PIKE WOMAN IS CONVICTED

Of Husband's Slaying,
Draws 8-Year Sentence
In 'Sleep-Walk' Murder

Mrs. LAMIE Weddington, the John Creek (Pike county) woman who in the opinion of psychiatrists was not responsible while in a sleepwalking trance, was given an eight-year term by a jury of the state circuit court last Friday night.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Weddington, who sat through much of the trial with her head buried in her arms, heard the verdict without any show of emotion.

She shot her husband, Richard Weddington, 42, in the back with a shotgun while he slept in their Cavey Ford home last November 7.

Dr. W. E. Rich, of Eastern State hospital, Lexington, testified that in shooting her husband she apparently carried out a subconscious wish of long standing. Mrs. Weddington herself told a story of abuse in their 18 years of marriage which included beatings, harassment, and forced labor on their farm.

But Dr. Rich said he did not believe the woman was conscious of what she had done when she fired the fatal shot.

His testimony was supported by Dr. Orem Knapp, a woman psychiatrist associated with Dr. Rich.

The mother of five children—three boys and two girls—Mrs. Weddington testified that her husband had made threats on two occasions to violate their oldest daughter, Darlene, 17.

The 19-year-old son, John Cowan Weddington, testified that his father had left the house at night with other men. A neighboring couple, Mr. and Mrs. Lon Workman, told of seeing Mrs. Weddington in the car with a man—not her husband—at night on several occasions near their home.

Weddington's brother, Henry, testified that a week before the slaying Mrs. Weddington told him:

"I expect to kill Dick and myself."

Seven-year-old Summa Weddington, appearing as a Commonwealth witness against her mother, said the night of the slaying she went to sleep in bed with her mother and father but had been removed into another bedroom when the car was occupied by Darlene. The older girl was staying that night at the home of Mrs. Weddington's parents about a half-mile away.

Summa, a pretty child, wearing a pink dress, told of seeing her mother with a shotgun.

"Money don't shoot my daddy," she recalled saying.

"Be quiet, he's sick," the child said she was told.

Then her mother fired the fatal shot, Summa said.

"The little girl said her mother then yelled."

"Oh, Lord, what did I do?" and ran from the house.

Mrs. Weddington recounted a series of abuse she said she had endured during the couple's 18 years of marriage. She said Weddington often had beaten her and had refused to provide for the family, even forced her to plow, plant and do other farm work, she said.

Several weeks before the man was slain, she said, he made the threat of killing her.

She was going to visit his mother, she said, when he killed her. On one occasion, the defendant recalled, when she was in her own bed Weddington got out of theirs and went into the daughter's room with the intention of violating her.

The three boys slept in a second bed in their parents' bedroom. They testified they were in bed when the slaying occurred.

Bert came from Mrs. Weddington when her 15-year-old son, Bert, took the stand.

Bert said he and his three brothers had been awakened by a blast. He added that he ran outside to see what had happened and later noticed his father in the light of a flashlight and dying breaths from the state.

The boy added that his father, lying on the bed, moved a little, muttered something that couldn't be understood and died within "three or four minutes."

The four children, he said, later went to the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. Lon Workman, neighbors of the Weddingtons, testified that on several occasions they had seen Mrs. Weddington get in a car with a man near their home.

John Cowan Weddington, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Weddington, cried throughout his statement that his mother would leave home at night with men.

Deputy Sheriff Jack Blackburn identified the shotgun which was found near a barn about 100 feet from the Weddington home by officers who came there to investigate the slaying.

GIRL SCOUTS HERE EXPRESS APPRECIATION

Elizabeth May, member of Intermediate Troop No. 2, attended by Sally Burchett, of Intermediate Troop No. 6, and Kay Ann Frazier, of Brownie Troop No. 15, made the presentation to I. C. ## CAPITAL ROUNDUP

WHISKY ASSESSED
The Kentucky Tax Commission fixed the value of whiskey in bonded warehouses this year at $34 for each 750-gallon barrel, a reduction of $4 from the year's figure. Based on the 4,720 barrels in storage, the total will be approximately $228,400,000 on which local governmental units, where the product is in storage, will collect the prevailing local tax rate.

Last year more than 7,000,000 barrels were assessed at the $34 rate.

Counties having whiskey in storage are Anderson, Bullitt, Boone, Campbell, Daviess, Fayette, Franklin, Harrison, Jefferson, Jessamine, Kenton, Letcher, Madison, Meade, Mercer, Nelson, Scott and Woodford.

Four of Kentucky's larger private utilities have asked the Public Service Commission to allow them to combine their generation and transmission facilities with those proposed to be built by Kentucky Rural Electric Co-operative Corporation, near Paducah, Ky. The plan is to save "East Kentucky nearly $2,000,000 a year and give co-operative members improved service."

The Co-operative is considering an application of the Co-operative for reconstruction of 500 miles of transmission lines. The private utilities are opposing the application as a "wasteful duplication" of lines.

Companies proposing the offer were Kentucky Utilities Company, Lexington; Union Light, Heat and Power Company, Covington; Kentucky-West Virginia Power Company, Ashland; and Louisville Gas and Electric Company, Louisville.

A general reamending of Kentucky's parole system was ordered as a result of a Kentucky-Court-of-Appellate decision which discarded long-standing practices dealing with parole and probation.

The court held that a person serving two life terms in prison may be considered for parole the same as if he were serving only one term. It also held that sentences for a definite term of years must be served consecutively, rather than concurrently. The new rulings constitute a "break" for the term, prisoners who make the parole board more rigid for others.

INCREASE DENIED

The Kentucky Railroad Commission denied rail lines within the state the right to increase freight rates on coal, nine per cent, on the ground that the "coal industry cannot stand additional burdens."

The commission also approved increases on other commodities, in line with similar rates granted by the Federal Interstate Commerce Commission on interstate rates.

The commission authorized discontinuance of passenger service on the part of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company from Scottsville to the Tennessee State line.

BIDS SOUGHT

Frankfort, Ky.—Bids for improvement of 275 miles of road in 21 counties will be received by the State Highway Department April 10. The bids call for improvement of 173 miles of state projects, 67 maintenance jobs and 35 miles of rural secondary.

Candidates included in the letting are Adams, Bell, Barren, Breckinridge, Bullitt, Butler, Letcher, Henry, Oldham, Meade, Martin, Harlan, Leslie, Knox, Pike, McHenry, Hopkins, Webster, Eminence, Floyd, Scott, Marshall, Carter, Estill, Franklin, Hancock, Henderson, Kenton, Laurel, Morgan and Wolfe.

TAX VICTORY

Frankfort, Ky.—Boyd county, the home of the Ashland Oil & Refining Company, has won an important tax victory in the Court of Appeals. The court will enable it to tax all the barges and towboats belonging to that company.

The Appellate Court held that barges belonging to out-of-state organizations and using the Ohio river pay taxes to each county in proportion to the ratio of mileage in the county affected to the entire route. In the case of the Kentucky-chartered company, the entire tax on its holdings is paid to the county where the company maintains its principal headquarters.

SUGGESTED CUT PROTESTED

Frankfort, Ky.—Suggestion that the federal government may reduce state aid for vocational education purposes drew the ire of the State Board of Education when it proposed that "vocational education is an essential service to the people of Kentucky—and any cut would be false economy."

The resolution of protest declared that vocational programs—a joint federal-state venture—had resulted in helping more than 30,000 young people each year.

BUILDING PLANNED

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Property and Finance Department has allocated $50,000 to finance building improvements at the Kentucky Training Home for Feeble Minded, including improvements of the kitchen, laundry facilities so as to make it adequate for "present and future needs."

The commission also has ordered plans prepared for a new building at the institution to accommodate approximately 125 patients.

ANNIVERSARY TO BE NOTED

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky has joined other states in observing 1953 as the "golden anniversary of powered flight" with the naming by Governor Wetherby of a committee to co-ordinate the state's activities with those of a national group headed by Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle, Commissioner of Aeronautics Charles H. Gurnett was named chairman of the Kentucky committee. The first powered flight was made by Orville and Wilbur Wright Dec. 17, 1903 at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

LET CONTRACT ON HOSPITALS

UNWA Hospital in Floyd
Among 10 To Be Built
In Three-State Area

One of the 10 hospitals in Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia for the construction of which the J. A. Jones Construction Company signed a contract recently with the United Mine Workers Welfare and Retirement Fund is that which will be built at McDowell.

The United Mine Workers' district office in Pikeville had no detailed information this week on the size or cost of the structure to be built at McDowell. The 10 hospitals altogether will be built at a contract price of around $10,000,000 and will provide a total of 1,500 beds.

The Floyd hospital will be built on land purchased by the Welfare and Retirement Fund from County Judge Henry Stumbo and Troy Nickles.

The hospitals, all located in coal-mining areas, will provide care for disabled injured or sick coal miners and their families.

Sites for the new hospitals are: McDowell, in the McDowell, at or near Harlan, Middleboro, Whitesburg, Hazard and Pikeville in Kentucky; Williamsburg, Man, and Dickley in West Virginia; and Wise in Virginia.

The hospital program, part of the fund's welfare activity for John L. Lewis' miners, is believed to be the first of its kind in the history of American labor. Some local U. M. W. unions have submitted small hospitals in the past and some other unions have provided permanent care for their aged retired members, but nothing on the scale contemplated by the welfare fund has been undertaken.

The construction contract was signed by the United Mine Workers Association of Kentucky, Inc., a corporation described as wholly owned by the welfare fund—Money to build the hospitals for largely the corporation by the welfare fund and must be repaid within some definite period, not announced.

The welfare fund is supported by royalty payments by mine-owners whose mines are worked by members of Lewis' mine workers. The construction last year was valued at 40 cents for every ton of coal mined.

PILOT PLANT SITE STUDIED

Firm May Be Interested
In Location If Process
With Germanium Works

Possible interest in Prestonsburg by a germanium pilot plant was disclosed by a mid-western concern recently in a letter to Hansford May, corresponding secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. The name of the company was not revealed because its process for the extraction of germanium from coal is not complete or proven.

Excerpts from the letter follow: "It so happens that we, at present, are working on a new process which we believe may be a good one for recovering germanium from such materials as coal. However, we have not yet conducted our studies to a point sufficient for proving the value of this process."

In response to your inquiry, a pilot plant is simply a small-scale model of a commercial plant. As such, it is of sufficient size so that it can operate in every respect as a commercial plant would operate. Pilot plants, of course, can be constructed for less money than a full-scale plant and are used for proving out a process before making a heavy investment in full-scale equipment.

"You asked whether we might be interested in the construction and operation of a germanium pilot plant in Prestonsburg. It is entirely possible that we might be eventually interested in such an arrangement. However, we must first prove the worth of the process on which we are working."

WASHINGTON—Walter S. Robinson, nominated to be the secretary of state for the Eastern states, told senators that some U. S. field officers in China during and after World War II were busy "praising Communism."

CLEVELAND HAD CANCER

President Grover Cleveland was secretly operated on for cancer of the jaw in 1896. Because such operations were rare then, it was kept secret to avoid public alarm. Today, the American Cancer Society points out, thousands of patients are cured of cancer by surgery every year.

One in every five Americans will eventually have cancer, American Cancer Society statisticians estimate.

JOE H. COOLEY FOR SHERIFF

I wish to take this means to announce my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Floyd County.

It has been a step taken with deep reluctance and after long hesitation and but for my friends and the many people who are interested in good government I would not have become a candidate. They insist and properly so that the efficient and honest administration of the sheriff's office is vital to the peace, happiness and well being of the county. Their faith in me, their officers of support and the pointing out of the clear path of duty compel me to enter the race. I am interested in good government and I am not hard-ly do otherwise.

Let me say at the outset that I am in the race to win—not to be named but for the honest, hard-working proponents of good government who are to be served by trials to a great extent upon their character. The office is, should be, a position of honor and trust. I will execute their duties impartially and efficiently. The effective administration of law enforcement rests to a great extent upon their character. I will cooperate in every possible way with the sheriff's office. NO "PILLS" FOR CANCER
The American Cancer Society urges patients to seek competent help in treating cancer. It points out that no cancer ever cured itself and none was ever cured by pills, powders, or any other "home remedy" or "secret method," medicine or gadget.

HOW POPULAR SURVIVED
The first magazine article for the public on cancer was published in 1915, shortly after the American Cancer Society was founded. Now, the ACS says, scores of articles are published annually about the disease that killed more than 500,000 Americans last year.

CORRECTS STATEMENT OF EVIDENCE

Editor, The Times:

Yes, I was riding with Matt Martin on the morning of March 31, 1953, when the accident occurred which was wrongfully.

We were on our way to Martin County, Ky. Mr. Martin and myself, to test some meters, which is our job in several counties of Kentucky and West Virginia.

Here is the statement that appeared in the Times issue of last week. It was stated that James Wallen was with Mr. Martin at the time of the accident. Well, I didn't know his name was "James" before I myself, James Wallen, and Mr. Martin were the only two persons in the truck at the time of the accident.

Another thing, the same person or persons made this statement in the same issue. It read, "that James Wallen (who is incorrect) was with Mr. Martin, testified that, James Wallen, saw Tommie Friend, brother of Bobby Friend, standing about 200 feet down the road, but failed to tell Mr. Martin. I, James Wallen, saw Mr. Martin at the time, made no such statement. And give me passengers in cars and trucks start telling the driver about people standing along the highway? I did testify that I saw a small boy standing near the highway. But I did not state how many feet he was away at the time of the accident."

So let's be careful what we say about our fellow man. If we can't say something good about our fellow man, let's keep our lips closed and say nothing.

But, after all, we all make mistakes. I don't mean to incriminate on anyone, however, I want the people to know the truth of my part in the case. I had no idea to tell for the case, or for Mrs. Friend. Will say again it was an unavoidable accident.

JESSE WALLER

(Editor's note: The Times' story was based entirely on a report given by an attorney in the case, and this newspaper, in its attempt to argue law, Mr. Waller's first name appeared in error in the story, purely through typographical error.)

By PAUL BRYANT

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Witnessing the state high school basketball tournament in the University of Kentucky's spacious-but-jam-packed Coliseum last week, I could not help but be very impressed by the splendid physical condition and commendable sportsmanship displayed by the young athletes from every corner of the state.

Their actions under the pressure of many close and decisive contests reflected exceptional credit not only upon their schools and regions but also upon the highly of their parents, coaches and teachers.

Nine of the 16 teams in the tournament, including the four who survived to the semi-finals, represented schools who also participate in football.

The many unvaried stories related by fans on the difficulties encountered in the scramble for tickets to the final few seasons of the tourney recalled to mind a personal experience along this line that occurred during my high school basketball tournament.

Moranfield is planning a colossal "Griggs Day" April 7 in honor of an unusual home town boy John Griggs who served as captain of our Wildcat football squad last season. I am looking forward to the occasion for the chance to give a great competitor and fine athlete a long-deserved pat on the back.

John has been drafted for pro play with the Los Angeles Rams, but may have to postpone it until after he has in the army as "Lieutenant Griggs."

Another Kentucky who probably never be fully recognized until after he leaves UK is Larry (Duke) Hennessy. One of the biggest brills I've had in my coaching days here was seeing him playing varsity ball as a freshman. . . . Pat's can be proud of the contributions of this fine-looking, 18-pound athlete who also making exceptionally good grades on his full load of studies in Commerce.

IT'S A GOOD WORLD

BY WILLIAM

Elizabeth Douglas once taught in Waynesboro, Va. The day after she appeared in "The Times" we told her children of one class how sweet she was as a little girl next door, long ago. Her mother taught, and dear old Grandma Ambury and the rest of us neighbors loved to feed Elizabeth. She was a good girl, she and her mother were great friends. The child got so she often would ask, "You got any cornbread?" Her mother would smile and her mother would smile and her mother would smile. "You got any cornbread?" Her mother would smile and her mother would smile and her mother would smile.

Wendell Butler pulled no punches in his message to the teachers' Pinch. It was most impressive in every way. We are willing to follow his leadership Kentucky will not be long remaining the last nation, next to Arkansas. He candidly explained what must be done if we after our school. It reminded one of Dr. W. D. White, superintendent of Mississippi, 30 years ago. His poverty-stricken state was pitifully low at the time, though now it is fourteenth from bottom, next to the poor as John Turkey, Dr. Bond offered no peace or bouquets. He did a criticism on consolidation and more of it, and other things being radically opposed by the diabolism of that day. It did not make him more popular, but it did make his state wonderfully when compared to what he had to follow.

The opposition encountered by progressive leaders anywhere calls to mind the law some early Americans tried to pass to prevent anyone's using money, perhaps many years ago. The opposition to the measure would endanger the health by causing persons to take colds!

As "Mayor of Bristol," Senator Doug. Hays welcomed the teachers, who find he supports all educational measures gladly. His wisecracks kept the audience in stitches.

County Superintendent Turner made an inspiring short talk, supporting the state program for revising Section 146 of the Constitution, the recital or amending incidents in the office compare with the case of the men connected with the production of a pageant!

Rev. Bert Caldwell, who has stolen into the hearts of Floyd county, brought a courageous and timely message on the responsibility of teachers in molding young lives. He emphasized the value of character-building, by example, and language descended a string of evils.

Strangely enough, hearts are not heavy over the postponement of the pageant. It seemed both expedient and wise, necessary for several concerned, and for a truly good performance when a second is given. The demand is so great, however, one for everything. Word that Gardner Douglas had marked a sizeable hill, "that in full" after having made a good decision, brought tears to many.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Strub have been working night at home. Friday at teachers' meeting she reported two full-size loaves in her bedroom. These will keep, along with everything she has been made by kindly friends. Everyone is especially grateful to the children of Maytown, Martin, Waino and Waymire. The story captured their imagination and hearts too.

There is not the trace of the slightest ill feeling on the part of a single pageant worker toward a living soul because so many dropped out and failed to rehearse, because too few had to carry the burden too long, because time spent in criticism of the pageant might have been directed against evils that abound. Since men like R. C. LeTourneau want to come speak some day, since Dr. Eddie Martin, who ranks next to Billie Graham in evangelistic fame, wrote asking to come later the was engaged this year, since Dr. Duke McCall, B. R. Lakis and other luminaries were equally enthusiastic, but like most celebrities, with a full calendar ahead one or two years. Pageant leaders are confident that religious dramatization is coming to the fore quickly. It is comforting to know these men knew a charge would be made. Since Dr. Duke McDowell himself in a recent Training Union article explained that some religious activities must be on a union basis. Pageant officers feel safe in upholding the spirit as worthy of approval of most of us, and believe many now opposing it will some day change their minds.

Strawberry growers in Jackson county will be shown how to control insects and weeds and how to grade and pack berries.

If You Remember . . .

The evening sun flicked the eastern road with shadow and the lone pedestrian was hurried home, oblivious to all but the fatigue of the day's labor and the late hour. His strong strides took him easily around the curve of the road. Sitting on a grassy plot he saw three, or four, or maybe more, he can't remember, of men of the neighborhood. They were reading a Lexington paper and they showed him the front page—the black headlines, the stark pictures of death. There were pictures of his mother, sisters and brothers, all members of a religious cult that believed they could take a life by incantations, faith, ritual, and the mumbo-jumbo of religious frenzy restore the sacrifice to life again. The sacrifice had been his own mother, the pictured chain was a cross which she had dragged to her altar under the mad eyes of her children. All her children except the lone pedestrian who a moment ago knew only that he was tired and the hour was late.

They said his nails bit through the fragile paper, that his eyes were those of a man who sees but believes not because his senses cannot absorb the horror of it. What the widow did not know was that he was taking up each person in the mad dream, each detail in the bloody cry from the present with and asking his mind to deny the reality of what he had read. In a moment he dropped the paper. The pictures were etched with fire.

He stood alone in the eastern road, heedless of his companions, concerning himself only with the abyss that would engulf him. It must not be, he told himself, time after time. And then he heard the Voice that told him to walk to move on down the eastern road, to walk and to walk.

He moved slowly at first, hating his misdeeds with an iron will. Soon he walked with normal gait, passed familiar spots which he forced himself to recognize and pin-point in his memory of the road. In a little while he turned and came back, walking in obedience to the Voice, walking alone a little ways and returning as he had come or soon or even walking as he had been told by the Voice. The hour grew late indeed. The moon flicked the road with shadows through the willow leaves.

Sometimes in the night his wife came and walked with him, in obedience to the voice of her own compassion. Who can say that her compassion and the compassion of the Voice from out of the void that urged him to walk were one of the same universal pattern of things? When they were weary, weary into oblivion, she guided him home through the darkness for the moon had died.

They sat, for a moment, or maybe an hour upon the doorstep, wrapped in the cadence of the silent night. Suddenly his head was upon an arm and he shook with the first cry of the long travail.

"Local Industries"

Nothing intrigues me more than the life of some former industry, probably now long forgotten by most of the people who pass by the crumbling foundations or the mere hole in the ground where some building once stood. When just about everything had to be made locally, there were almost numberless small industries, which were necessary to supply the wants of the people. One such thing was a mill. Along the course of every stream of the right size there are left-over signs of a former busy time. In roving over my own area of the state I studying things I often come upon the camp near the site of a water mill that, in its day, was a great center where hundreds of people came to have their corn ground or to have logs sawed into lumber. One such place is the Shaker Mill Dam on Drake's Creek, which for some years supplied the necessary flour, corn meal and lumber for the thriving Shaker settlement at South Union, some 12 miles away. Where the settlement was, the only surface stream is small and flows through rather flat country. Drake's Creek, on the contrary, is a fair-sized little river and had an excellent fall. At great expense and labor a stone dam was put across the stream, and the mill ran for years. Today only the broken dam is at the site, all else is wrapped in oblivion except for some of the records that the Shakers made of their mill. Even smaller streams near here have many old mill sites, but usually the dams were made of timber, which long ago rotted away. When steam engines were installed in many places the water mill passed into the limbo of things that were.

In our part of the world there has been no serious revival of such industries as weaving in the years since people have realized how valuable native cloth can be. We do not live in picturesque mountain retreats and are not expected to be better than commonplace. As a result, the time-honored knowledge of weaving is just about to disappear in southeastern Kentucky. It was a shame of great wonder some years ago when we were passing one of the area pits in a carpet on a loom at the Kentucky Building museum at Western State College and actually were a yard or so of carpet to show saucer-eyed younger people that the old-timers knew a thing or two. I have often boasted that I could do all the work of carpet-making from leveling the rug to tacking down the finished carpet. I hope that I will never forget this ancient learning, which I acquired very painlessly and naturally in a home where weaving carpets was just as regular a thing as cooking meals or putting up matted sausage.

In a few places in my area there are still people who can make chairs that attract buyers, but the skill thus needed is far below what it used to be. But now an increase in interest in home-made furniture I fear that even more of this skill would long ago have been lost. A very few of my present friends could bottom a chair, setting out his oak spalls themselves and doing all the work. The few who do know how to make furniture have had to learn everything from the beginning in course in industrial arts having forgotten meanwhile all that father and grandfather had known very well.

There is growing up an attitude toward using one's hands that promises to restore some of the skills that most of us have lost. Our ancestors were not especially skilled, probably learned early to make necessary things; some few people in any neighborhood could have more than enough to do. Maybe it is the work of those more skillful ones that have come down to our own times. Today the feeling toward such skills is kindly; almost every boy wishes that he might learn to make something that would show his ability to use tools. With shorter working hours and with many people needing a hobby that will engage him all day long, that many a person will discover that he has had all his life some undeveloped abilities that can find outlet in saws, hammers, and other tools.
