TO CONSIDER ROAD DAMAGE

At Frankfort Meeting Scheduled April 4, Curlin Announces

Winter damage which will add an approximate six to eight million dollars to the 1951 maintenance and reconstruction budget will be discussed by engineers and maintenance superintendents of the Department of Highways at a state-wide conference in Frankfort April 4, W. P. Curlin, Commissioner of Highways said Tuesday.

The same ship which brought them to the United States, the USS General C. M. Randall, also carried back to home soil the bodies of 27 service men killed in Korea. He received his training at Fort Knox, Ky, and until recently served with the 64th field hospital in Korea.

Set. John R. Preston, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Preston, of Bluevale, enlisted in the army Aug. 16, 1943, and is now stationed in Japan. He received his training at Fort Knox, Ky, and until recently served with the 64th field hospital in Korea.

"Materials are already being stockpiled and elementary repairs made on primary highways," Mr. Curlin said. The overall picture of Kentucky's 12,000 miles of roads is pretty gloomy right now. Almost every major route will be subject to heavy reconstruction and repair work sometime during the coming construction season.

M. F. Johnson, director of the Department of Highways, will preside at the conference, said that a definite monetary estimate will be placed on every damaged highway in each county. A survey will be made as to available supervisory personnel, laborers and equipment operators; required equipment and materials to advance the repair work as rapidly as possible.

Completed in February of this year, another rural extension was begun on the Trace Fork of Little Mule Creek and over the mountain to oldtime homes living on Spunk Fork of Little Beaver at Printer. But, in the main, rural extension was established by Magister county, particularly around sections close to Baylerville. Three extensions, all told comprising some 80 poles, were built on Rockhouse Park of Rockhouse. One extension was built up Short Fork, another on the head of Rockhouse and the third planned on the Bear Tree Fork of Rockhouse.

The electric distribution work necessary to serve the needs of the new mining development of the Pond Creek Picoanite Coal Company on the Spring Fork of Quindick and Creek in Breathed county, at Branson, has increased. One distribution line was completed there this year, the company homes were served in Breathed. This year another long distribution line in the area is nearing completion.

Let's talk for a moment in relation to lines completed by Harris Bros. on Brushy Fork of Johns Creek. Power lines in this section, which have been completed temporarily attendant upon the size of the esement area of Dewey reservoir, are now practically complete.

HO-HUM!
Except for the fact—it is a fact, isn't it?—that these gentlemen who make a living outside the law or on the fringe thereof, have a reasonably firm hold on government, all the way from Washington to the county seat, there is not much to be excited about in this Kefauver revelation.

We all know gambling is going on in this country, wherever we look. I've some of it is legalized, some isn't, and those who play the same legally are no more respected by the state and file—and apparently by those who don't enter the statute books before offering to cover your money.

There's another reason for our anxiety while they're cheating on us, we can't look on this guy Cotto or that fellow out in St. Louis, Carroll, as being anything like some of the big shots, representatives of the people, are apparently tied up as they are with these men who take your bets and pay off when they lose like good actors.

TOO FRANK

And that story brings on the one told locally the other day. It has to do with a certain gentleman with a predilection for fire-water and his good wife who patiently sought to wean him therefrom. He had been on one of his periodic benders when, one night, his wife fell on her knees and began praying for him.

She asked naught for herself except that the Lord rescue her from the clutches of a drunkard's wife. During the course of her supplications she turned to relate some details. She pointed out that that year he had drunk for two weeks, and—

But there John broke into the "conversation."
"For Christ's sake, woman, don't tell Him I've drunk," he hissed. "Just say I'm sick."

STORIES FOLKS TELL

Every community has its supply of local stories which oftentimes findly recall and find more funny than would the stranger, unacquainted with local people and their surroundings. In my home community, it was stories of "Uncle Willie" Paton which enriched winter-time fireside sessions. This one has survived three quarters of a century of Johns Creek chews-and-split sessions.

A decade or so after the Civil War an old time religious fervor swept over Johns Creek. At the little log schoolhouses the "Shouting Methodists" exalted their hearts into an ecstasy of excitement. Near the present Barton schoolhouse the shouting had been long and fruitful, and the exuberance of the weather had not dampened the ardor of the shouting. The frozen and icy roads had not prevented two old veterans of the church from attending. Ayres Vaughan, Jr., and Hawkins, both of them, were shouting and singing the praises of the Lord.

War an old time religious fervor swept over Johns Creek. At the little log schoolhouses the "Shouting Methodists" exalted their hearts into an ecstasy of excitement. Near the present Barton schoolhouse the shouting had been long and fruitful, and the exuberance of the weather had not dampened the ardor of the shouting. The frozen and icy roads had not prevented two old veterans of the church from attending. Ayres Vaughan, Jr., and Hawkins, both of them, were shouting and singing the praises of the Lord.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES FOR THE SCHOOLS

Commencement exercises for the school were held Friday night, at the R. L. Vest, a retired teacher of 33 years' experience, as the speaker. The program, featuring the pupils was very interesting and held the attention of a large gathering. The program follows:

Scripture reading, by Miss Betty Roberts; invocation, Rev. Isaac Stratten; salutatory address, Miss Bonnie Meade; address, "Our Heritage," by R. L. Vest; valedictory, by Ballard Hall; music by glee club; presentation of attendance certificates, by Mrs. Edith Burdette; principal of the school, presentation of diplomas, by County Superintendent Palmer L. Hall; solo, "The Lord's Prayer," by Rebecca Faye Hall; benediction, by Mrs. Fred McGinnis.

Begley-Allen Wedding Of Wide Interest

On Tuesday, March 6, in the Baptist Church, Williamson, W. Va.,
Rev. James Henley united Mrs.
Amy Begley, of Maytown, and Mr.
Robert Allen, of Akron, Ohio, in marriage.

The bride wore a dress of navy blue with white accessories. For years she has been primary teacher in the Maytown school. The groom, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. P.
Allen, of Haysville, has been employed by the Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron, O., for 33 years, retiring in February.

The day following their marriage the couple left to visit relatives in Ohio and Ashland for a week. When they returned to Maytown, the house was filled with relatives and friends who had gathered for a reception in their honor.

A centerpiece of gladioli decorated the bride's table, which held a three-tiered wedding cake, while lovely gifts were on display in the bedroom. Out-of-town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Roy May, of Mt. Sterling, Mr. and Mrs. T. J.
Webb and Mrs. Oscar Webb, of Lacey, Mr. and Mrs. George Stephens, of Prestonsburg, Rev.
John Lawrence Price, of Wayland, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Taylor Begley, of Blackey. Hostesses were Messames Charles Tingus, Thurman Clink and Ealsdon Osborn, and Miss Bea Ratliff.

Instead of a sequel to the culmination of Mr. and Mrs. Allen-romance, there is to be written an earlier chapter dating back years ago when the couple were in their youth. Amy Webb, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hoss Webb, fell in love with Syd Begley. She became infatuated with him and decided to marry another suitor, Robert "Big" Allen, of Haysville; but her father begged her to wait thirty days, because he was sure young Begley had his daughter's heart. In those days girls obeyed their parents unquestioningly; so Amy packed away her trousseau and told Bob they must wait 30 days, so that she might be very sure.

"Either marry me this Friday or not at all," Allen pressed his suit.
Amy was somewhat worried Thursday when she encountered Bob, who demanded a verdict, she told him, "I'm not going to marry you."

"I'll marry you some day if I have to wait a hundred years," the young man informed her. He left Ohio, the next morning.

Sometime before he returned,
Amy had become the happy bride of Syd Begley, and they reared two fine sons, J. T. Begley, of Blackey, Ky., and Hershel Begley, Boston, Mass. A few years ago, Mr. Begley passed away.

About a year ago, Mr. Allen made one of his occasional visits back here to visit a relative, "Aunt" Minnie Webb, of Lacey. Mutual friends arranged a surprise meeting between him and Mrs. Begley in Aunt Minnie's parlor on her birthday, and Amy Begley was too shocked to say a word when Bob Allen stuck out his hand and asked if she remembered him. In a few months' time, that early broken romance was patched up.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

To most anglers Saskatchewan is a flat, wheat-growing prairie province in Canada. It habited solely by farmers. You never heard anyone say Saskaatchewan has the best readily available Arctic grayling fishing on the continent, or Saskatchewan has North America's most exciting lake trout fishing, or Saskatchewan is almost certain to produce world breaking lake trout, northern pike and possibly walleyes in the next few years.

No one has said those things until now. But Bill Wolf is saying them. The Saskatchewan government asked him to come up and look things over and tell them frankly what he thought. Here is his answer:
"It is utterly impossible for any other place to yield better angling than I found in northern Saskatchewan. Furthermore, and unlike most such stories of fishing in out of the way places, this angling is available to anyone."
There are the flies in the ointment, of course. The fishing is so new, so undeveloped and unexplored that minor discomforts are encountered. There aren't fancy lodge everywhere; you may have to eat pilot biscuit or hardback instead of bread; you may have to carry toilet paper in the hip pocket.
This northern country is not commercial. It is friendly. Every one will help to see that you get the best possible fishing. The Government Airways will take you there, and the expense on "back trips" is surprisingly low. These flights reach the best fishing waters known. Left for the future is a vast area with unknown possibilities.

The angler who wants to try it is advised to carry black fly repellent or mosquito netting, to take along a sleeping bag, and his gear in a packback keeping all down to a minimum. Two fly rods, two fly rods, and everything needed to go with them. There are no tackle stores in the north, and few items of equipment anywhere. Clothing must include warm stuff, even in summer, because the nights and some days are cold.

KENTUCKY ON THE MARCH BY EWING GALLOWAY

When the other day, Louis Bromfield author of best selling books fiction and non-fiction, told the Kentucky Dairy Products Association that "We look on bluegrass as a noxious weed and spend a great deal of time eliminating it," he was talking for newspaper headlines. And he got them. Also a Journal, Bromfield's way of expressing himself was provoking, but coming from a northern Ohio Dairy farmer, it was not as sensational as it sounded. He wants dairy cow feed, and alfalfa is his life line. Kentucky dairymen run their cows on bluegrass and feed them alfalfa hay taking three or more crops yearly from good land.

Just Among Us . . .

By Jack Wail

Are you as fed up as I am with those patent-medicine commercials you hear on the radio, in which some southern belle makes a testimonial to good old Gulp-a-Gulp? You know, "the kind that go something like this: 'Why, yes, Ah do take Gulp-a-Gulp. Ah wouldn't be without mah Gulp-a-Gulp for anything.' When Ah first started takin' Gulp-a-Gulp, Ah was es' a shadow of mah present healthy self. Ah had pains an' miseries so bad that Ah couldn't sleep nights. Half the night Ah jes' twist and toos an' twist an' toos. Then Ah began takin' Gulp-a-Gulp, an' after jes' three consecutive bottles, Ah never even heard mah husband when he got home. Jes' wish you all folks could drop in some afternoon real soon an' have Gulp-a-Gulp with me. Ah buy Gulp-a-Gulp by the case, jes' in case. Remember, ladies, when you're tired an' needin' help, try a dose of Gulp-a-Gulp!"

Oh, maybe that's a little exaggerated, but it's no more stoborn—Ah declare it's no more than those silly commercials mouthed by some studio actress with a very phony deep-south accent.

STARLINGS BY STARLIGHT!
And speaking of nuisances, the starlings are with us always. One Lexington man claims to have shot 2,000 of them but they seem to be as thick and sassy as ever. I asked James B. Eging, head of the U. S. Zoology Department, about them, and he said we might as well get used to the idea of having them around. The little European nipper is so tough that he doesn't even bother to go along when his neighbors head south for the winter. One puzzling thing about starlings is the way they'll spend the whole day out in the country eating bugs and stuff, and then come into town at night. Do the bright lights attract them? Is there a gay night life in birdland we don't know about?

Prof. Roney says there's a fortune waiting for the man who discovers a way to get rid of starlings. Maybe it's not very scientific, and certainly I don't expect to get rich out of it, but I know how to keep them from roosting in the garage at night. Sticky flypaper tacked along the rafters does just fine.

Ky. Police Auxiliary Planned for Defense; Floyd Members Asked

Bernis Martin, commander of Floyd post, American Legion, announced this week that he has received application forms for membership in the Kentucky State Police Auxiliary, and he encourages all civic-minded citizens in this county to apply for membership.

This organization is part of the civil defense program. It is self-sustaining however, and may on special occasions be called to duty to assist the State Police during floods and other serious disasters.

Mr. Martin said that so many members of the regular State Police force are being called to active military duty that a serious shortage of trained personnel is anticipated. This, he said, is the primary reason for organizing the State Police Auxiliary.

Each county will have its detachment of Auxiliary Police composed of members who live in the county. During training and duty the detachment is under the direction and control of the Kentucky State Police. Each detachment will be composed of not less than five nor more than twenty members.

As soon as a detachment is organized in this county training will begin. Both class room instruction and instructors furnished by the regular old training are planned, with State Police force. Students will be taught radio communications, traffic control, standard first aid and general police procedures. Upon successful completion of the several courses students will be commissioned Auxiliary Patrolmen by the commissioner of Kentucky Police.

Officials have emphasized in urging such civil defense preparations that man has unleashed the physical means of destroying all mankind—perhaps all known life; there is no place in the world that can be considered a safe place in time of war, atomic warfare and the modern airplane have nullified all natural barriers, and every village, hamlet and isolated farm house is a potential target of purpose or accident.

Interested persons may contact Mr. Martin for more detailed information.

The Best You've Got

(From the Reader's Digest for April)

"If I'd given my family half the intelligence I gave my business I shouldn't be the lonely, homeless man I am," the divorced corporation president confessed. Like many others he had taken for granted those nearest and dearest to him. He had treated the very essence of his life with hit-or-miss methods which he never dared to apply to his business.

This all-too-typical story is told in the April Reader's Digest by I. A. R. Wylie, who draws the moral that the love and friendship which are the best of life need the best we've got—all the time.

If you want to have and hold love, you've got to watch the little things, says writer Wylie. Love is an exacting task not made up of occasionally glamorous gestures but of steadily self-discipline, a sensitive awareness of what hurts what pleases. To prove the point, the author cites examples: a famous composer left his wife forever because she drummed on the breakfast table with her fingers; a girl who would have gladly died for her husband lost his affection because she wouldn't powder her nose or keep appointments on time.

Many know from everyday experience that these irritating aren't trivial, and they can sympathize with the woman who told the Digest author "I wouldn't care so much if Jim failed me in a crisis, if only he would be pleasant when there wasn't one."

But, someone may ask, shouldn't you be able to put off your best manners at home and rely on those who love you to understand and forgive? The answer offered in the article, "The Best You've Got," is that you do so most unfairly and at your peril. You don't win love with your moods, weaknesses and foibles, and you cannot expect to keep it with them. An explosion of home tantrums isn't nothing but the weary job of picking up the pieces. And whether you realize it or not, there is a little less each time that can be mended.

Shipping-car passengers on Sydney-Brisbane (Australia) expresses will get free morning tea.

That's something to think about when you go to buy a 1951 car. It's good to know that the new 1951 Mercury can save you money for years to come—no matter where you drive it!

As if this amazing economy weren't enough, Mercury also offers new styling that's more than just skin deep. New riding comfort that's designed to give you a smoother ride longer. New value that can't be surpassed by any car.

Once again the facts have proved it—the new 1951 Mercury is "the buy of your life!" So drop in at our showroom and get the complete story.

"For the drive of your life" Mercury offers you a triple choice in transmissions: Merc-O-Matic Drive, the most similar, smoothest, more efficient; automatic transmission; or Touch-O-Matic Overdrive, a new concept. There's also slant-case synchronized standard transmission.

Ohio's Mother of Year Is Club's Guest-Speaker; Asks Dedication to Peace

(Wayland, Ky., Mar. 27 (Sp.)—Mrs. W. F. Marting, of Ironton, O., her state's Mother of the Year for 1950, told the Lackey-Garrett Women's Club in an address last Thursday at the Wayland Methodist Church that "Mother's of the world, particularly those who have been chosen as leaders in their respective countries, must dedicate themselves to the building of a world which will be free from the scourge of war."

Mrs. Marting appeared on invitation of the club's department of American Homes. She was introduced by Mrs. M. M. Collins, chairman of the department.

The speaker was honored last year by the state of Ohio as an outstanding exemplar of motherhood. She has reared three daughters who have become doctors, her husband is a well-known physician and is head of the Marting hospital in Ironton.

Mrs. Marting herself earned a degree in nursing after having first seen her children educated.

In her introductory remarks, Mrs. Collins said, "Our public schools are a fundamental institution in the American way of life, but, like other agencies of our free society, our schools need the background of the American home."

Mrs. Marting traced the origin of the American Mothers Committee and told of the progress of that agency. "Mothers of the earth have a common bond in their aspirations and dreams for their children's welfare. As American mothers, we need new understanding and appreciation of the cultures of other nations," she said. She emphasized the need for world unity.

Fourteen members and the following guests attended the meeting: Mrs. W. F. Marting, Ironton; Mrs. M. M. Collins, Wayland; J. C. Wells, and Mesdames Brady and Scott Collins, Lackey.

Immediately following the speaking, a reception was held in the church basement.

Mrs. R. F. Vinson conducted a brief business session at which it was announced that approximately $40 had been collected for the Heart Drive and $18.85 for the Bibles-for-Japan Drive. The club voted to give $10.00 to the Heart Drive and $5.00 to the current drive for funds for the Red Cross.

Mrs. W. T. Hatcher announced that Scott C. Craft, Paintsville, will present a film on remodeling Monday evening, April 30, in the Garrett high school auditorium, to which all club members and their friends are invited.

April 12, the Allen-Martin Women's Club will be entertained in the Home Economics room of the Garrett high school.

Action Will Speak Louder . . .

THOSE who grieve upon seeing a beautiful mountain stream made a thing of ugliness, as well as those of us who find deep enjoyment in fishing in the trout trust the promise made by the Breathitt Fish & Game Club recently by a State Health Department inspector will be kept to the letter.

That promise was to the effect that both state and federal authorities will "go all out in cleaning up Quicksand Creek and other polluted streams of the state."

We're from Missouri, though; we shall wait for action rather than promises. Governmental agencies, starting with Breathitt county courts, have been doing nothing. Since the beginning of mine operation in Breathitt county, the Pond Creek-Pocahontas Company, Quicksand, once a stream of pristine beauty and purity, has been a blackened, soupy mixture of coal dust and water. And nothing has been done to correct the situation, despite the protests of sportsmen, farmers who depend on the stream for water for their livestock, and plain citizens who have a love for nature.

The Breathitt circuit court, and all circuit courts, have the power to correct such conditions. If they operated with conservation interests as well as the Floyd circuit court has, Quicksand long ago would have been cleared of pollution, or nearly so.

This does not mean that all Floyd county streams are free of pollution. Most are not, but when conservation authorities have prosecuted contaminators of streams in this county they have not been rebuffed by Floyd courts, but have received help. The Beaver Creeks, Middle Creek and, most of all, the Big Sandy still are polluted in varying degrees. The problem presented by the Big Sandy river, however, is one which requires attention in every county through which the stream flows and which may demand attack from the state or federal agency.

Unfortunately, the federal government to this day has not provided the legal machinery with which a direct assault may be made on those corporations, municipalities and private citizens guilty of stream pollution.

In this county, coal companies have on occasion been penalized. Gas and oil companies, to date, have escaped prosecution, but they are by no means innocent of wrongdoing. All should be required to respect the rights of others and to help the cause of conservation.

There is an old, and one-effective, argument, which the coal company in Breathitt county may produce as a delaying action. This is the argument, as we recall it in similar cases arising in Floyd county:

"Isn't it better that we be permitted to work and employ men who need it, even if we do pollute the stream, than to have to close down our operation and throw all these men out of work?"

Such sophistry does not merit consideration. The answer is—these industries can abide by the law and operate. Their plants are installed at great cost, sometimes at an outlay of a million dollars. The additional cost of providing for pollution-prevention would be, possibly, one-hundredth the investment made.

The public health, the preservation of what nature has given us and the rights of the public demand that the laws against water pollution be enforced.

Cooper Acted Wisely

ALTHOUGH John Sherman Cooper did not ask this newspaper for advice in the matter, he has done exactly what we would have advised him to do.

He had nothing to gain, possibly a lot to lose and would have made no great contribution to Kentucky by becoming a candidate for Governor on the Republican ticket.

Had he lost the election, his political future might have belonged to the past. And, had he won, with a Democratic Legislature to work with, as will surely be the case after November next, his accomplishments as Governor would have fallen so far below expectations that he would have left office with a record of failure behind him, and with those who now admire him greatly disappointed.

His decision leaves him free to continue his work with the State Department, where he is needed. His services now are available to his country rather than to his party in a political dog-fight.

Whatever leaders of the Republican party may think or say of him upon his refusal to become their whipping-boy, he grows in stature as an independent of the calibre of a statesman. He retains his high place in the hearts of those who are to be a Republican first and then, if convenient, an American.

TRIBUTE

Different individuals will remember Mrs. H. Allen for various reasons, for her rare beauty, youthful appearance, intellectual, fine sense of humor and dazzling smile. Some recall her active life for years ago, her wide influence in the community where she was a Sunday School teacher and an officer of the Welfare Club for years working to make Maytown a better place, pushing every move to improve the school, for her assistance in the active life of the community and for her alert mind was filled with ideas. She died at the age of 70 years, but to date on nothing important.

Many persons have a vivid memory of her presence at the bedside of the sick patients at the hospital on O.B. cases, when she often accompanied Dr. Allen as an efficient helpline in days before all emergency cases were hospitalized. Young mothers were overjoyed to have her say, "Honey, you were a patient." Frequent calls came back on the second and third day to assist. If she never accepted a cent for these kindnesses, they were loving services to humanity.

She will also be remembered for her wisdom. She had the habit of being the best to rest every week before passing it on to her children when they were small. She sometimes remarked there were three things she hoped her children would never do, and then enumerated a trio of pitfalls every Christian mother must her sons avoid: "Three boys" someone would ask, aware that she had just two sons. "Oh, yes, don't forget Joe," she would say, "he's my boy." She referred to George's best friend, Joe Dyer, who had lost his mother, early in life. Mrs. Allen's own mother had died in her childhood. She mothered her younger sister and brother, and later his motherless children, and was a mother in need of it. An orphan girl stayed with the Allens for several years, and the fact that Lillian addressed Mrs. Allen as "Mother" and Doctor as "Dad," expresses more than words can.

Mrs. Allen was the beloved "Nana" to her seven grandchildren. In the last few years she lived chiefly at home, for her family, contributing much to the happiness and welfare of them. All Maytown extends deepest sympathy to the bereaved because of her lasting influence on the community she so helped to make.

TIDBITS OF KENTUCKY FOLKLORE

By GORDON WILSON, Ph.D.
Western Kentucky Teachers' College, Bowling Green, Ky.

"GOOD VERSUS BAD"

In spite of the enormous advance in education and travel, in automobiles and uses of electricity, within my memory, I sometimes wonder whether we have advanced very far in our ability to get along with each other. It is easy to find many people who, though the beneficiaries of all the great modern inventions and even of book-learning, rely upon their childhood prejudices for most of their decisions. I am fond of telling of the ex-Federal soldier whom I met in 1915 who disliked Bowling Green exceedingly. I could not at first understand why he was so bitter that he begged his granddaughter not to go to school in such a terrible town. By skillful questioning I discovered that once during the Civil War, his outfit came into the town on a train and stopped to get something to eat. Somewhat overcharged him and received in payment his exalted head. To him as I talked to him in his daughter's house one bleak winter day he said that the nervous "break-downs" which are becoming all too common. People wear themselves out with petty worries.

One way to live more contentedly with your nerves is to get acquainted with the tricks they play on you, according to Dr. Alvarez, whose recent book "How to Live With Your Nerves" is condensed in the April Reader's Digest. Sometimes the case is apparent, as in the case of the business man who suffered heart palpitations the day he had to dismiss an old employee. In other cases, however, the cause is not so hereditary. But Dr. Alvarez offers reassurance that even if nervousness runs in your family, you can learn to control the tendencies.

Dr. Alvarez says that he faced failure and poor health because he inherited his mother's bad nerves. Hence, he resolved to emulate her virtues while avoiding her follies, such as worrying and fretting and living the hard way. This schooling enabled him to hoard enough energy for two jobs: one earning a living and the other researching, writing, teaching and lecturing. He even found he had time left over for hobbies.

Dr. Alvarez's rules for living include sleeping enough sleep, rest and recreation, and learning to do as many things as possible automatically so that you don't waste energy on things that don't matter. He illustrates with the story of how a mountaineer, watching the late Stewart Edward White sailing wildly on a log, remarked that he saw a log in the water as fast as he could "swim" to it. The old man, "when I saw, I just saw." People with tense nerves could almost cure themselves by learning to "just saw" a single one job at a time and don't worry about the next one until it's done.

To Close U. S. 60 Monday for Work; Detours Suggested

US Highway 60 between Lexington and Winchester was closed to traffic Monday W. P. Curdin, Commissioner of Highways, announced Tuesday. The road, built in 1921, is one of Kentucky's oldest and hardest surfaced highways.

"Many of the present curves on the road, built for early, slow-moving traffic, will be realigned," said Mr. Curdin. The road will be widened, graded to better sight distances, and resurfaced.

The contract, held by the Breese Construction Company of Louisville, calls for widening, grading and surfacing of the road from the Lexington Circle to the Clark county line. The cost is $486,000.

The official marked detour for passenger vehicles will be from the city limits of Lexington via Liberty, Todd, and Colby roads to join US 227 in Winchester. The added distance will be 9.4 miles, and there is an overhead with a four ton load limit along this route.

For trucks under 12 tons, US 27 and 227 via Paris will be used. For trucks over 12 tons, US 31, KY 388, and US 227 will be used.

FAMILY VEGGIES

By HAROLD B. RICE, Floyd County Agent

March is the time to really get started in your garden but so far the weather hasn't cooperated. This year it is very important to make a good garden. A good garden will supply an abundant supply of fresh vegetables throughout the summer and will greatly reduce the cost of feeding the family.

Now is the time to get apricots, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, spinach, onions and lettuce. Plant parsnips, radishes, turnips, mustard, spinach, peas, lettuce, and Irish potatoes.

The best variety of asparagus in Washington, because it is resistant to rust, Apracots plants often last as long as 20 years on a good site should be chosen. Set asparagus roots in rows of 45 inches apart and plant's 24 inches apart in the row. Dig a trench 8 inches deep, put about 3 inches of manure and one pound of fertilizer to 20 feet of row in the bottom of the trench. Cover with one inch of dirt. Put the plants in place, spreading out the roots, and cover with two inches of soil. Asparagus roots can be ordered from most seed catalogues and once you buy it established, proper care will maintain the stand for an indefinite length of time.

Rhubarb is another perennial vegetable that everyone should have in their garden. It makes delicious pies and many people like it fried. The apples. But you women already know how to cook it. Virginia is the most popular variety because it lives longer than the more highly colored sorts, such as M. D. Hall.

Rhubarb should be set this month unless you are getting from an old patch. Plants from an old patch should be set in August. Stake the plants 24 inches apart, set rows 48 inches apart. Don't put any stakes the first year, and after the first year cut them more than half the stalks that are ready. Over pulling staves the roots, causing the patch to thin out.
