SIDNEY — A Pike County woman was killed in a two-car collision Thursday after the vehicle she was a passenger in was struck while traveling U.S. 119.

Peggy Ratliff, 63, of Stone, was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Earl Ratliff when the two were struck from behind. According to police Ratliff was driving "at a slow rate of speed" in the slow lane of southbound U.S. 119 at approximately 5:30 p.m. Thursday when a vehicle driven by Edward Scott Potter struck him from behind, sending his and Ratliff's vehicle into the concrete divider before both came to a rest.

Pike County Deputy Coroner Mike Hall pronounced Peggy Ratliff dead at the scene of the accident while rescue workers and others had to extract Earl Ratliff from the vehicle, according to reports. He was later transported to South Williamson ARH. His condition was known as of press time.

Police said Potter refuse medical treatment shortly after the accident and stayed at the scene, adding that alcohol was involved in the collision.

The accident remains under investigation by Kentucky State Police Trooper Brad Austin, who was assisted on the scene by KSP Trooper Jason McCellan, KSP Sgt. Anthony Taulbee, KSP Sgt. Randy Woods' and CVE Officer Keith Justice.

Also assisting during the accident were members of the Big Creek Fire Department, the Pike County Sheriff's Department, Appalachian First Response Ambulance Service and officials from the Pike County Coroner's Office.

Teachers deny responsibility for suicide

PRESTONSBURG — Four former teachers of the Allen Central Middle School student who shot and killed himself in November 2007 and who were named in a lawsuit filed by the student's parents have filed answers in response.

Allen Central Middle School teachers Greg Nichols, Angela Mullins, Lynn Handschoe and Jeremy Hall have said in their response that they hold no responsibility for 13-year-old Stephen Lawrence Patton's death.

Patton was a student at the middle school and shot himself on Nov. 28, 2007, an act his parents are saying was a result of hazing and bullying at the school that was left unchecked.

Patton's parents, Sheila and Floyd

Lawrence Patton, filed a lawsuit the following year first naming former Floyd County Schools Superintendent Paul Fanning, the school's principal Davida Bickford and then-interim Supt. Ronald "Sonny" Fentness and later naming his former teachers.

Those teachers have now answered the claim that Patton's death was the result of negligence on their part to do anything about the 13-year-old's problems at the school, saying much the same thing as administrators did in their answer last year.

The teachers are pointing the finger at the parents, saying, as did the others last year, that Patton's parents "should have known that their son ... was capable of taking his own life, was suffering from a condition or conditions which

No charges to be filed in wreck

PIKEVILLE — There will be no charges filed in connection with an accident that killed a Pike County teacher and a child on Dec. 9.

Ernie Johnson, 47, and Christian Beau Caudill, 7, were killed when an SUV driven by Elizabeth G. Stacy, 34, of Vico, crossed James' and struck Johnson's vehicle. A passenger in Stacy's SUV, Andrew Smith, also died as a result of the injuries sustained in the accident.

According to a statement released by Pike County Commonwealth's Attorney Rick Bartley, it was determined that Elizabeth Stacy and her passenger had left a concert being held at the East Kentucky Expo Center shortly before the wreck. A blood sample was obtained from Stacy, and results revealed that she had no alcohol in her system at the time of the wreck.

It was also discovered that Stacy had a low level of hydrocodone in her system, and it was determined by investigators that she had a valid prescription for the drug, and that the level of the drug in her system would not have significantly impaired her ability to operate a motor vehicle.

Stacy reportedly received significant injuries in the accident and told investigators that she had no recollection of the crash.

The police investigation also eliminated environmental factors, such as rain or mechanical failures, as causes of the wreck.

According to the release, "Although the investigation has failed to reveal a definitive cause of the wreck, the Commonwealth's attorney has reviewed the evidence and does not find sufficient proof to warrant bringing criminal charges against Elizabeth Stacy at this time."

Red Cross gets needed boost from community

by SHELDON COMPTON

PRESTONSBURG — It was a switch in the way things are usually done, with emergency responders throwing up a red flag recently.

The Big Sandy Area Red Cross called out for help and the community it serves responded as the chapter saw more than $25,000 sent its way during a radio telethon Wednesday night.

Chapter Director Robyn Tackett addressed the shortage of funds the day before the event, saying a busy fire season and other emergencies had depleted funds over the course of the last several months, adding that the struggling finances couldn't have come at a worse time, considering recent weather conditions and power outages.

"A lot of times it happens in weather just like this and they need a place to come in and have a warm cup of coffee," Tackett said Tuesday.

The Red Cross chapter was provided a trailer the day before the radio telethon, which saw over $27,000 raised through donations during full days of programming on East Kentucky

Broadcasting in Pikeville.

The trailer was given by the Pikeville Rotary Club and will help volunteers better respond to disasters, Tackett said.

Most notably, the trailer will enable responders to take care of those in need at the actual scenes of disasters by setting up in the facility and seeing people on site.

The help came just in time, according to Tackett, who said the chapter can now run without worry until June. However, before the help arrived, the Senate approves drug diversion program, drugged driving plan

FRANKFORT — Arrested drug addicts could be treated for their problem before heading to trial — and potentially head off a lengthy prison sentence — under a plan passed Friday by the Senate.

Senate Bill 4, sponsored by Senate Majority Floor Leader Dan Kelly, R-Springfield, and Senate Minority Floor Leader Ed Worley, D-Richmond, would require local jails to screen felony offenders when they are first booked. Those with drug problems could be required by a judge to seek outpatient addiction treatment and counseling as a condition for bail.

Kelly said that without treatment, many if not most offenders will be arrested again before their trial, leading to a lengthier sentence.

More serious addicts could voluntarily enter a secure facility, much like a minimum-security prison, for three months to a year to get the help they need. Follow-up supervision would be a crucial component of both programs, Kelly said. If the offenders stayed clean, they could have the felony charge wiped from their record, allowing them to lead a normal life and hold a steady job.

"This provisions of Senate Bill 4 are a smart way to deal with this problem," Kelly said. He noted that of Kentucky's 22,000 prisoners, around 5,000 are in jail simply for drug possession, while 80 percent of all prisoners are in for some drug-related offense.

Worley said the program could make a difference in the lives of many Kentuckians, because drugs touch the lives of nearly every family in some form. "I've seen what intensive drug treatment programs can do," he said. "It does work."

The bill passed 34-1.

The Senate also passed SB 5, sponsored by Sen. Ray Jones, D-Pikeville, which would ban any amount of a controlled substance in the blood while driving. The proposal would make it easier for law enforcement to convict drivers who are under the influence of drugs. Taking a prescription medica-

Sheldon Clark makes donation to Highlands

Sheldon Clark High School recently made a generous donation to the Highlands Regional Medical Center Pediatric Floor. Several students delivered teddy bears to the pediatric area of HRMC. "We are so pleased with all of the community organizations that support our pediatric patients. It is even more pleasing when young students reach out to do something nice for others. These gifts truly bring smiles to the faces of many children in our hospital," commented Robin Fitzpatrick, Clinical Manager. The pediatric team at Highlands Regional is made up of professionals that are specialized in the most up-to-date pediatric care available. As the area's premier provider of care for children, Highlands is always glad to work with the community to make things better for our pediatric patients.

Nominate a teacher who made a difference

LEXINGTON — Last year more than 100 teachers were recognized by the University of Kentucky College of Education's "Teachers Who Made a Difference" program. The UK College of Education and UK basketball great and his wife, Dan and Cheryl Isseel, are teaming up to offer the program again in 2009 and are currently accepting nominations.

"Great teachers can be found in the classroom, in the laboratory and in the gym. When I look back on my school days, I remember fondly the teachers who made a difference in my life," Dan Isseel said.

Difference program, now in its 11th year, gives individuals an opportunity to thank the teachers, principals, college professors or other educators who have inspired and motivated them to succeed.

The program does not select winners from a pool of nominees. Rather, the UK College of Education created the program to provide individuals a means to express thanks to educators who have impacted their lives. The number of honorees to be recognized is limited. Organizers ask that nominators limit recognitions to one teacher per year.

To honor a teacher, visit the UK College of Education's Web site and complete the online form. The deadline for nominations is Feb. 15, 2009.

More than 1,100 teachers have been honored since the program's inception. The Teachers Who Made a Difference program includes a special recognition event and reception attended by both the teachers and their nominators.

Tips for finding financial aid

LEXINGTON — The headlines from newspapers, stories on Web sites, and interviews on television present a cloudy picture of the current U.S. economy. Financial aid officials at the University of Kentucky want those thinking about attending college in the coming year to know there are resources out there to help make the dream of earning a college degree become a reality.

There is still significant funding available for students to attend college, and the best way to make that money available to them is to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), said Linda George, Director of Student Financial Aid at UK.

There are steps all students should take to ensure they receive full consideration for all of the funding available to them.

The most important piece of advice I can give to an incoming freshman is to fill out a FAFSA by the priority deadline of February 15," said

George. "If they meet that deadline then they will receive consideration for all of the federal funding sources available to UK students, but if they miss the deadline, they will not receive full consideration."

George encourages students to complete this process online.

"Applying online is much easier and there are built in aids that will help students avoid making errors," said George. "In addition, it is faster. So, as long as they complete their applications online before midnight February 15, they will not miss the deadline. If they plan on sending a paper application, students must have their paperwork in to the central processor by Feb. 15."

It is also important for students and their families to have certain personal financial information readily available to complete the FAFSA.

"The FAFSA asks for 2008 federal income tax information, but students and parents should complete the FAFSA even if they don't have their taxes complete," said George.

She suggests using the best estimate from the 2007 tax return if little has changed from the previous year or using information from end-of-the-calendar-year pay stubs.

"It's better to use the estimated information and meet the deadline, but once students and parents receive their 2008 tax information, they are encouraged to go online and update their applications with the most updated tax information," George said.

"Students should be leery of programs, Web sites, or people asking for money in return for assisting them with filling out the FAFSA."

"You should never pay someone to fill out your FAFSA," said George. "If you need help, just call the University of Kentucky Office of Student Financial Aid at 257-3172."

While George and other financial aid counselors will work with the three federal funding sources available to them to make sure students receive the aid they need, she also suggests one other option for paying for college.

"There are many private scholarships available outside of the university, but they do require separate applications," said George. "Students must do a little research to find them, but they need to be looking for those opportunities immediately if they plan on starting at UK this fall."

George suggests www.fastweb.com because it is free and offers a wide variety of scholarships.

Returning and transfer students have a few more weeks than incoming freshmen to complete their financial aid requests. The priority deadline for returning and transfer students is April 1.

Bad weather forces Lincoln celebration to web, video

As The Center for Rural Development attempted on Feb. 2 to launch an extensive effort to take educational programs on the Lincoln Bicentennial into schools in 42 Southern and Eastern Kentucky counties, "Mother Nature" clearly had other plans.

The season's latest round of snow and frigid temperatures canceled classes in schools throughout the region, and forced several rounds of The Center's Arts and Culture Outreach Program's Lincoln Bicentennial performances to be postponed to later dates.

In reaction to that obstacle, The Center is utilizing its cutting-edge, in-house video and Web-based tools to make online presentations by key Lincoln Bicentennial exhibitors and performers available to schools awaiting their rescheduled events, and limitless others across Kentucky and the nation.

Using Mediasite—which records and synchronizes video and digital presentations for online distribution and viewing—The Center captured educational multimedia presentations by Steven Wilson, assistant director and curator of the Abraham Lincoln Library & Museum at Lincoln Memorial University (LMU) in Harrogate, TN, and Stephen Brown, education specialist with the National Park Service's Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site in Hodgenville.

To view these presentations, visit www.centertech.com, and click the links in the special Lincoln Bicentennial story section near the top of the homepage.

The Center will e-mail links to the online presentations to teachers and school administrators across Kentucky, who can in turn show the presentations to students at their leisure on a computer through any Web browser, according to Lonnie Lawson, president and CEO of The Center.

"The Center is committed to rescheduling all of our in-school Lincoln Bicentennial performances and programs between February 2 and 6 that were postponed because of the weather," Lawson said. "Even as we await confirmation of these new dates, The Center's video studio and high-tech Web-based tools will allow students to experience some of what they will see when we are able to get the programs into their schools."

Following presentations Thursday at The Center before more than 100 students from Hopkins Elementary School in Pulaski County, Wilson and Brown visited The Center's full-service digital studio to be filmed.

Mediasite then combined footage of their respective live presentations—Wilson's on The Center's exclusive "Abraham Lincoln: Icon and Enigma" visual arts exhibit, and Brown's on the effects of slavery on Lincoln during his formative years in Kentucky—with their digital presentations.

As students watch the men deliver their talks online, Mediasite automatically advances the digital presentation slides.

"This truly is the next best thing to them being there in person," Lawson said. "What's more, The Center's digital video studio and Mediasite are tools available for any public or private business or organization looking to cut costs and time wasted in travel and repeat meetings. These tools can provide a platform to build, film, and create interactive, Web-based professional development and training curricula that can be viewed across the state, nation, and globe with the click of a button.

Weather permitting, The Center's Lincoln Bicentennial celebration will continue Monday, Feb. 9, with a week of in-school Arts and Culture Outreach Program performances throughout the region.

These performances will include Kentucky Humanities Council's Kentucky Chautauqua, which will take four historically accurate impersonations—including Lawrenceburg's Jim Sayre as Abraham Lincoln—into area schools to illustrate the impact of Lincoln on Kentucky and the nation.

The Center will also host an evening of public events on Thursday, Feb. 12 beginning at 5:30 p.m. with Wilson's live pre-show presentation detailing LMU's "Abraham Lincoln: Icon and Enigma" exhibit at The Center. Sonny's Bar-B-Q will serve a catered meal during the pre-show event at a cost of $7 for adults and $4.50 for children. A free performance of the Kentucky Repertory Theatre's "One Man's Lincoln" follows at 7 p.m. in The Center's theater. LMU's exhibit, featuring the eclectic works of famed artist Harry Wood and 19th-century steel engravings, woodcuts, and paintings, will remain on display at The Center throughout February.

The Center is located at 2292 South Highway 27 at traffic light No. 15 in Somerset. To find out more about how Mediasite and The Center's digital studio can address your professional development needs, contact Larry Combs, director of business services, at 606-677-6000 or via e-mail at lrcombs@centertech.com.

Beware of dangers from kerosene heater use

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Department of Public Health (DPH) is advising Kentuckians of the possible dangers from kerosene heater use as residents seek alternative heat sources to stay warm following last week's devastating winter ice storm.

"The improper use of kerosene heaters can be deadly if homeowners do not follow manufacturer's instructions for this alternative heat source," said William Hacker, M.D., DPH commissioner. "It is important to take precautionary safety measures such as allowing adequate ventilation to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning and avoid fire hazards."

Officials from DPH advise residents to follow precautionary guidelines from the National Center for Environmental Health for safe kerosene heater use:

- Be sure to properly follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully for your specific heater model, making sure that the wick is set at the proper level as instructed by the manufacturer and is clean.

- Ensure your kerosene heater is only operated in a well-vented area. Leave a door open to the rest of the house or keep an outside window open to ensure an adequate flow of fresh air.

- Kerosene heaters require 1-K grade kerosene fuel. When colored or cloudy kerosene is burned, it will give off an odor, smoke and cause increased indoor pollution levels because of the fuel's higher sulfur content. Non-1-K grade kerosene can also gum up the wick.

- Always store kerosene in a container intended for kerosene only, not in a gasoline can or a container that has contained gasoline. This helps to avoid using contaminated fuel or the wrong fuel by mistake. Kerosene containers are usually blue and gasoline containers are red.

- Never refuel the heater inside the home. Fill the tank outdoors, away from combustible materials and only after the heater has been turned off and allowed to cool. Do not fill the fuel tank above the "full" mark. This area is used to allow the fuel to expand without causing leakage when the heater is operated. Never attempt to move a lighted kerosene heater. Even a carrying handle could cause turns.

- To avoid the risk of fire, even in normal operation you should place kerosene heaters several feet away from all furniture, curtains, paper, clothes, bedding and other combustible materials.

- Infants, small children and pets should be kept away from heaters to avoid serious burns. Seek immediate medical attention if you suspect carbon monoxide poisoning and are experiencing symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning. Early symptoms include headache, nausea, vomiting and fatigue. Carbon monoxide poisoning is treatable.

The basis of the suit is that both the Bickford and Fanning, along with the four teachers, had prior knowledge that Stephen Patton was being subjected to bullying and harassment on a regular basis at his school, behavior his family believes led him to commit suicide, and did nothing to intervene in the boy's behalf. Jasper Ward and Vanessa

Cantley, the attorneys representing the Pattons, allege that the problem of bullying within the school system was one that was "well known" and as such administrators and teachers acted in a negligent manner when they failed to exercise "an affirmative duty to Stephen to take all reasonable steps to prevent foreseeable harm to him."

Tackett also said that lack of funds had kept the local Red Cross from opening a shelter for those who have been without power for the past two weeks due to the ice storm that started in the area Jan. 26. With funds in hand, a shelter could have been opened for the thousands of people in the region who went without power for days following the storm.

Opposite of inaction

In eight years in office, President George W. Bush had to be dragged, kicking and screaming, to just about any initiative involving global warming, greenhouse gas emissions and higher fuel economy standards for vehicles. It took President Barack Obama six days to take two big steps on such issues. What a difference an election makes.

Obama recently directed the federal Environmental Protection Agency to re-examine whether California and other states should be allowed to have tougher emissions standards to reduce the amount of greenhouse gases being spewed by tailpipes. Obama also directed his administration to start working on fuel-efficiency guidelines for the auto industry in time to cover 2011 model-year cars.

Whether through state action on emissions or a tighter federal policy on fuel efficiency (which could take longer to bring about), the United States needs to reduce its impact on climate change as well as its reliance on unstable foreign sources of energy. Obama's directives are steps in the right direction.

California and at least a dozen other states have tried to come up with tougher emissions standards than those imposed by the federal government, but, Obama said, "Washington stood in their way." The Associated Press reported. He wants the EPA to take a second look at a decision denying California -- and the states that want to follow its model -- permission to set tougher standards.

California has long been a leader on reducing pollution and emissions from vehicles. But the Bush administration blocked California from setting tougher emissions standards, which would have required better fuel economy from Detroit automakers.

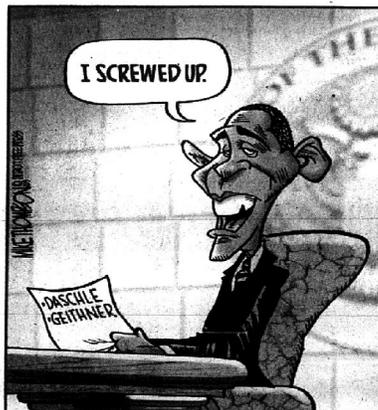

California's proposed restrictions would force automakers to cut greenhouse gas emissions 30 percent in new cars and light trucks by 2016. Automakers would need to boost fuel efficiency in new vehicles to about 36.8 miles per gallon in the states that choose to adopt the California standards.

Wisconsin was not one of the states seeking to follow California, but a spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources said officials would like to join if the EPA backed the tougher standards.

"Year after year, decade after decade, we've chosen delay over decisive action," Obama said in his first formal event in the East Room of the White House late last month.

It's long past time to change that.

Top 10 reasons Gitmo should be on Alcatraz

by CHUCK NORRIS
CREATORS SYNDICATE

When I heard about the possibility that the terrorist detention camp at Guantanamo Bay Naval Base (Gitmo) will move to Alcatraz Island in the middle of the San Francisco Bay, I got excited. Ideas from economic stimuli to renewed patriotism started flooding my mind.

Here are the top 10 reasons I believe Gitmo should be moved to Alcatraz.

10. D-Block. Not the hip-hop group, but the row of solitary confinement cells at Alcatraz. Need I say more? (Of course, "Gitmo and the Golden Gates" might make a hit rap song, too.)

9. It is rumored that "Dirty Harry" (Clint Eastwood's notoriously tough San Francisco cop character) still roams the streets with his .44 Magnum. Would terrorists really try to escape if he were across the bay? Do they feel that lucky? Well, do they?

8. It would give Congress something better on which to spend those hundreds of billions of dollars in bailout money than the absolute waste of more Wall Street bonuses and partisan pork.

7. My buddy the Governor needs a bailout, and the new "Hasta la Vista, Alcatraz" tour could be a gigantic boost for California tourism.

6. It's about time for a sequel to "Escape From Alcatraz," called "Bet Your A— That You Better Stay on 'The Rock.'"

5. Tony Bennett wants to produce his new smash single, "I Left My Terrorist in San Francisco."

4. The only text in the prison library and school would be my latest book, "Black Belt Patriotism — How to Reawaken America," with daily memory tests to see whether the detainees can recite the appendices containing the Declaration of Independence, our Constitution and the Ten Commandments.

3. Because House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., was a big advocate for Gitmo's closing and seeing as her district includes Alcatraz Island, let her deal with its aftermath. Pelosi even could help guard the captives with binoculars from her San Francisco high-rise.

2. Recently commuted border agents Ignacio Ramos and Jose Alonso Compean need new jobs and are willing to train and head up Alcatraz's new team of correctional officers.

1. I'm volunteering to be the new warden, and I pledge to make "The Rock" a Chucktatorship.

Chuck Norris

Are you with me? All joking aside, remember when America was known as being tough and compassionate? Will we now polarize from waterboarding to being pantiwayists?

Do most really believe it makes sense to shut down Gitmo for world adulation, while we possibly put Americans at greater risk by relocating these jihadists within our borders?

Is Time magazine serious when it suggests six possible domestic military facilities, from New York City to San Diego, as the new home for these enemies of the state?

Was Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., serious when he told Fox News last week that he'd offer his own district as a future dwelling place for the 245 Gitmo terrorist detainees? He said: "Sure, I'd take them. They're no more dangerous in my district than in Guantanamo. There's no reason not to put them in prisons in the United States and handle them the way they would handle any other prisoners."

Do Americans really want terrorists — such as Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the mastermind of 9/11 — on our soil?

In Robert Spencer's excellent new book, "Stealth Jihad," he documents well how radical Islam is subverting

Evaluating new cars is no picnic

by DONALD KAUL
MINUTEMAN MEDIA

You can take a kid out of Detroit but you can't take Detroit out of the kid. That's my excuse, anyway. I'm a car nut. I grew up in Detroit and I like cars the way Imelda Marcos liked shoes. I call it my auto-eroticism (and you'd be amazed at the looks I get when I call it that).

And what better place to indulge one's lust for the auto than the Detroit Auto Show? It was once the premier show in North America if not the world. It's not quite that now (hardly anything about Detroit is quite that now) but there's still enough there to stir the loins. And the girls are nice too.

Foam on the late is the fact that I am in the market for a car right now. That gave focus to my auto show trip last month.

Where once I lingered over the Jaguars and Maseratis, drooling in front of the BMWs, Porches and Corvettes. I instead centered on practical cars — ones that gave good value for the money, were fuel efficient with good safety and reliability records, cars whose back seats would accommodate friends with creaky joints. (Note to my fellow car nuts: I know, that's pathetic, like going into a chocolate shop and asking for tofu ice cream. What can I say? The fires burn low.)

There were other questions to be answered as well. Should I go for total fuel efficiency and buy a hybrid or, living in the upper Midwest as I now do, should I go for an all-wheel drive to better make it through the snow?

And if that wasn't complicating enough, I was looking to buy American, if possible. After expressing sympathy for the Washington bailout of the American automakers I felt it bordered on the unpatriotic to buy a foreign car.

The last time I'd owned a new American car was about 25 years ago when I had the great misfortune to buy a "Pontiac X car." To say it was a piece of junk is to bel junk. It had a disturbing habit of grinding to a halt on the highway, leading to a tow and major surgery. In between, things would fall off — knobs, screws, nameplates, dials, things.

I finally got rid of the sled and vowed never again to put myself in the way of an American car which, in any case, tended to be sloppy handling, behind the curve in safety features and too, too big.

In the meantime I have owned Swedish cars, German cars and Japanese cars — all of them better than any American car I had owned previously (with the exception of a couple of great Checkers I had that were so fun as to not really count as American cars).

So what did I find at the Detroit show?

I found that they do not make cars the way they used to. They make them much, much better. They are better looking, more reliable, they get incredible mileage for their size, they're much safer and the creature comforts they offer beggar the imagination.

"Stick to the program," I kept telling myself. "You're here to pick out a real life car, not indulge in eye-candy."

OK, I found a delightful, reasonably priced car made in Indiana. The manufacturer was Japanese and most of the parts were made in Canada. Then there was an American car I liked, but it was made in Mexico, with parts made in Canada. I also discovered a sensational Korean car, made in Korea parts and all. But I'm not sure you can trust a car whose parts aren't made in Canada.

So, is it more patriotic to buy a car that puts Americans to work or one that helps keep an American manufacturer out of bankruptcy? Aye, that is the question.

If any of you out there have suggestions for me I urge you to send them. I need help.

And is it better to buy or lease? Why is that?

This Town, That World

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

NO SWEAT

Another threatened species is the lowly sweat bee. And we doubt if EPA or any other agency, public or private, can do much to save it. This creature, like others, is dependent upon the environment for its continued existence. You don't guard the sweat bee against hunters or trappers, or any predator. It will live only in its natural environment, where there is sweat.

And, who's working up a good, honest sweat, these days! Just ask anybody, and they'll tell you, "No sweat."

HINT OF DANGER

On his most recent visit to this office, Lenna Moore was having trouble finding parking space. My overcoat was in the only chair available, and I suggested he dump it on my desk and be seated.

"You don't reckon there's any danger of losing it there, do you?" he guilelessly inquired.

THE ANSWER

Paul Harvey in his radio newscast occasionally digresses from straight news to provoke thought with a story. One such occasion was last Wednesday what he told of the man who was in trouble and expressed the thought that perhaps God had deserted him.

"You promised me, Lord, you would never forsake me," he said. And there were our tracks, side by side. But now, Lord, I am in deep trouble, and I see only one set of tracks. Why have you left me?"

To which came the reply: "I have never promised you escape from trouble, but I did promise never to forsake you, to walk with you, side by side. And now you see only the tracks of one, and you wonder, My child, I have not left you—I have taken you in my arms."

HELPFUL SNAKES?

This column is a hodgepodge, verily. Now we turn to what Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine has to say for snakes. "Friends of man," the magazine says, pointing out that these crafty critters are not only helpful in reducing the evident population of other pests but also lends their venom to science in creating possibilities and lending the enzymes in the venom to a treatment for hemophilia on the one hand, and for dissolving blood clots on the other.

Then it says here) poisonous snakes fight crime. For example: A gas station owner in Virginia employs a six-foot boa constrictor to patrol his place of business, after hours. No trouble with prowlers, whatsoever. And in a jewel exhibit in Stockholm, three of the world's deadliest snakes were put inside

GO RED FOR WOMEN

Hospital rings together women to fight heart disease

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

The Ramada Inn in Paintsville was filled with ladies in red on Friday for the third-annual Go Red for Women Luncheon sponsored by Highlands Regional Medical Center.

According to the Go Red for Women website, the organization "celebrates the energy, passion, and power that women have to band together to wipe out heart disease."

Jean Dorton, with Big Sandy Community and Technical College, served as host for the event. "We want to spread the word to be heart healthy," Dorton told the crowd.

Three doctors from Highlands Regional Medical Center spoke at the event, with each doctor talking about stories relating to cases dealing with heart disease.

"Heart disease is what I like to call a real stinker," said Dr. Sikder. "It doesn't discriminate based on age, gender, race, or anything. I want to encourage all women, regardless of age, to get out there and be a little active."

The promotion of regular exercise was a point made by all of the doctors, as well as getting checked if you think you have symptoms of heart disease. "Do not take any chances with your health," said Dr. Dalati.

Dr. Payne displayed multiple images of damaged and post-mortem hearts to help get the healthy heart message across.

"We've already had lunch, so I think it's okay to look at these," Payne joked.

Regina Hall, with the Big Sandy Area Development District, spoke as a survivor of heart disease, having been diagnosed with heart problems when she was an infant.

"My parents had just adopted me and taken me to see the doctor," Hall said. "He told my dad that they should give me back, that I was very sick and had a hole in my heart."

Throughout her adulthood, Hall considered if her heart-related issues to be nothing more than stress and anxiety until last year when she woke up unable to breathe.

"I had open heart surgery in March and I have made a full recovery," Hall said. "Unlike a lot of women, I don't care if people know my age. I am 38. That means I survived heart disease and I have a chance to see 39."

MOVIES FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

'Pieces'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A chainsaw-wielding psycho killer upsets a quiet Boston campus in this 1980's chiller that boasts gory effects, horrible dubbing, gratuitous aerobics and a seasoned cast of B-movie thespians phoning in their performances.

The story begins with a prologue, circa 1942, that sets up the action. A young boy is glimpsed putting together a jigsaw puzzle while reciting the tale of "Humpty Dumpty" in a flat monotone.

His mom storms in and freaks out when she sees his puzzle is that of a nude pin-up girl. She proceeds to wreck the room while searching for a porn stash and orders the lad to fetch a trash bag.

Unfortunately there's a communication problem here as he returns with an ax instead and proceeds to split open mom's melon. Having dealt with this distraction, the boy finishes his puzzle but must think fast when a nosy neighbor calls the cops and they begin hammering on the door. He opts to stash himself in a closet and is discovered by the law men, who automatically assume he is a victim too.

Cut to 40 years later. A college campus is stunned by a series of chainsaw murders and the police are having a hard time with the investigation. One problem is too many suspects, though the campus appears to be almost deserted (maybe they couldn't afford extras).

The other problem is that the student body appears to consist of two guys and a gaggle of leotard-sporting aerobics students. They aren't an impressive lot and come off as sex-obsessed dope fiends who giggle over nonsense and are just looking to party. Actually this was probably a realistic interpretation of campus life in the 1980s, if memory serves.

Still there are a few dubious characters which include a hulking gardener, a key anatomy teacher and a dean of students with sensitivity issues.

Inspector Bracken gets the case and spends most of his time arriving at murder scenes and chomping on a cigar. He embeds a female cop on the campus, posing as a tennis instructor, but doesn't provide her any security, though he does call an anonymous student, named Kendall, to keep an eye on her. Kendall should be a suspect.

he's had relations with most of the victims. But Bracken treats him like a golden boy, and even allows him to assist in the investigation.

It's all just an excuse for gory murders which pop up every seven minutes and keep the film on life support. The proceedings are also laced up by bizarre choices which include shots of glued hands put together, the puzzle glimpsed in the opening, these scenes correspond with the killings as the murderer takes a body part from

My very own dog

by KATHLEEN BRACHER

"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE CHILD'S SOUL"

My very own dog. I can have my very own dog? These were the thoughts swirling in my head as I stared at the black and white print of the newspaper ad:

DOG TO GIVE AWAY.
LAB AND COLLIE MIX.
GOOD WITH KIDS.

I had begged and begged my parents for a dog.

"Come on, Dad! Our yard is huge. I'll take care of it," I pleaded. "I will!"

Up until then, his only response was, "We'll see."

My hopes had always hung on the edge of a cliff, ready to go crashing down. But this was the day that my hopes soared to the sun. My dad had pointed out the ad to me; he made the phone call; he drove the van across town to pick up the dog. All the while, I was thinking: My very own dog, my very own dog. Visions of a peaceful dog sleeping next to me danced in my mind.

"Her name is Grace," the owner told us. "She's good, but she barks at the traffic," she sighed.

I nodded, barely hiding my excitement. When I grasped Grace's leash, it tingled in my fingers. Her pink tongue lolled out as she panted heavily. "It's OK, girl," I soothed her. I rubbed her golden fur and traced the thick black stripe down her back with my fingers.

"It's OK. We'll be home soon," Grace looked at me with untrusting brown eyes.

Dad pulled into our driveway. I swung the side door open, and Grace took off like a rocket. I had a firm grip on the leash ... I thought I snapped, letting Grace free. My very own dog raced down our sloping backyard, under the white picket fence, and into our neighbor's yard. She circled that yard once and slipped back to ours.

"Grace! Grace!" I yelled. "Come back here!"

I screamed her name repeatedly. Dad called her. Mom joined in the chorus. We begged. We pleaded. But our voices meant nothing to "my very own dog."

Dad looked at me: "She's your dog. She's your responsibility. You'll need to figure out how to get her back."

"I don't want her back!" I yelled in frustration. "How can I have a dog if she won't listen? I can't do it!" A big tear rolled down my cheek.

"It's some food," Dad suggested.

I set out a pan of cool water and some fresh dog food. "Grace! Grace!" I kept yelling, even as my voice went hoarse. Grace paced along our side of the picket fence. Finally, she linked up to lap at the water. The moment I stepped toward her, leash in hand, she

Eagles fall to Jacksonville State

TIMES STAFF REPORT

JACKSONVILLE, Ala. — Jacksonville State scored the last nine points of the game in a 57-52 upset win over Morehead State in an Ohio Valley Conference game Thursday evening in Jacksonville.

UT Martin's win over Austin Peay left the Eagles in first place in the current league standings. MSU, at 9-3, is now a half game ahead of UTM.

JSU (10-11, 4-8 OVC) was led by DeAndre Bray who scored a career-high 18 points. Jonathan Toles and Jeremy Bynum scored 13 points each.

Morehead State (13-11, 9-3 OVC) got 17 points from Leon Buchanan. Kenneth Fariel had his 14th double-double of the season, scoring 14 points and grabbing 20 rebounds. Fariel also had three blocked shots and four steals.

"Both teams played extremely hard," said MSU Coach Donnie Tyndall. "We both got after it on the defensive end. We didn't shoot the ball very well, but it's hard to get in rhythm when you have so many players in foul trouble. It was a tough loss."

Neither team shot well. JSU hit 16-of-49 (32.7 percent), MSU hit 18-of-57 (31.6 percent). The Gamecocks hit eight-of-19 three-pointers, the Eagles only one-of-eight.

Morehead State won the rebounding battle, 44-39, and had 16 turnovers to 15 for JSU.

The Eagles trailed by 19 (60-41) but went on a 11-0 run to start their comeback. Tiffany Stephens, who scored all 15 of her points in the second half and overtime, hit two free throws at the 4:43 mark to make it a 60-52 game.

The Eagles were still behind by double digits (67-56) with 2:56 left, but MSU went on a 14-2 run, and Brittany Pittman's layup with 43 ticks left gave MSU its first lead since the first half (70-69). Pittman put another one in with 28 seconds left for a three-point lead (72-69) MSU lead. JSU's Eren McMichael, however, filled a long three pointer with 22 seconds that ultimately sent the game into overtime.

In the overtime period, Stephens scored six of her 15 points, and it was her pair of free throws with 3:44 left that gave her team a 76-74 lead it never relinquished. The Eagles went on to lead by as much as 10 in the period and held JSU to a 0-for-6 field goal effort.

Bozeman led the Eagles with 26 points and also had six rebounds. She also set a school record by going a perfect 14-of-14 at the free throw line. Courtney Lumpkin had 14, Hamilton netted 13, and Pittman scored 10 for the Eagles. Ashley Martin had a team high 14 points and scored seven points.

The Gamecocks got a team-high 19 points from Jolie Elezokhae and 14 from Brittany Wiley. The Eagles outrebounded JSU 40-38.

After hitting just 28 percent of its shots in the first half, MSU shot 47 percent in the final half and 67 percent in overtime. MSU was also a season best 32-of-37 at the free throw line.

Franklin named Middle Tennessee offensive coordinator

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — Middle Tennessee State University Head Coach Rick Stockstill announced the hiring of Troy Franklin as the Blue Raiders' new offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach on Thursday. Franklin takes over for G.A. Mangus who served in the same capacity the past three years.

"We are excited to have Tony joining our staff," said Stockstill. "I know he can help us expand our offensive philosophy while bringing a lot of energy and enthusiasm to that side of the ball."

"He will also be a very valuable asset in recruiting because of his many contacts throughout the country."

Franklin comes to Middle Tennessee after a brief stint as the offensive coordinator at Auburn in 2008 and the previous two seasons in the same capacity at Troy. Franklin uses a wide open offensive attack that spreads the ball to players in an unusually fast paced, no huddle scheme.

In two seasons at Troy, the Trojans went 16-9 overall and 12-2 in the Sun Belt Conference while collecting two conference championships. During that span his offense scored 30 or more points in 11 games, including games against Florida, Georgia, and Oklahoma State.

"I am glad to be coming to Middle Tennessee and working with Coach Stockstill, his staff, and meeting the players," said Franklin. "I am very familiar with Middle Tennessee because of our conference affiliation when I was at Troy and I can't wait to get started."

Franklin is excited about is getting to know all of the people and becoming part of the Blue Raider family."

In his first season at Troy, in addition to helping the Trojans win their first Sun Belt Conference title and a victory in the New Orleans Bowl, Franklin also helped engineer the second ranked offensive unit in the Sun Belt just one season after being ranked 15th in the league in total offense. The Trojans ranked first in the league in passing offense, again one year after ranking last, despite having faced three of the top 20 ranked SEC defense teams in the country during the season, and improved in conference scoring from 12 points to 25 points per game.

Franklin also recruited 2006 Sun Belt Offensive Player of the Year Omar Haugabook who swept the top conference honors at seasons end. Haugabook also led the league in passing yards per game completions and passing efficiency.

In 2007, the Trojans ranked 16th nationally in total offense and 25th in scoring offense.

Franklin joined the University of Kentucky football staff in 1997 following 16 years as a high school football coach. During his four year tenure at UK, the Wildcats enjoyed unprecedented success on the offensive side of the ball, including setting several NCAA, SEC and school records.

After coaching running backs for three seasons, Franklin was named offensive coordinator for the 2000 season and led the Wildcats to the nation's second best passing offense, as well as the nation's 11th best team in total offense.

Franklin's two back combinations at Kentucky out-gained any two back combinations in the SEC in total yards from scrimmage for three straight seasons. Quarterbacks Tim Couch, Dusty Bonner, and Jared Lorenzen each led the SEC in passing during their tenure as UK's quarterback and Couch was the first player selected in the 1999 NFL draft. Several other UK players reached their goals in making NFL teams after their experience in the high powered offense.

Franklin was also named one of the top 10 recruiters in the South during his four years at Kentucky as he helped lead the Wildcats to their first back-to-back bowl appearances in 15 years and their first New Year's Bowl game appearance in 50 seasons.

In 2001, Franklin authored a nationally acclaimed book, Fourth Down and a Lie To Go, which chronicled the good, bad and ugly experiences of his college football journey.

In 2003, Franklin was chosen to lead the expansion franchise Louisville Horsemen football team in their inaugural season in the NFL. The Horsemen exceeded expectations for an expansion franchise and earned a birth in the playoffs to continue a 9-5 record, while setting records for attendance and leading the Atlantic Division in scoring at more than 50 points per game.

USA Today took notice of Franklin's football coaching and teaching abilities in a feature story in 2005 which detailed his consulting successes as a nationally sought after offensive football coach.

Franklin also received rave reviews for his second book, Victor's Victory, which chronicled the tragic death and spectacular life of 15 year old Hoover High football player, Victor Dionte Hill. Hill died from sudden cardiac arrest on the football practice field during one of Franklin's consulting sessions. The book has helped to continue the mission of Cheryl Hill, Victor's mother, to make teachers, coaches, and parents aware of the need for automatic external defibrillators (AED's) in every school and youth organization in Alabama.

Franklin earned both his Bachelor's and Master's degrees in education from Murray State University where he was a swimmer as a running back. He is married to Laura Franklin and they have three daughters: Chelsea (24), Caroline (21), and Caitlin (19).

Hunting, fishing license dollars put to work

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

FRANKFORT — Kentucky's current hunting and fishing licenses expire on February 28. If you plan to fish the spring runs for white bass or turkey hunt this spring season, you'll need to purchase a new license and permits.

The current tough economic times have folks thinking about saving money. For outdoors enthusiasts who love to fish and hunt, purchasing a Resident Sportsman's License saves $50 over buying all of the licenses and permits it covers separately.

This license includes the combination hunting and fishing license, spring and fall turkey permits, statewide deer permit, state waterfowl permit and trout permit. Waterfowl hunters still need to purchase their federal duck stamp, however. The Resident Sportsman's License does not cover user permits for Peabody Wildlife Management Area or the Land Between the Lakes, or any application fee or permit for elk hunting.

The resident combination hunting and fishing license is also a good deal. Both of these licenses cost $40 if bought separately. The resident combination license is only $30.

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources depends on license sales to fund its operations. The department does not receive any General Fund state tax dollars.

These funds manage roughly 1 million acres of public land and waters for the benefit of all Kentuckians and the fish and wildlife that live on these lands or swim in those waters. It provides needed money to acquire more public lands for hunting, bird watching, fishing or hiking.

Your license dollars provide technical assistance to approximately 2,000 Kentucky landowners each year for wildlife habitat improvement projects and advice.

The fisheries division of Kentucky Fish and Wildlife stocks more than 4 million fish annually in our state's waters with these funds. When you buy a license, you are funding the management of our state's fish populations for all to enjoy. You also pay to restore species such as lake sturgeon to the upper regions of Lake Cumberland.

You provide concrete, bulldozers, gravel and manpower to build new boat ramps, bank fishing areas, fishing piers and canoe access sites. License dollars help repair boat ramps impacted by flooding or renovate aging ones.

When you put down your hard-earned money for a new license, you fund education and outreach programs that reach 400,000 children and adults each year to help ensure our hunting and fishing heritage continues.

There is a lot more than meets the eye when you plunk down the money for your Resident Sportsman's License, combination hunting and fishing license, annual hunting and fishing license, trout permit or spring turkey permit. You fund a broad spectrum of activities that improve the quality of life for all Kentuckians.

To purchase your license and permits on-line, go to fw.ky.gov. You may also purchase them over the phone by calling toll free 1-877-598-2401. Licenses are also available at many tackle shops, sporting goods stores, gun stores and in the sporting goods section of department stores.

Legendary racers to compete in Saturday Night Special

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Race fans who thought they had seen the last race of Darrell Waltrip, Harry Gant or David Pearson, even the legendary Junior Johnson, are in for a big surprise.

These champion drivers and more are scheduled to be a part of the first Saturday Night Special at Bristol Motor Speedway Saturday, March 21.

Paired with celebrity partners, these legendary racers will run 35 circuits of a 50-lap event to benefit charity and send race fans on a trip down memory lane.

"We made a decision over the winter to take what we believe is the best fan experience in racing and make it even better," said Jeff Byrd, president and general manager of Bristol Motor Speedway. "When we started talking about this, we wanted to take the Food City 500 weekend to another level. We believe having these celebrated drivers back on a track where they all have won in a stock car does that. These guys helped make Bristol.

"Now, on top of the Scotts Turf Builder 300 Nationwide race and a 100-lap late model race we have added to the day, fans will get this to top off their evening for absolutely no added cost. Added value, but no added cost."

Assigned teammates will start the race and run 15 laps. At the end of that segment, some of Bristol's best will start the second portion of the race in the order of finish of the first. Drivers will be competing in late model stock cars and $25,000 will be donated to the charity of choice of the winning team. The second-place team will have $10,000 given to the charity of its choice and $5,000 will go to the designated charity of the other entrants.

But... that big Bristol trophy they get to keep for themselves.

"It's been a while," said

Johnson, who has one win as a driver, but 20 at BMS as a car owner. "But I think I can still turn some laps around this place. Darrell better buckle up."

Terry Labonte, Sterling

Marlin, Jimmy Spencer and Phil Parsons also are expected to compete.

Dale Jarrett, Richard Petty, Rusty Wallace and Cale Yarborough were extended invitations.

Crawford named NBDL Player of the Week

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

LEXINGTON — Former Kentucky men's basketball player Joe Crawford of the Los Angeles D-Fenders has been named NBA D-League Performer of the Week for games played during the week of Jan. 27, 2009. Crawford is the first Los Angeles player to earn the honor this season.

The former Wildcat averaged 26.3 points and 4.3 rebounds in three games for the D-Fenders. He led Los Angeles to a 2-1 record, including two wins over the first-place Idaho Stampede.

The 6-5 rookie guard was the 58th overall pick by the Los Angeles Lakers in the 2008 NBA Draft. He ranks fourth in the NBA D-League with 21.3 points per game. Other top performers last week included Pops Mensah-Bonsu, who averaged 24.0 points and 10.0 rebounds in his first two games for Austin; Josh Davis, who averaged 27.0 points and 12.5 rebounds in two games for the 14ers; former Wildcat Erik Daniels, who averaged 25.0 points and 11.5 rebounds in four games for the BayHawks; Othys Jeffers, who led Iowa to a 2-1 record, averaging 24.0 points and 9.3 rebounds; Donnell Jefferson, who averaged 25.3 points and 6.6 assists in three games for Utah.

The NBA Development League, founded in 2001, is the NBA's official minor league and features 16 teams with direct affiliations to NBA teams. The league has produced 15 percent of the players on 2007-08 end-of-season NBA rosters and continues to develop current NBA coaches and referees. In fostering the league's connection to the community, its teams, players and staff promote youth basketball, support local needs and interests, and assist in educational development through NBA D-League Cares programs. The NBA D-League also advances the game of basketball as the research and development arm of the NBA. Throughout this season fans can watch all NBA D-League games on NBA Futurecast, the free live Web-streaming initiative found at nba.com/futurecast.

Reader wonders how to get into stunt driving

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

I want to know how to get a job, a very specific job. It seems like every car commercial on the networks now shows the vehicle soaring through sand dunes or simply down a quiet road, yet they always show a disclaimer: "Professional Driver on Closed Course." Those guys and gals are never on camera, except for their helmets, but they get all the giggles of getting paid to have a LOT of fun driving! Because we see so many of these commercials, it would seem that there is a huge demand for these "professional drivers," yet I have never seen a want ad anywhere for one. There are ads for big-rig drivers, but not for these commercials. It looks like fun, and there ought to be good money to be earned. How do I find a job like that? I know you guys know the market and must surely understand its ins and outs — right? I know how to drive, and I know how to wear a safety helmet — surely I qualify! Thank you for publicizing my job search — I'll be waiting by the phone for the job offers to come flooding in!

— DJ
RAY: So you want to get paid to be a driver. DJ? Have you considered Domino's Pizza?

TOM: Actually, those "professional driver on closed courses" are all stunt performers, and members of the Screen Actors Guild, which is the actors' union. So, the first thing you have to do is join SAG. And even THAT'S not easy.

RAY: You have to have a certain number of film or commercial appearances before they'll even let you in.

TOM: Then you need to learn the art of stunt driving. The best known training ground is Bobby Ore's Motion Picture Stunt Driving School in Los Angeles and Florida. You can reach them at 818-880-5678, or on the Web at www.bobbyoresports.com.

RAY: But you're not going to take a two-day Bobby Ore course and come out of there ready to drive in commercials. You'll need a lot of practice to get good at it, and you generally have to pay to practice on courses. And that assumes you have some talent for stunt driving in the first place.

TOM: If you get that far, then you'll need to beg, cajole and harass commercial coordinators to hire you. This involves, among other things, hiding in people's bushes and jumping out with fresh cappuccino.

RAY: Of course, you may also luck out. Sometimes TV shows or movies will hire a stunt driver based solely on looks. So, for instance, if you happen to look like Tom Cruise from behind, you might get a driving job for that reason alone.

TOM: Unfortunately, if, like my brother, you look like Tom Cruise's behind, that's not going to help you. Good luck, DJ.

The case of disappearing oil

Dear Tom and Ray:
I have a 1998 Ford Expedition with 150,000 miles. My wife takes the truck in every three months to get the oil changed. During the past two oil changes, she was told that there was no oil on the dipstick. They then removed what oil was remaining in the engine, and replaced it with five new quarts. She had the oil changed about six weeks ago, and I just checked it myself before we went on a trip. The dipstick had no oil on it, and it took four quarts to get it full again. I have checked the ground where the truck is parked and there is no oil, smell or smoke from the exhaust pipe. Where is the oil going, and what should I do? — Sherd

TOM: It's going out the tailpipe, Sherd. What should you do? See if you can get the Exxon Valdez to follow you around.

RAY: Your engine's worn out, Sherd. If there's no oil under the truck, then you're burning it. If you stand near the tailpipe when your wife starts it up in the morning, you'll almost certainly see a puff of bluish smoke. It may be harder to see once you actually start driving, but it's there. Trust us.

TOM: So, you have a couple of choices. One is to install a rebuilt or used engine. If the truck otherwise is in extraordinarily good shape, and you want to keep it for another 50,000 miles, that may be a good option.

RAY: But before you do that, be sure to have your mechanic check it out from stem to stern, as if you were buying it as a used car today. You don't want to spend $3,000 on a rebuilt engine and then have the transmission fall out the next day. And with 150K on the odometer, that's a distinct possibility.

TOM: The other option is to just trade it in. With gas prices certain to trend upward as soon as the economy gets out of the pits, this may be a good time to reconsider whether your wife really needs a car as big as a cabin cruiser for her everyday needs. If not, this might be a golden opportunity to downsize. Good luck, Sherd.
