—but the camera'll tell the tale. Have you a test. I'll send you to a studio where they make all my tests. It's a wonderful thing, the studio—a what is it, Miss Dean?"

This last over his shoulder to a blonde woman who was waiting.

The girl murmured: "Mr. Vinco, Coulette wants two girls for a holiday in the country, a boudoir scene, one on a chaise longue, and the other at the dressing table, Park Lane, full color, and you'll be everybody else that's any good is everybody else. They provide the clothes. They don't want petties."

"Why don't you send Miss Vincent?" asked Oliver.

"I've come out a coin and flipped it," he said. "Heads you go, tails you don't. It came up heads. There, Miss Vincent, you go. You think this business isn't very businesslike?" he chuckled—"but that's the first time I ever did such a thing. And the last. Hey, Miss Dean, give Miss Vincent an appointment card for this assignment. If she makes good she's to go into our book. It cost $25 to be registered in the state for trailing murderers, robbers and jail breakers. When convicts escape from the prison farm into the surrounding Tangle hills, the dogs are indispensable. For the hunt, they are usually chained in pairs, with their handlers following on horseback, for if the trail "hot," the dogs set a fast pace, with their heads skimming the ground and their long ears flopping. The perfect trail is one left just into the rain, and the worst is one made just before rain. But a real dog will not be stopped. He needs only the faintest scent of a man's footprint.

"You really should be able to let the dogs smell a piece of clothes of the man being hunted. He can register he has robbed," Captain Ball remarked, "even that isn't necessary for a good bloodhound. He can strike a trail from a footprint."

Louisiana Uses Trusties to Train the Bloodhounds Used to Run Down Criminals

Bloodhounds, says Captain Fred Ball, must be trained like children. Most persons who own dogs are natural-born man hunters, but the fact is less than half of them ever can be taught to follow a trail, according to J. A. United Press correspondent.

The secret of a good bloodhound is the shape of his nose, if long and narrow, the dog's scent nerves are unusually sensitive, explains Captain Ball. And for all their persistence in the hunt they are not vicious, and seldom attack their prey.

"The best dogs will get a man cornered, then stand off and bay him," Ball says.

Ball is trainer and handler of dogs at the state prison farm at Angola. Convict trustees, called "dog sergeants," are detailed to help him. The dogs and their handlers are continually in demand throughout Vinco book, Rachel discovered later, and the pay for her work was made by the hour, five to fifteen dollars usually, the higher rate for special jobs. But she knew one of this when she went on that first assignment, where she wore a delicious blue-flowered negligee and lay on a peach-colored chaise longue while Selina, as her superior friend the delicate primrose chiffons sat before the peach-draped dressing table with her arm raised to her perfect coiffure. A canvas and paint representation of a Louis Quinze boiserie enclosed this sleeved, disheveled, men pushed cameras and directed lights while a man and woman from the furniture factory busied about discussing the girls and their effect as frankly as if they were deaf.

The whole crazy business took three hours and at the end of it Rachel was sagging and tired.

The furniture people had been delighted with her name and book and their satisfaction had passed on to Vinco. With a flourish he informed Rachel that he would send her such appointments as seemed suitable for her. He would send her such appointments as seemed suitable for her, retaining it per cent. She was told. From Miss Dean Rachel learned that she was a field for punctuality and any excusers short of a broken neck was nothing to him. From the other models she met she learned that the one at the left will bring the one at the right will bring the girl of his dreams?

When he takes you out to luncheon you should be the very essence of chic. A two-piece like the one at the left will bring the sort of eye-compliments you like, and you'll find it a great boon to comfort if the date is to be soon. You will probably want it made of the season's hit material, sheer crepe. The vestee is smart in a contrasting color.

When It's Dancing.

He'll be very Scotch about giving away dances when he sees you. Don't copy of the back in the dance. The tucked skirt has all the thrilling sophistication of a gored one, and it's much easier to wear. Little touches of grosgrain, soutis, fur or sleeves finishing the kind of quiet elegance that makes this your choice for those happy hours of dancing under the stars.

The season, like romance, rolls swiftly. But you still have time to do a few summery things in a summery frock such as the one at the right. In dainty or swiss it will make you more youthful and charming than many a more ornate style (and after all the girl of his dreams must be young and charming). A good suggestion might be to cut a carbon copy, while you're about it, in sheer wool with long sleeves. Then there'll be nothing to worry about when a cool evening happens along.

DRIFT CONTINUES STREAK DOWNS WEEKSBURY 10-9

With 10 runs in two innings Young Lloyd Stumbo and the "Gas House Gang" of Drift continued its drive toward the By Sandy championship by defeating Weeksbury at that place Sunday, 10-9.

The "Gas Housers" piled up 10 runs in the first two innings and then undertook to "coast" in. The score was 10-2 in the sixth and 10-6 till the last of the ninth when Drift errors and a double almost tossed the game away for young Stumbo.

However, G. Stumbo made a sensational catch for a double play to end the game. H

First Kindergarten Was in Blankenburg, Germany

That idea of schooling as simply the fostering of the best natural growth was in the mind of Frederick Froebel when he opened the first kindergarten in the little town of Blankenburg, Germany, in 1837, and found a name for his educational idea, says a writer in the New York Times. From a hilltop where he could see the village houses, each with its tiny garden plot, he made his famous declaration: "Eureka! I have it! Kindergarten it shall be!"

Froebel's first school was at Kellau, established in 1816. The working plan of that school and his educational theory he put into print in 1826 in the "Education of Man." The "Means of Education" used there and printed in "Education of Man" would be an acceptable course of study in a modern country day school.

Froebel's experience in this school and his observations of mothers with their children in the home life about him led to his conviction that education was a continuous process, and to be effective should begin in early childhood. For twenty years he thought and worked over his plans for obtaining a more abundant life for children.

He had made his appeal to parents for a better understanding of child nature in the following terms: "O men, as you stroll through garden or meadow or field or copse, why not use your sense to perceive what nature would teach you? Behold the plant. When grown under pressure you scarcely guess its natural life and purpose, but in open ground it becomes a sun of green rays, a star of leaves. Your children, too, O parents, have it in them to become creatures fully developed to beauty."
