AN OLD BUSINESS
The story is told of the big blow-out a certain Chamber of Commerce held honoring a business of the town telling of the Franklin D. Roosevelt. Speeches were made extolling the founder of the firm telling of the early tribulations, finally of his success in the face of every adversity.

The toastmaster finally rose to declaim, "Seventy-five years is a long time. Is there anyone else present who represents a firm which has been in existence that long?"

Up rose the minister, who had been brought along only to give the invocation and benediction. Quivering he said, "I have that honor, sir."

WHEN THE CALENDAR WAS IN POLITICAL
Any time you tamper with tradition and established custom you invite trouble. When the calendar Roosevelt changed the date of Thanksgiving, they called it Franksgiving. And when "Happy" Chandler changed the primary election date in Kentucky, some of us weren't exactly happy.

But we should be both thankful and happy that the calendar isn't changed by political whim these days. We are reminded that Augustus Caesar insisted that his name month, August, should have just as many days as July, the month named for Julius Caesar. So he sacrificed a day from February and added it to August. Then to avoid having three 31-day months in a row, he took a day from both July and November and added them to October and December. Before that, Julius Caesar had changed the calendar so mixed up that the hoop-la of the Roman spring festival was coming in the summertime.

And as late as 1752, we are reminded, the English Parliament found it necessary to drop 11 days to "reset the calendar" with the sun. Then the people yelped loud and long. They paraded the streets, and the cry was, "Give us back our 11 days!"

Help This Dream Take Reality

This idea Highway Engineer Johnson has about a new road to serve as an auxiliary to U. S. 23 from Prestonsburg to Shelbyville is most intriguing.

That would be what we would call a satisfactory answer to those who have complained—and that includes The Times—that the Big Sandy region has been consistently neglected by those who plan or build trunk highways in Kentucky.

We are glad to hear from an official source an admission such as Mr. Johnson made when he said that U.S. 23 is over-congested and that its traffic would justify a four-lane highway. Our knowledge of highways and traffic problems does not qualify us as experts, but we have long known that U.S. 23, then another over some of the more improved roads of the state in more fortunate sections, would easily prove that to the most inexperienced observer.

This idea of a highway on the west side of the Big Sandy river—that is, on the side of the stream opposite that followed by the present U.S. 23—particularly appeals to us. That, and the plan to build access routes off that main road to those broad backwoods where life is a realizing sites which now are isolated and almost useless for home-building purposes because of inaccessibility by highway.

This dream the engineer has for this section is far from reality. But it is a pleasant dream, at worst, and those who have a real interest in the Big Sandy area would do well to lend him and the idea their strongest support.

Moore didn't deny that he killed Davenport, but he claimed that he had taken several "benny" pills (benzadrine, which has been smuggled into the prison) and didn't know what he had done until he washed his hands at the barrel.

Moore swore that he was the victim of a plot led by Lloyd "Dege" Riss, alias Rife, a long-term prisoner from Louisville, to assassinate Davenport. Riss was convicted on armed robbery.

Moore related this story to the jury: Riss arranged for Moore's transfer to a more comfortable cell after his release from quarantine. Later, Riss told Moore that they were going to "get a guard."

Moore, Riss, and a third prisoner, Glenn Carroll, drew straws (match sticks) to determine which of the three would kill the guard. Moore drew the shortest stick.

Moore said he told Riss he didn't want to go through with it; that he didn't have anything against anyone at Eddyville. Then Moore said Riss threatened him and told him:

"You're gonna do it. There's no backing out."

Moore said Riss got the "Benny" pills and forced him to take them. He even told the jury where he got the weapon, a dagger fashioned from a putty knife, with which he killed Davenport.

"If he (Riss) will tell the truth he'll tell you the same as I did," Moore told the jury.

"I swear to God that I don't know I did it. I was pushed into it. I was doped. If I walked back to that man like these boys said I did, I don't remember it."

Davenport, according to Moore, got on me about wearing my "L-1" orange (reformatory) number," but the prisoner told the jury that he had not been mistreated by the guard and "I didn't have anything against him."

The Commonwealth did not call Riss to refute Moore's testimony and Moore's court-appointed attorney, George Weeks Murray, stated to the jury, "I think you've got the man's own trial here today."

Two Western State Hospital physicians, who examined Moore after the attack on Davenport, told the jury that Moore took benzadrine pills prior to the Davenport attack the drug would have had a stimulating effect and that he would have been "wide awake" and more alert.

Moore has been in K. S. P. about 35 days when he attacked Davenport. He was transferred here from the Reformatory near LaGrange. He had been in Davenport the first time about five days before the attack and told the jury, "I didn't even know his name."

Moore's criminal record shows he has been in trouble since he was sent to Greendale Reformatory when 13. Later he was convicted of grand larceny in Breathitt county.

He served about six months in the Army, but was discharged after going A.W.O.L. five times. Sentenced to two years in the Reformatory for stealing a car for storehouse breaking. Moore escaped and was recaptured. Then he was transferred to K.S.P. last June.

The son of a Knott county coal miner, Moore left school in the sixth grade. His father testified his "nears" been rich since his head was injured in an automobile accident.

nesday from the United Baptist church at Water Gap, the Revs. Jack Derovoski, Wallace Calhoun and Harold Dorsey officiating. Burial was made in the Cooley cemetery under the direction of Hall Bros. Funeral Home.

county and community leaders and citizens of the community. Christian living in the home was emphasized and re-emphasized as the key to the creation of healthy attitudes on the part of youth and to directing them to good citizenship.

"One local pastor," he said, "recently reminded a group of men at a civic club that often what we see in the youth of a community is but a reflection of the living of the adults of that community. . . . As long as we have parents who have their cocktail parties and liquors in their homes and make it available to their children and their friends for parties, we can expect the children to drink. As long as the youth hear their parents joke about the desks they pulled or the votes they bought, or the influence they have with certain people, we cannot expect them to grow up with much respect for honesty and fair play in either public or private life. Whenever the children from ten years of age on up, know that their parents or any other adult can go from his home in five or ten minutes and buy all the gin and whiskey they can carry home, and know that nothing will be said or done to them, they will do it whenever this occurs, and it occurs every day, what kind of attitude toward law enforcement does that kind of action produce in the thinking of our youth?"

These are days, the Rev. McMillen declared, when "we are to be more concerned with right principles than with politics. . . . We are interested in Christian character than in carrying elections."

Enough laws are already on the statute books, if the law as man knows it is a part of the answer to the problem, the minister commented, adding, "But what of their enforcement? To all who are now holding office or are seeking an office I would like to put this question: Why is it that some officials and candidates (not only of this county) are seemingly afraid of losing a few votes among certain elements, when there are enough God-fearing, honest, reliable people to elect any man who would openly declare himself to do the right and stick by this declaration?"

The schools themselves are not the answer, he said, to the juvenile problem. "May I say that on the whole I know of no group that is more willing to help than the school officials and the teachers of our city and county; but, whether parents realize it or not, the schools can only work with what we send them."

The church, he pointed out, shares a heavy responsibility a responsibility to offer to every youth and every individual, regardless of his or her station in life, a Bible-centered program; to teach boys and girls what God says about clean living, right conduct and, most of all, about a new way of life in Christ. Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Youth Centers and organized recreational activities have their place and help in the overall picture, but only in a general way, he added.

But the real key lies in the home. "There is only one institution that is God-given and God-ordained for the rearing of children and the proper instruction of them—and that is the home." Then he added:

"When Paul was writing to Timothy he said, 'From a child thou hast known. . . . Known what? . . . That anything is all right so long as you don't get caught? No! From a child thou has known that to be grown-up one must rebel against the authority of his parents and his elders? No. . . . Paul said, 'From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures which are able to make these wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.' "And where do you suppose he learned those holy scriptures? Not altogether at the synagogue school, not here and there from his playmates, but in his home, from his mother Eunice and his grandmother Lois. First of all, we need parents who, like Joshua of old, will say, 'As for me and my house we will serve the Lord.' The blood of Christ applied to sin-sick souls makes us completely well. . . . That's the cure for broken homes, the answer for juvenile and adult delinquency."

DON'T

The more I recall the things we were told when I was small, the more I remember that most of the time we were told, "Don't." I am reminded of a great Welsh speaker that I once heard, who said that he would not tell us much about his childhood except for one thing— "Do as your mother says, for she will tell you what you are doing and tell him not to do it."

Here are some "Don'ts" I have heard:

1. Don't set a hen in Dog Days.
2. Don't go in swimming in Dog Days.
3. Dog Days, when Sirius is riding high, have been suspected since ancient times, even by people much brighter than you and I. Dogs are likely to go mad then; even dew is poisonous to feet and water to awesky, smelly bodies. Seres toes get pretty numerous then, necessitating a generous wrapping of toes with rags that soon become dirty rags.
4. Don't plant potatoes in the light of the moon. Potatoes planted then go to tops and make very sorry taters.
5. Don't cut out a dress or any other garment on Friday unless you can finish it before the week is over. This superstition is as ancient as the human race, I suspect. It was as common in classical times as it has ever been since. Friday is Venus's day. Venus is changeable, not to be trusted. Even the weather on Venus's day is unpredictable.
6. "Friday is fairer, or fouder."
7. Don't sleep with the windows open. Poisonous air, caled even at Fidelity "miasmatic vapors," will come in and poison you while you are asleep. Incidentally, along with the miasmatic vapors will come malaria mosquitoes, but nobody seemed to know that then. Where were the screens? Such a foolish question; there had been none in the Garden of Eden, and there were none in Fidelity until I was a good-sized boy.
8. Don't kill a toad-frog. If you do your cow will give bloody milk. Even in my littlest childhood I doubted this and felt that the originator of the superstition was merely trying to get us to be humane. I did not want to kill a toad, anyway, but I have seen her fend off a snake with the same aplomb that growings had when they slaughtered a snake, inwardly rejoicing that they had punished Satan himself just a little bit more by killing the serpent that was descending from the one that tempted Eve.
9. Don't step over a puppy. If you do, you will cause it to be a dwarf. Some people have gone so far as to say that you must not step over a small child crawling on the floor, and for the same reason. Maybe some of the smallish people I knew had been thus cursed before they were old enough to do anything about it.
10. Don't eat mulberries. Inside the fruit, we were told, were grubs of some insect, probably seventeenth-year Locusts, which would poison us for sure. This is one of the few superstitions that I followed faithfully as a child, taking as gospel truth what the elders said. And though I have learned to eat nearly everything that grows, I still do not especially like wild mulberries, probably because I did not learn to like them early in life when I was starved all the time.
11. Don't look cross-eyed at a baby or stand at the head of its bed. Either act will make the poor little thing cross-eyed permanently.
12. Don't talk while you are fishing. You will scare the fish and thus get no catch. That irked me beyond words when I went fishing with Father, for I just had to make some remarks when I caught a sunfish or a catfish or a topwater. In spite of elaborate scoldings, I persisted in talking, and my string of fish was as long as anybody's. That one experience made me doubt the accuracy of that "Don't" and many another one.

Lunch Program Is Big Business

Frankfort, Jan. 14 (Sp.) — The number of Kentucky schools participating in the national school lunch program this year will total 1,256, the State Education Department has estimated.

The number participating in the 1955-56 year was 1,278, the Department said. It added:

These schools served 41,197,069 meals for an average of 21.5 cents each and spent $12,070,942 for food, labor and equipment.

When the program was inaugurated in 1943-44, only 450 schools participated.

The U. S. Agriculture Department allocated $2,265,272 to Kentucky for the program during the current year, about a half million dollars more than last year's allocation.

During the 1955-56 year, 3,277 persons were employed in school lunchrooms as cooks and managers, Merchants, wholesalers, farmers and other business people benefit from the program as well as the school children.

Digest Article Offers Advice in Psychology; Mental Blocks Analyzed

Tips on ways to get more power out of your brain cells are offered by Morton M. Hunt in an article, "How to Overcome Mental Blocks," appearing in January Reader's Digest as condensed from Mayfair.

Hunt reports that psychologists have found very slight suggestions, pressure as in examinations, too great eagerness to succeed as in applying for a job, and preoccupations as set up mental blocks. Such blocks make it difficult to see even simple solutions to problems, to recall names and hamper us in various ways.

Masquerading as "experience" such preoccupations as seriously block creative thinking that organizations like Bell Laboratories have devised techniques to counter this.

When a group of scientists attack a project one man new to the problem is placed with them. His fresh approach and lack of a ready-made solution drawn from past experience shakes up the group's thinking and leads to results in new and better ideas.

Psychologists suggest that you, when stymied by a problem, talk it over with persons with backgrounds and training different from your's who may offer a fresh viewpoint.

An especially successful technique for countering mental blocks is the "brainstorm" session—a conference where (1) anything goes, (2) the wilder the ideas the better, and (3) nobody may criticize any ideas. Later, the brainstormers go over ideas noted down critically and expand and refine those most worthy.

Finally, Hunt asserts most problems are less difficult than they seem and deserve less attention than they get. He suggests jumping into the middle of the problem and tackling it from any angle. "Once you jump, the problem doesn't resist," he declares.

Agricultural Financing Discussed at St. Louis; Bankers Want Assurance

TIGHT MONEY—A group of Kentucky bankers recently attended the National Agricultural Credit Conference at St. Louis where credit men from all over the country met to discuss the problems of financing agriculture. There was general agreement among the bankers and financial experts on two things. First, money will be "tighter" in 1957 than in recent years. The supply of it is smaller and the demand for it is greater, which will result in a slightly higher interest rate and a little more "selective" lending than in the past. And second, there will be plenty of money to finance the bank's regular customers who have established a good credit rating in the past and who show that they can use borrowed money profitably. Lenders will not be interested in putting out "risk money" this year.

They want to be assured that the loan is safe and that it will be profitable to the borrower as well as to the lender. In face of high competition for money the alert farmer will figure out his credit needs early and discuss them with his banker. "Tight money" might even benefit the farmer. If it slows the inflationary trend that has caused the price of things that farmers buy to go up so much faster than the things that he sells it will help rather than hurt.

Complicated. One thing on which bankers and farm experts were not in agreement was the merits of the Soil Bank. Although they believed in the principles of taking land from cultivation to preserve it for future needs they were in disagreement as to the operation of the program and its effect upon production and prices. Many looked upon it merely as a method of distributing cash among the farmers while others thought the program would help materially in bringing about an adjustment in supply and demand. The experts that tried to explain the program though, seemed so much confused about its operation as the farmers who are trying to put it into practice. To say the least, the program in its present form is very complicated.

Recruiting Drive by State Police Gains Momentum

Frankfort, Jan. 14 (Sp.) — The Kentucky State Police drive to secure 100 additional troopers picked up this week when three new developments took place. Acting Commissioner of Public Safety Don S. Sturgill listed these developments:

1. State Police received a legal go-ahead to sign recruits from other states. An opinion from Assistant Attorney General Walter C. Herdman stated State Police officers need only be residents of Kentucky at the time of appointment.
2. The maximum height limitations were removed from State Trooper minimum qualifications.
3. The 21st Cadet Trooper training school was scheduled for next month.

Sturgill pointed out that the 1956 Legislature authorized a 100-man increase in the State Police force which would bring the full strength to 290 officers.

"The increase in force is part of Kentucky's out-of-battle against death, injury and economic loss on the highways," Sturgill said. He emphasized the advantages of a career as a Kentucky state trooper. "State troopers are selected by an impartial and non-political personnel board composed of two Democrats and two Republican members. State Police officers are prohibited by law from taking part in politics other than to cast a vote in regularly constituted elections," Sturgill said. "Trooper applicants are not cleared by any political organization."

Commissioner Sturgill explained that persons who are not high school graduates but have two years of high school may qualify by taking the general education development test which is open to veterans. The testing centers for the GED tests are located for the most part at colleges and universities in the state, he said.

The state safety official urged persons interested in state trooper posts to contact Kentucky State Police, Frankfort.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE
More and more organizations are having national conferences in the Commonwealth. The Gov. Course Superintendent's Assn. will stage its 28th national Durfuran Conference and Show at Louisville Feb. 10-15. Maybe the grass is greener a line in James H. Mulligan's famous poem: "The bluegrass waves the bluest in Kentucky." And if we may add lib:

The bluegrass is the growingest. And those who grow it the most. — In Kentucky.

'FARMER' CHANDLER
Gov. "Happy" Chandler and other Kentucky farmers who got good prices for their tobacco crops this year can thank soldiers of the War Between the States for establishing the cigarette market which is the mainstay of the burley industry.

Before that conflict, man was content to chew tobacco or smoke an occasional pipe. Soldiers, however, "rolling their own" with scraps of tobacco, often all they had. When they returned home after the war, they carried a craving for cigarettes to all corners of the nation.

"Farmer" Chandler arose early the other morning and shined a hundred of other Kentuckians eager to see what their burley would bring on auction floors.

Chandler's crop, weighing 752 pounds and grown on a base of half an acre, was taken to a Lexington market by Woodford County Deputy Sheriff James H. Mason, who grows the leaf on the shares for the governor.

The tobacco, bringing $500.02, averaged $65.80 a hundred pounds, a mile less than last year's price.

It tells you all about who's sick an' who come an' go, Likewise the comin' vendue at the farm of Jabes Stowe. The burnin' of the cider mill belongin' to 'Fib' Brown. Gets a write-up in the paper from your ol' home town. I read the mornin' papers and the evenin' papers too. An' sometimes pick a novel up an' sort of skip it through; But when I want some pebbalum which nowhere else is foun' I unwrap the little paper from my ol' home town. They say our good and bad deeds are recorded up on high. So that God can classify us when it comes our time to die. If that be true I know a man who's goin' to wear a crown— He's the gent who runs the paper in my ol' home town. — From The Hazard Herald

State's Program To Enforce Taxes Is Being Expanded

Frankfort, Jan. 14 (Sp.) — The Department of Revenue is expanding its tax enforcement program by conveying additional information from income tax rolls to county tax commissioners.

"The latest data to be made available to the commissioners is information on accounts receivable. This will be taken from the income tax returns this year for the first time and sent to counties for use next year."

The Department has been furnishing counties with information on stock and bond ownership and merchant inventories from the income tax returns.

The period Jan. 1, in which Kentuckians are required by law to list all taxable property with county tax commissioners is now passing. Commissioner J. E. Luckett reminded taxpayers.

"Taxable property not on the rolls is termed 'omitted property' and is subject to a 10 per cent penalty and interest at the rate of 1 per cent a month when discovered."

Besides merchant inventories, property most commonly left off the rolls is other tangible personal property and newly or partly constructed buildings. Luckett emphasized.

He said every person should list stock and bond shares, notes, accounts receivable, money in hand and safety deposit boxes, funds in banks outside Kentucky, annuities, life interests, trusts or other tangible property, proceeds of life policies on deposit with insurance companies, and all other receivables and debts, secured or unsecured.

Newspaper Price Boost To Affect Publishers

Newspapers over the nation will be affected shortly with another price increase in newspaper, according to news released in New York a few days ago. The Abitibi Paper and Paper Co., Ltd., of Toronto, Canada, announced the first in a series since a general rise a year ago.

Paper costs have quadrupled in less than two decades. The new price increase, effective March 1, will boost the local cost 44 per cent according to the Abitibi announcement. Abitibi, one of Canada's largest manufacturers and a general local supplier, caused several developments in the newspaper market by its price jump. The American Newspaper Publishers Association warned the increase could result in "serious consequences" for daily newspapers faced with "increasing economic pressures." As U. S. newspapers consume around seven million tons of newspaper annually, a general increase of 44 would add at least $20,000,000 to their yearly operating costs.

The head of another big Canadian newspaper firm said he was surprised the increase was not larger. He declared a boost of 48 to 59 would have been more realistic and said a price announcement by his company would follow shortly.

The Federal Trade Commission in Washington, already studying recent rises in the costs of newspaper, said it is very "interested" in the Abitibi increase.

The steady rise in paper costs is becoming a serious concern for local and national publishers. They are faced with many problems in finding a practical means of offsetting cost increases without disrupting operations generally.

Retirement Plan Study Conducted By Commission

Frankfort, Jan. 14 (Sp.) - Pledge of cooperation was made to determine whether the Teachers' Retirement System and State Employees' Retirement System should merge for benefits of 22,000 school teachers in the state were offered last week to the Legislative Revisory Commission.

Waterfield said the 1936 Legislature directed the commission to make the study and report the findings to the General Assembly. "All the Commission wants are the plans of comparative costs to the state and teachers and comparative benefits for the teachers," he said.

Contributions by teachers range from three to five per cent, depending on the teacher's age and they average about 44 per cent of total salaries. The state matches the teachers' contributions.

Retirement age for women is 70 and 65 for men but earlier retirement is possible in some cases, with maximum benefits. Benefits received by teachers amount to one-half salary during the five consecutive years of highest earnings.

The teachers' Retirement System is a combination of Old Age and Survivors Insurance, effective in 1931 and the state plan of retirement, created in 1936.
