Feds OK 8 flood buyouts

by SHELDON COMPTON

PRESTONSBURG — Floyd County has agreed to enter into an agreement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) that will see some victims of the county's May 2009 flood offered a buyout option and improve the floodplain to its natural condition.

Representatives with NRCS told county officials last week that some 55 applications had been considered from those owning homes and land that had been destroyed during the flooding, adding that of those 55, NRCS has approved eight people for the voluntary buyout.

The essentials of the program had been those hoping to sell what was left of their homes and property to the government at a pre-flood appraised price could agree with the price and sell.

After this, the government, in agreement and with help from the county, would clear the land of any existing structures, with a key point included that no other structure of any kind could be built on the land again, thus improving the floodplain for the county.

Most of the 55 applicants were from the Maytown and Martin areas, two parts of the county hit hardest during the 2009 spring flood.

Following that flood, a number of counties throughout the state suffered substantial flood damages and were declared as disaster areas.

Of the counties hit, at least four, including Floyd, took major hits to homes, destroying many in the floodplain areas.

The NRCS has been issued a total amount of $3.5 million for the four counties overall. This leaves the county itself to pay a maximum amount of $19,200 — roughly $3,200 per household — some of

KSP steps up hunt for missing man

by SHELDON COMPTON
 STAFF WRITER

Floyd County residents will soon notice a missing person flyer posted in various areas throughout the county, as state police have decided to step up their efforts in a case dating back to 2001.

"We're going to put the flyers up, call some renewed public attention to the case, and see if anything comes of it," said Post 9 Trooper Shaun Little. "This sort of approach has worked before and we're hoping it will work again."

The missing person, Michael Keith Allen was 26 when he went missing in May of 2001 in the Langley area. He was a graduate of Allen Central High School and, at 6 feet, 8 inches tall, was a former basketball player at the school.

At the time he went missing, police estimate he weighed between 245 and 260 pounds and had brown eyes and brown hair.

Little said he and other investigators are hoping to turn up any information that may be useful, adding that callers who might have tips will remain anonymous.

Those with information and wishing to contact the state police can do so at (606) 433-7711.

A timeframe for contract negotiations between Appalachian Regional Healthcare (ARH) and the unions representing its registered nurses has been set for mid-February.

Representatives with the chain of nonprofit hospitals announced this week that talks will start on Feb. 15, between them and ARH nurses in both Kentucky and West Virginia.

The current contract is set to expire at midnight on April 30.

Roughly 750 ARH registered nurses in Kentucky and West Virginia are represented by the Southern United Nurses (SUN) and the West Virginia Nurses' Association.

"We look forward to working with our nurses' unions in pursuit of fair, equitable and sustainable agreements on pay, hours of work and conditions of employment," said Dan

Entries pouring in for 'Cutest Pet' contest

by JARRID DEATON
 FEATURES WRITER

The Floyd County Times Cutest Pet Photo Contest currently has 88 entries from proud pet owners across the region, and the animals include dogs, cats, horses, guinea pigs and a raccoon.

Jim Porter, of Oil Springs, is the owner of two miniature schnauzers that he entered into the contest.

"Both dogs are about 5 years old, and we got them both when they were puppies," Porter said. "They are basically inseparable."

Before adding the two dogs to his family, Porter said he hadn't considered having an inside dog

"I'd never had an inside dog before, and one of the things that drew us to mini schnauzers is that they don't shed or have any smell," Porter said. "They are both brave. They are not afraid of anything. They have no idea how small they are. They are super loyal dogs. I think their chances are great in the contest. The photo really conveys their personalities."

Holly Tackett a dog owner from Grethel, entered her dog, Chance, a Pekinese, in the contest.

"Today is Chance's birthday," Tackett said. "He is lucky to be

Nurses complete program

Leah Combs and Brenda Hamilton

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — Highlands Regional Medical Center in Prestonsburg recently recognized two of its nurses for completing the Clinic Ladder Program.

Leah Combs, a registered nurse, and Brenda Hamilton, a licensed nurse practitioner, completed the program this week. The Clinic Ladder Program is designed to encourage nurses to take the initiative for professional growth and development in their field while aiming to enhance the quality of care, improve patient outcomes and promote nursing satisfaction.

"Nursing is simply my passion," said Combs. "How to change a dressing, obtain vital signs, or start an IV are skills that can be easily taught to someone."

However, Combs said she believes that other aspects of her profession are not as simply acquired.

"When faced with a patient who is scared or angry, no one can teach the art of caring," Combs continued. "There is no instruction manual on how to console a person who is hurting or meet the needs of people who are unable to do it for themselves. As a nurse, I feel my actions will always speak louder when I am left without words to express."

Hamilton, a nurse for more than four decades, said she has seen a lot of change take place in her profession since starting along her own path.

"I have been fortunate to see many changes, from equipment upgrades to dress codes," said Hamilton. "The secret is to keep up with all the changes and look toward the future. We must also support new nurses and help them get a good start."

Chance's owner, Holly Tackett, thinks her pet's chances of winning the contest are good.

Contest

When he was 6 weeks old, he had parvo. We spent a fortune on him. Spending time and money to help Chance get back on his four paws, it comes as no surprise that Tackett is an animal lover. "I am an animal crazy," Tackett said. "I have over 20 cats. I love taking Chance out and walking him. He gives us company. He's like a child. I hope Chance's chances are 100 percent at winning the contest."

To view photos and information about the pets, go to floydcountytimes.com/page_scontests and click on the Cute Pet Contest Logo. Voting begins on Feb. 7. The voting period ends on Feb. 23. The winning owner will be awarded $250 and a photograph of the pet will be published in the Floyd County Times.

Lawsuit

Prestonsburg Wal-Mart with her minor son, when two Drift residents, Amy Spriggs and Ann Elizabeth Isaacs, started to use "very foul (sic) and offensive language," close enough that both she and her son could hear. Rose also alleges that the store's loss prevention officer, Tom W. Wyatt, of Staffordsville, had been following Spriggs and Isaacs through the store, "due to their disgruntled and disorderly conduct." Rose says Wyatt witnessed the alleged attack.

According to the lawsuit, Rose said she "politely requested" that the two women stop using foul language until she and her son could exit the aisle, after which Spriggs shoved a shopping cart into her. Isaacs then held Rose while Spriggs assaulted her and both kicked in the direction of her son, Rose claims, while Wyatt watched. It is not included in the lawsuit as to how the alleged assault was brought under control.

As part of her lawsuit, Rose adds that Wyatt should be held responsible along with Wal-Mart Stores Inc. because he had had reason to put Spriggs and Isaacs out of the store before the alleged incident took place.

posed injuries are not specified in the lawsuit, though she is asking for past and future physical and mental pain and suffering as part of her action.

In addition to her civil suit, Rose has placed local advertisements asking anyone who may have witnessed the alleged assault to contact her with the information.

Worth Repeating ...

Cruel leaders are replaced only to have new leaders turn cruel.

Amendment 1

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to peaceably assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Our View

Save money, live better

When you're the biggest and the most successful in your field, you generally don't hear a lot of praise. In fact, you mostly hear criticism.

And so it goes with Wal-Mart. There probably isn't one of us who, at one time or another, hasn't muttered some ill words about the world's largest and richest retailer.

But today, we're going to do something different. We're going to talk about something Wal-Mart is doing right.

Last week, Wal-Mart executives joined First Lady Michelle Obama in announcing some pretty significant changes to their grocery offerings. The company announced that, over the next few years, they would be removing trans fat and reducing sodium in their store brand foods, and would encourage its suppliers to do the same.

That is good news, especially regarding trans fat, which is one of the most noxious ingredients on store shelves. Also known as hydrogenated oil, trans fat pulls a double whammy on the body by raising bad cholesterol levels and lowering good cholesterol. This, in turn, leads to heart disease, the number-one killer of Americans.

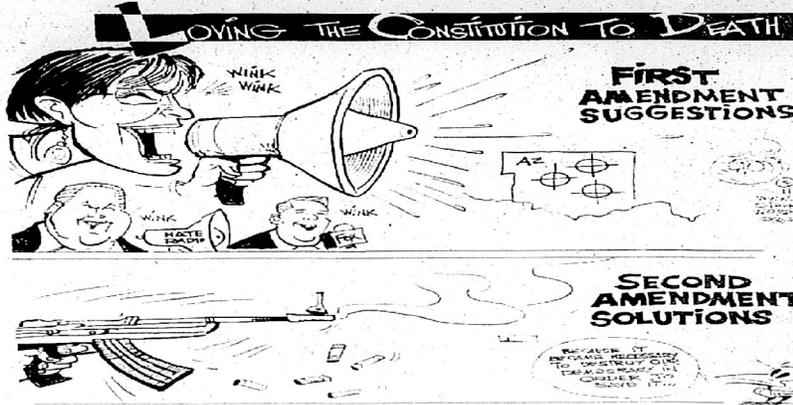

By taking steps to eliminate trans fat from its own products and, perhaps more importantly, using its significant influence over the food industry to persuade others to do the same, Wal-Mart has probably, with this one decision, added countless years to the lives of Americans.

The company also announced that it would begin lowering prices on fresh produce, which should induce more people to eat their fruits and veggies.

All of these changes represent small steps, but, added together, they should produce tremendous results in making Americans' lives happier and healthier.

Bravo.

Wanted: 21st-century gun laws for 21st-century weapons

by DONALD KAUL
OTHERWORDS

Before the Tucson shootings are lost forever in the mists of time (which, given this country's attention span, figures to be two weeks from now), we might do well to ponder the various reactions to the outrage.

President Barack Obama responded as a president should, with dignity and eloquence. I thought his speech at the memorial service in Arizona was one of his strongest. He set the bar pretty high.

"If this tragedy prompts reflection and debate, as it should, let's make sure it's worthy of those we have lost," he said. Amen to that.

House Speaker John Boehner, who has set the leadership bar fairly low during his time in Congress, didn't clear it. Justifying the House not passing a resolution to honor the victims, he said:

"We feel a litany of unwanted emotions that no resolution could possibly capture," Boehner choked up a little when he said it, but he also choked up at basketball games.

He then refused the president's offer of a ride to Arizona for the memorial, preferring to stay a few minutes at a similar Washington event before going off to a kind-rainer. Congress responded in a congressional way. It issued sympathetic noises and then talked about increasing security — for members of Congress. No murmur on gun control legislation.

The American people — a lot of them — responded by buying guns. Gun sales surged in the wake of the shooting. Apparently people see themselves standing in a shopping mall, taking dead aim on a gunman who's spraying the place with bullets, and bringing him down with a single shot. Lots of luck with that. Life seldom imitates Clint Eastwood movies. Even when it does, you rarely get to be Clint.

Sarah Palin, the Republican Party's answer to Eva Peron, took the opportunity to excoriate "journalists and pundits" who dared to link the sometimes-violent rhetoric she and her Tea Party cohorts use in political battle.

"Within hours of a tragedy unfolding, journalists and pundits should not be manufacturing a blood libel that serves only to incite the very hatred and violence that they purport to condemn," she said. "That is reprehensible."

In other words, she — the Divine Sarah — is the victim here, not the people lying in their blood in Tucson.

In any case, "blood libel" — an ancient and absurd belief among anti-Semites that Jews use the blood of Christian children in religious rituals — is a curious phrase to use in connection with the gunning down of a Jewish lawmaker.

"We know violence isn't the answer," said Sarah. "When we take up arms, we're talking about our vote." Or, to quote Humpty Dumpty: "When I use a word, it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less."

I guess it was just bad luck that Ms. Palin put a gun sight over Gabrielle Giffords' district during the run-up to last year's elections. Poor Palin; poor, poor Palin. She just can't catch a break.

I know I am speaking to the wind. But after all is said and done, the Tucson shootings stand as a condemnation of our gun laws — or lack of them. To believe, as the Supreme Court seems to do, that the Constitution guarantees the right of every person to buy a weapon that can kill dozens in seconds is to believe that the men who wrote that document were idiots.

They weren't. They were 18th-century creatures of the Enlightenment who were conscious of their limitations in laying down rules for the formation of a nation.

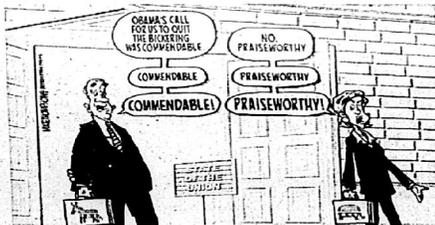

The country would evolve, they knew, and the Constitution would have to expand and evolve with it. Weapons of the 21st century aren't those of the 18th.

Yet a majority of our Supreme Court chooses to ignore the "well-regulated Militia" part of the Second Amendment and focus exclusively on citizens' right to bear arms. For this they went to law school?

I fear that "Supreme Court" is becoming an oxymoron, like "jumbo shrimp."

House week in review

by REP. HUBERT COUNS

One priority of many House lawmakers this legislative session is reducing state Corrections' $500-million-a-year burden on the state budget by changing how Kentucky inmates are sentenced.

Lawmakers, prosecutors, researchers and others have met at least once a month since last July to overhaul the laws-known as the state penal code-that determine who goes to jail or prison, how long they stay there, and how the state probation and parole system works. Called the Task Force on the Penal Code and Controlled Substances Act, the group recommended changes to the penal code and Kentucky's drug laws that will be rolled into a bill for consideration the first week of February.

The interim Judiciary Committee met last week to accept the several pages of recommendations, including proposals to strengthen the state's probation and parole system improve how drug users are handled by the courts, give more support to crime victims and improve government performance in public safety and corrections spending. The recommendations were explained by officials from the Pew Center on the States, who worked with the task force to craft the recommendations.

Some of the recommendations include merely codifying (or putting into law) existing risk and needs assessment tools used on inmates by the prison system while others include allowing certain inmates to serve the last nine months of their prison sentence on release with mandatory supervision, allowing GPS to be used for pretrial, probation and post-incarceration, creating earned time credits for parolees and those on probation and putting in place a "presumed sentence" like probation and treatment for simple drug possession. Creation of a tracking system for victim restitution payment, and requiring fiscal notes on Corrections spending bills to explain where money will come from to pay for a particular bill, were also among the recommendations.

One of the most innovative recommendations would create mandatory release supervision, as it's called, for felons serving the end of their sentence or not paroled out early to smooth their transition into society and hopefully improve their chances of staying out of prison. Kentucky now has over 5,000 discharged inmates who are leaving the Corrections system with no kind of required supervision or monitoring even though, according to Pew, discharged inmates are most likely to reoffend the first six to nine months after their release.

The mandatory release supervision proposal would apply to the worst felony offenders who would be required to have a year of post-incarceration supervision, or those with significant disciplinary problems. (It also would not apply to sex offenders, who already have a three-year supervisory period tacked on to the end of their sentence.) It would apply instead to those with sentences of less than a year to no more than 10 years primarily, or Class C and D offenders.

Other recommendations of interest to those following Corrections reform are proposed drug penalty changes that would do a better job of

Turner named to Transportation, other Senate committees

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

FRANKFORT — State Sen. Johnny Ray Turner, of Drift, was appointed to several key committees during the organizational week of the 2011 legislative session.

"As a member of the Senate Democratic leadership, and even before, I have been involved with the crafting of our state budget and our transportation plan through the Budget Conference Committees," Turner said. "This experience will be a great benefit to me on transportation and will allow me to be a more forceful influence for the 29th District. A good infrastructure is vital to the prosperity of our region and the state. We need good roads to bring people into our communities."

Turner was appointed to the Senate Transportation Committee along with the Education, Natural Resources and Energy, State and Local Government, Committee on Committee and Rules Committees.

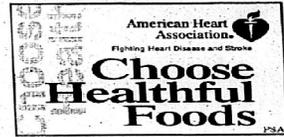

"These committees handle bills and investigate issues that are very important to our area and give me the opportunity to weigh in on issues that are significant to my district," Turner said. "I look forward to serving on all of my committees and value the impact I can make through work on individual committees such as Education and Natural Resources and Energy, where I can be a strong voice for education and the coal industry."

The committee appointments were announced the first week of January during the organizational meeting of the 2011 legislative session. The legislature will reconvene on Feb. 1.

"This is a short session, but it could include some very important legislation," Turner said. "I encourage the citizens of my district to keep in touch with me. Their input will be important as I make decisions that could influence new laws."

To contact Sen. Johnny Ray Turner, call (800) 372-7181, or email johnnyray.turner@lr.ky.gov.

Tackett selected KMEA 'Teacher of the Year'

by JARRID DEATON

BETSY LAYNE — Sandra Tackett, a music teacher at Betsy Layne Elementary, has been selected as the Kentucky Music Educators Association's (KMEA) District 9 Middle School Teacher of the Year.

"I am honored to have been chosen by a group of my peers," Tackett said. "Tackett is a 27-year veteran of teaching in Floyd County Schools and has been at Betsy Layne Elementary since 1998.

"We would like to congratulate Mrs. Tackett and are pleased to honor her accomplishment," said Supt. Henry Webb.

The KMEA honors teachers who exemplify teaching excellence in music education at the elementary, middle, high school and college/university levels. Teachers are nominated and voted on during the statewide fall meetings of the 12 districts served by the KMEA.

According to a representative of the KMEA, "The organization consists of over 2,000 professional music educators at all levels, from kindergarten to university, who are dedicated to the cause of music education in Kentucky."

For more information about the KMEA, including events and a list of awards given by the organization, visit <http://www.kmea.org>.

distinguishing between users and dealers, and the suggested earned time credit for probationers and parolees. The credit would basically reduce the parole or probation term of an individual for positive behavior such as paying victim restitution. Research has shown, according to Pew officials, that positive reinforcement including earned time credits are more effective than sanctions in keeping individuals out of prison.

A proposal that would require the state to post information about an offender's potential length of prison or jail stay, parole eligibility date and certain other data on a web-based system to be accessed only by officers of the court, attorneys and the crime victim is also of note. This would go a long way, I think, by supporting victims and showing them the respect they deserve.

Lawmakers began considering changes to Kentucky Correctional system in recent years after national studies showed Kentucky had the fastest growing prison population nationally over the last decade through 2007. Pew Center officials said Kentucky's prison population rose 45 percent over the past decade compared to a 13 percent increase nationally, although the state's inmate population has dipped slightly in recent years.

The four main drivers of Kentucky's prison growth were detailed by the task force in its final report. They include: 1) an increase in arrests and court cases; 2) a high percentage of offenders being sent to prison, as opposed to using probation or other alternative sentencing; 3) the number of people sent back to prison on technical violations without a new felony conviction has nearly doubled, and 4) a 30 to 38 percent increase in the percentage of all inmates who are drug offenders.

As we move forward with legislation to address these cost drivers, we would do well to heed the advice of state lawmakers like Rep. Jerry Madden of Texas, who has been through a Corrections overhaul in his state and spoke to our committee last week. Madden said there are three kinds of prisoners: those that will also come back, those that will probably never come back, and those who might come back. Risk and needs assessment will show us who's who, he explained, so we don't waste money trying to rehabilitate those who will always come back and, for that matter, those who will never come back.

Texas has saved $512 million through fiscal year 2009 and is projected to save as much as $2 billion through 2012 by not wasting money on the "always" and "never" inmates — an idea I hope the 2011 Kentucky General Assembly will consider by passing legislation this session that incorporates the recommendations at hand.

You can stay informed of legislative action on bills of interest to you this session by logging onto the Legislative Research Commission website at www.lrc.ky.gov or by calling the LRC toll-free Bill Status Line at 866-840-2835. If you would like to share your comments or concerns with me or another legislator about a particular bill under consideration this session, you can call the toll-free Legislative Message Line at 800-372-7181. Again, I look forward to serving you in Frankfort when we return for a busy second part of the 2011 Regular Session next month.

NEW Program Making a Difference

Prestonsburg Health Care Center is proud to announce our new program "Snow Buddies."

Clinical studies have shown that the pairing of elderly and children together can be beneficial to both age groups.

"Snow Buddies" began when a few of the employees at Prestonsburg Health Care brought their children to work when the local schools were closed. The residents loved having the children around!

The residents and kids both enjoy craft activities, cooking classes, even scavenger hunts throughout the day.

Employees' and residents' children/grandchildren (ages 6-17) are invited to participate in Prestonsburg Health Care Center's "Snow Buddies" program.

INEZ — Senior forward Tyler Lafferty drained eight three-pointers and scored a game-high 37 points as Sheldon Clark held off visiting South Floyd 78-71 Tuesday night.

Sheldon Clark improved to 9-8, halting a three-game losing streak. South Floyd dropped to 7-8 following the loss.

Freshman guard Justin Johnson turned in a double-double of 10 points and 13 rebounds for the Kevin

The Raiders remained within striking distance throughout a high-scoring second half. Sheldon Clark, a team that is minus Preseason 15th Region Player of the Year B.J. Moore following a mid-season departure from the team, packed a 52-45 lead out of the third quarter.

South Floyd players to reach double figures. Shannon Turner tossed in 20 points and Dakota Newsome netted 18 for the Raiders.

Brandon Marson added three points and Luke Rhea scored on a free throw for the South Floyd boys' basketball team.

Big week continues for Bears
by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

I don't know much, but these things I'm pretty sure of

— It's a big, big, big week for Pikeville College basketball, and it began last night.

The Bears played at Cumberland, with which they were tied in the league standings, last night. The women had a big game there too. After opening 0-5 in the league, they took a four-game win streak to the O. Wayne Rollins Center.

The Bears are, in my estimation, the single most under-appreciated program in all of college basketball. They were 17-4 heading into last night's game and winners of seven of their last eight — with five of those wins coming in the rugged Mid-South Conference — and yet fell in Monday's ratings.

Tomorrow, both teams remain on the road for big games at Lindsey Wilson. The men owe the Blue Raiders one for letting them come to the Expo Center and steal a win, and the women could use a win over a ranked team, particularly when their coach is our voter.

All of this will set the stage for next Thursday's game with Georgetown at the Expo Center. And while the Tigers are no better than the second-best team in the league this year, they're the one everyone points to as the measuring stick.

It's a big week on both sides of the ledger. Let's hope it's the one we point to as the time the nation took notice.

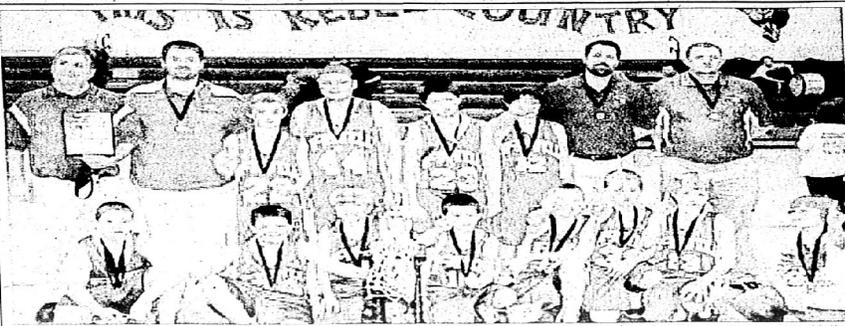

I went 2-2 in my picks Wild Card week, and 3-1 in the divisional round (stupid Jets). Last week I was 2-0. My heart tells me to go with the Pack, but as someone said around the office this week, the Steelers always seem to find a way.

— Did you know the Steelers have lost only one of their seven previous Super Bowls?

Regardless of how much money I had, there's no way I'd pay $900 for a parking spot, no matter how close it was to the Super Bowl.

— The Reds caravan is in town today for a private function. This is two years in a row it's been here during a week-

Balanced scoring led McDowell to the win in the county championship game. Five different players broke into the scoring column for the Daredevils. Shawn Kidd paced McDowell with seven points.

McDowell concluded the season 17-4. Dale Hamilton, Wesley Turner, Derrick Newsome and Terence Mullins coached the Daredevils.

A look back at McDowell's trek to the county title follows.

McDowell advances to semifinals: In the second night of the opening round of the Floyd County grade school basketball tournament, McDowell advanced to the semifinals with a 28-6 win over Duff at Allen Central High School.

Jacob Collins led McDowell with a game-high 13 points. Shane Kidd scored seven points and Shawn Kidd added six for the Daredevils.

The Daredevils jumped out to a 9-2 lead in the opening quarter and were never challenged.

McDowell advanced to meet Betsy Layne in the semifinals.

Shawn Kidd's buzzer-beating three lifts McDowell to finals: Shawn Kidd drilled a three-pointer with 0.02 seconds left to cap a McDowell comeback as the Daredevils defeated Betsy Layne 17-16 in the Floyd County grade school basketball tournament semifinals at ACS.

Betsy Layne led by seven points with 47 seconds remaining. McDowell, however, wouldn't be denied.

Every player who logged minutes scored for the Daredevils as part of a balanced attack. Jacob Collins paced McDowell with five points.

McDowell advanced to face May Valley in the county championship game.

Grigsby conducts interview with former UK head coach Joe B. Hall

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

LEXINGTON — Earlier in the 2010-11 basketball season, Floyd Countyman Pete Grigsby, along with a camera crew from WPRG-TV5, ventured to Central Kentucky and conducted an interview with former University of Kentucky men's basketball coach Joe B. Hall in his home.

Grigsby, who first became acquainted with Hall during their days at UK, dealt out questions to Hall concerning his career as both a player and a coach.

Hall, a Cynthiana native, was the head basketball coach at the University of Kentucky from 1972-1985. He previously coached at Central Missouri State University and Regis University before returning to UK in 1965 to serve as an assistant coach under veteran Adolph Rupp. The Cynthiana product took over for the legendary Rupp in 1972.

Hall coached Kentucky to its fifth NCAA Men's Division I Basketball Championship in 1978. He was named National Coach of the Year in 1978 and Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year on four different occasions. His record at UK was 297-100. Hall compiled a 373-116 record over his career.

Hall, prior to coaching the Wildcats to a national title in 1978, guided Kentucky to a runner-up finish to John Wooden-coached UCLA in the 1975 NCAA tournament. He won eight Southeastern Conference regular-season championships and one Southeastern Conference tournament title (1984).

The highly-decorated Hall is one of only three individuals to win an NCAA championship as a player (1949 - Kentucky) and coach (1978 - Kentucky). The only others to achieve this feat are Bob Knight and Dean Smith.

Hall played one year of varsity basketball at Kentucky before transferring to the University of the South (Sewanee), where he completed his basketball playing eligibility but did not graduate. He graduated from Kentucky in 1955.

Currently, Hall co-hosts a radio sports talk show with former University of Louisville basketball head coach Denny Crum.

Although WPRG has already aired the Joe B. Hall interview, the station has copies of it available.

Piarist dropped to 2-13 following the loss. The Lady Knights are scheduled to visit Prestonsburg on Feb. 3.

Prestonsburg won despite shooting 30.9 percent (21-of-68) from the field. The Lady Blackcats were seven-of-19 at the foul line.

Prestonsburg controlled the glass, grabbing 45 rebounds. The Lady Cassie Burchett and Catie Burchett added eight points apiece for the Lady Blackcats.

In other individual scoring, Caitlin Kidd scored six, DJ Slone netted three and Tiffany Meadows clipped in two for the Lady Blackcats.

Prestonsburg is due to host 58th District/Floyd County Conference counterpart Betsy Layne tonight.

She was escorted by her good friend and basketball player Brady Hall, who is also in the fifth grade and shared the court with three other good friends — Jana Jarvis, Madison Rainey and Ashlea Little.

"I'd like to say a big thank you to Brady and to all of my fifth grade classmates for making that memorable night one that I will always cherish. Everyone of you are awesome," Burchett said. Burchett is the daughter of Jon and Kim Burchett of Slickrock. She is the granddaughter of Kenny and Imogene Robinson of Martin and Eddie Ray Burchett of Slickrock and the late Tamara Ann Burchett. Hall is the son of Stephanie Hall of Beaver and the late Brad Hall. He is the grandson of Doley and Violet Hall of Beaver and Naomi Greene and the late John Greene of Estill.

Cam I Am, which I'll call him until he gets big enough to whip me, checked in at 8 pounds, 15 ounces and was 21 inches tall, or, um, long. I'd tell you he's adorable, but I suppose that goes without saying.

Mom and Dad, who we know as Big D and Sweetie, are doing fine, and I'd like to tip my cap to the use of "James" as the middle name. While my uncle, Derek's grandfather, was officially Jimmie, it works none the less. It's a very nice tribute to the man we miss every day.

and I'm on the road. But the best thing about the caravan? It means pitchers and catchers report soon. Very soon.

Kentucky has to defend its turf at home on Saturday when Georgia comes to Rupp, but more importantly, it has to learn how to win a close one on the road. All those home and neutral games in the non-conference schedule have hurt the Cats as of late.

It's safe to say no 15th Region team will repeat what Shelby Valley did last March when it won Pike County's first state basketball title, but I'd say there are five or six teams at least who could represent our region in Rupp. That should make for a very interesting regional tournament.

Chad Ochocinco says

he's going to change his name back to Johnson. Before he does that, perhaps he could consider taking "Mediocore" or "Below-Average" as a surname.

And how about NFL Commish Roger Goodell, who says he'll lower his salary from eight figures (before the decimal) to a dollar if the league doesn't start on time next year.

And finally... The community of Rockhouse, where I proudly live, has had a rough year. Neighbor after neighbor has passed, including a run of six in about a month last spring. One of those was my Uncle Jimmie.

Last week we finally got some good news. Not only didn't we lose one, but also we picked one up when Cameron James Bentley was delivered.

Cam I Am, which I'll call him until he gets big enough to whip me, checked in at 8 pounds, 15 ounces and was 21 inches tall, or, um, long. I'd tell you he's adorable, but I suppose that goes without saying.

Hicks leads Bears to win over Wise, 17-4 record

TIMES STAFF REPORT

WISE, Va. — Two players turned in double-doubles and senior Justin Hicks scored a season-high 27 as Pikeville College knocked off U.Va.-Wise 96-81 Saturday afternoon at Greear Gymnasium.

Pikeville's win raised it to 17-4 on the season and 6-3 at the mid-point of the Mid-South Conference race. With the win, Pikeville is at least tied for fourth in the league standings and could be third by day's end, pending the result of the St.Catharine at Lindsey Wilson contest.

U.Va.-Wise fell to 9-9 overall and 3-6 in the league.

Pikeville fell behind 5-0 as the Cavaliers scored two first-minute buckets, but then scored 11 unanswered points to take a lead it would never relinquish. Sophomore Trevor Setty had six Bear points in the run, and when senior Vance Cooksey hit two free throws with 16:50 left, it was 11-5.

The first half played out that way, with the teams trading small runs, and ended with the Bears on top 43-21.

The second half was more to Pikeville's liking, hitting 54.8 percent from the field and leading by as many as 24 before settling for the 15-point decision.

Hicks was 5-of-10 from the arc and made all eight free throw tries in the win, leading four players in double figures. He also had five assists and three steals in the win.

The Bears got double-doubles from Setty, with 19 points and 11 rebounds, and senior Andre Thornton, who scored 11 and pulled 14 rebounds. Each had four carries off the offensive glass as the Bears won the rebounding battle 49-41.

Cooksey finished with 15 points, six assists and five rebounds.

U.Va.-Wise was led by sophomore Sam Elijewe's 22 points and four steals. Junior Josh Jordan followed with 19 points and eight rebounds, while junior Norris Gaskins came off the bench for 15 points and nine boards, five of which were offensive.

Junior Travis Berry added with 14 points and seven assists.

Pikeville was hosting Cumberland's Thursday night. The Pikeville-Cumberland game ended too late to make this edition.

Bears sign JuCo standout Sutherland

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The Pikeville College baseball program is continuing to stockpile talent, with the latest being another talented pitcher.

Zak Sutherland, a left-hander from Mohawk Valley Community College in Utica, N.Y., has committed to continue his educational opportunities and his baseball career with the Bears. Sutherland was 4-1 with a 2.94 ERA last season, striking out 33 in 39 innings for the Hawks.

Sutherland played high school baseball at Bishop Grimes and is a native of Syracuse, N.Y.

"We are excited about the addition of Zak to our baseball team," said Pikeville College Coach, Robert Taylor. "Zak is a hard worker who is determined to be the best he can be as baseball player and young man. He has outstanding character and is a great fit to our club.

"I am excited about what The Bears open the 2011

MOVIES FROM THE BLACKLAGOON

'Fragile: A Ghost Story'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

A half-empty hospital makes for an ideal setting in this chiller that serves up a frightening combo platter of ghostly chills and health care scares.

Tom Doty
Times Columnist

Setting is everything in a supernatural yarn, and this film understands that notion. The action is mostly confined to an isolated medical center on the Isle of Wight.

Mercy Hospital (drenched in a perpetual rainstorm) is in the midst of closing, when a train wreck fills their new facility with so many casualties that a children's ward must remain open in the old building until some of the patients are able to be released.

The opening scene finds a young child sustaining a broken leg while being x-rayed for a separate injury. Turns out that the ghost in this flick has a thing for brute force.

Into this situation comes a new nurse with a decidedly shady background. Amy is a bit reserved, but the chip on her shoulder was courtesy of a patient dying while in her care. She terms this a mistake, but one has to wonder whether she will be able to save these kids.

Pretty soon the pieces come together and Amy realizes that the entire ward is in danger from a child who died while being treated at the hospital for a degenerative bone disease 40 years ago. Before you know it, all manner of strange goings-on begin to plague the facility. Sheets rise off of beds, elevators creak towards the floor that has been closed down for 40 years and orderlies are thrown through windows by malevolent forces.

Amy finds herself doing some amateur sleuthing (which will remind viewers of a similar formula used in "Ring") to determine what the ghost wants. Her search reveals a lot of messy things the hospital would just as soon forget ever happened.

Will she find redemption for her sins and save the children? Tune in as it's worth finding out.

This is one of the better haunting flicks, which comes as no surprise, as it was directed by Jaime Balagueró. He has been cranking out some excellent fright flicks in his native Madrid ("Rec") and finally tries his hand at directing an international cast. He does a splendid job of building the atmosphere and gets good work out of his cast.

Calista Flockhart is well cast as Amy. She is not the kind of heroine you expect in one of these, as she is clearly in danger of coming apart at the seams from the beginning. The medical stuff is also effective.

When Balagueró finally wheels his cameras into the abandoned ward, he prepared for eerie shots of outdated medical equipment, as well as a few cheap shocks before finally revealing exactly who is haunting the hospital.

"Fangoria Magazine" released this effort and they deserve credit for avoiding splatter clichés and bringing audiences a film that relies on mood and technique. That said, there are a few false scares but the film also delivers on

DINNER DIVA

Gratitude

Health is not always about just the body. Your mental health is just as important to have a well-balanced life. I have a lot to be grateful for in my life. Counting my many blessings daily has helped me maintain a healthy mental attitude. It is a proven fact that showing gratitude can help lift your spirits, give you strength, and bring you peace.

Bob Proctor put it this way, "Gratitude is an attitude that hooks us up to our source of supply. And the more grateful you are, the closer you become to your maker, to the architect of the universe, to the spiritual core of your being. It's a phenomenal lesson."

One way to show your gratitude is to give back. If you want something new in your life you usually have to give something to get it. For example, if you want to improve your health you may have to give up your daily Ding Dong addiction. If you want to declutter your house you will probably have to give away some of that clutter. If you want to gain a healthy relationship you might have to give up a relationship that is not so good for you. See what I mean?

Another way to show gratitude, is by expressing it verbally or in writing to whoever needs to hear it. Try telling your children how grateful you are for them. Or tell your mother the same thing—watch how their countenance changes and how much better your relationships become. Gratitude is a well spring in life.

Listen to the mechanic on this one

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
Our 2001 Subaru Forester (93,000 miles, we're the only owner) has been an excellent, essentially maintenance-free vehicle. Recently, when a front axle was replaced for a torn CV joint boot, the garage owner recommended a pre-emptive replacement of the timing belt. He says we're entering a period of likely failure, which can be problematic when on the road (especially in remote places). He also may have been suggesting that this failure can cause attendant engine damage. I am of the "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" school, especially on car repairs that will run several hundred dollars. Predictably, my wife took the mechanic's word as gospel. What do you think? — Terry.

RAY: I think if your wife always takes the mechanic's word as gospel, it's probably because you've given her plenty of reasons to do so, Terry. And you're about to give her one more.

TOM: Here's the story. There are two types of engines: interference engines and non-interference engines.

RAY: An interference engine is an engine whose pistons and valves share the same space inside the cylinders, but at different times. So when the valves are open, the piston is down and out of the way. And when the piston comes up, the valves are closed and out of the way. This is an efficient use of space, and gives the engine more power and better mileage.

TOM: But, And this is a big but — bigger than JLO's. If the timing belt breaks on an interference engine, then the pistons and valves can collide. What does that mean? It means you need at least a new cylinder head, and perhaps a new engine. In either case, you've got a repair bill in the thousands.

RAY: And guess what, Terry? Your '01 Forester has an interference engine. Congratulations!

TOM: So if you opt for the "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" approach in this case, when it IS broke, it could cost you $25,000 for a new car instead of $400 for a timing belt.

RAY: And statistically speaking, based on the age and mileage of your car, your timing belt is ready to break any day now.

TOM: If your car happened to have a non-interference engine (where the pistons and valves don't cross over into each other's space), a broken timing belt would not be such a disaster. Your engine simply would stop running, and you would leave you stranded. Although I'm not sure that would be popular with your wife, either.

RAY: But in this case, because of the type of engine you have (and many other cars have interference engines, too), it's actually a much more urgent matter. In fact, we recommend that you not only change the timing belt now, but also change the timing-belt tensioner and the water pump, because if either of those fails, it could break the timing belt; with the same disastrous results.

TOM: So that's a lot of stuff that "ain't broke" that you're going to be fixing, Terry. But it's the wise and the cheaper — thing to do in this case.

Do today's tires need a warm-up?
Dear Tom and Ray:
When I was learning to drive in the '50s, there was a rule to not drive above 40 mph on the highway for 10 minutes in order to give the bias-ply tires time to warm up so they wouldn't be overstressed. Is there a similar rule for today's radial tires? — Claude

TOM: Well, I learned to drive in the '50s, too, and I don't remember any such rule.

RAY: Not the 1850s, you dope. The 1950s! When my brother was learning to drive, wheels were wooden, and the biggest concern was getting splinters when you changed a tire!

TOM: The answer is no, Claude. There's nothing you need to do to warm up radial tires. They can be driven at highway speed immediately.

CLICK & CLACK
Talk Cars

RAY: I don't even remember any rule about warming up old, bias-ply tires. I know that if bias-ply tires sat for a long time, they could develop flat spots. And then you'd have to drive them for a while to work out the flat spot so the tire would be perfectly round again. Maybe that's why you were advised not to run them at high speed right away?

TOM: Or perhaps your father just wanted to keep you from driving fast for an extra 10 minutes, Claude.

Rental Central

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Three excellent films and one okay entry made for a superb week of rental opportunities.

■ "Saw: The Final Chapter" — In theaters this week is called "Saw 3D," but it is difficult to market that format on DVD, so they changed the title. It's the same film however and supposedly wraps up the series. The traps are still the main attraction, while the star, Jigsaw, is still dead and appearing via flashbacks and recordings. The plot centers on a self-help guru whose claim to fame is to have survived one of Jigsaw's traps. He is a liar, however, and that puts him on the radar for a night of terror, trying to save his wife from the new killer, Costas Mandylor (dull as ever, unfortunately).

■ "Secretariat" — The 1973 Triple Crown-winning horse gets a decent bio-flick here, with Diana Lane cast as the housewife who inherits her dad's stables and must overcome plenty of obstacles while entering Secretariat into the world of racing. Good race scenes and a performance by John Malkovich help get your attention through a few convoluted dramas and allow the film to coast through to the big three racing sequences.

■ "Red" — Comic books continued to provide Bruce Willis with excellent film roles, with this entry that sees him teaming up with various Hollywood heavyweights. The story casts Willis as a retired CIA operative who knows too much — evidenced by a black-ops team blowing up his house. He assembles other retired agents (Morgan Freeman, Helen Mirren) and John Malkovich) and the quartet is soon breaking into CIA headquarters and bringing the fight to the man's front yard. Fun thrills and a chance for the middle-aged set to have a turn in the spotlight.

■ "Broadcast News: The Criterion Collection" — The best archivists in DVD are back with a pristine print of this Oscar-winning comedy that skewered news casting and contained some of the best dialogue ever heard in an American film. The best lines go to Holly Hunter, as a female producer who may be the smartest one in the room (and knows it). Albert Brooks is also sharp as an intelligent reporter whose average looks prevent him from advancement. William Hurt is also good here as a guy who has the looks but not the smarts. The media gets it good here, but they had it coming, and still do for making most of this come true. Extras include an alternate ending and some killer scenes that had to be cut to earn the film a reasonable running time.

Next week look for the return of Hammer Films with "Let Me In." the real thing. Mainly it deserves credit for sustaining a creepy mood throughout. The only way to appreciate this kind of flick is to avoid all distractions and see it through in one sitting. You'll thank me for it, but don't expect a good night's sleep. Best line: "I've been talking to Charlotte. She is different. She is mechanical."

2005, rated PG-13.

Critics of legislation that would require a prescription for pseudoephedrine-containing products of medications the state will be able to dramatically reduce meth production while saving both lives and dollars," said Karen Kelly, director of Operation UNITE. "Experience in Oregon, which has required a prescription for more than four years, indicates that Senate Bill 45 and House Bill 15 would neither adversely affect consumers nor hamper law enforcement.

Sex offender fails to comply, arrested

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

A registered sex offender from Auxier was arrested last week on a charge of failure to comply with sex offender registration. Steve R. Carroll, 45, was arrested after the Floyd County Sheriff's Department received a call from social services about Carroll's alleged failure to comply with the rules and regulations of sex offender registration. According to the police report, Carroll was living with a woman and child in Auxier, and Carroll allegedly told the officer that he had just started living with the woman and her daughter. Carroll was arrested after Kentucky State Police Post 9 in Pikeville advised the officer that Carroll was non-compliant on the sex offender registry. Carroll was transported to the Floyd County Detention Center and placed under a $5,000 cash bond.

The Pikeville Customer Service Mail Processing Center also handles the mail for Floyd

The Kentuckiana District office has completed its review and submitted it to the Eastern Area Office for consideration. At the public meeting we will explain the ANP study results and what operational changes we propose to make. Any proposed changes must be approved by the Area Vice President before they can be implemented. Beshear expeted to touch on education, budget in state address

by SHELDON COMPTON STAFF WRITER

Gov. Steve Beshear's state of the commonwealth speech was kept under close wraps leading his addressing a joint session of the legislature yesterday, but as expected, Beshear spent time talking about high school dropout age, a hot-button topic of late.

One of the governor's top priorities is the bill that would raise the minimum school dropout age from 16 to 18.

House Bill 225 would require attendance for children up to 17 years old by 2015 and 18 in 2016.

According to statistics with Kentucky's Department of Education, 5,673 students dropped out of high school in the 2009-2010 school year.

In last year's session, the bill to raise the dropout age made it through House votes but failed in the Senate.

Some in Frankfort say the House could begin talking about the bill again by today, though legislators only arrived in Frankfort midday yesterday.

"One of the most important things that we need to do is to raise our dropout age from 16 years of age to 18 years of age," Beshear said in interviews leading up to yesterday's address.

"It's been since the 1920s when we had that age changed."

Though tight-lipped about the annual address, which took place yesterday evening, Beshear did speak with media outlets about both the educational points in the speech and also the budget.

The governor was expected to show some optimism about the budget prior to this, his fourth state of the commonwealth address, saying things were "looking up in Kentucky" and adding that a key point would be to restore the so-called "rainy day" fund over the next fiscal year.

RECC

East Kentucky Power's primary lending institution is RUS (Rural Utilities Service) which has suspended all lending for any coal related generation projects. As a result East Kentucky Power representatives said the company "has been forced to turn to the open competitive financial market which requires stronger financial positions and more equity."

"The board and management of Big Sandy RECC feels that this is an unfair political attack on the coal industry," said David Estep. "Please join us in the fight to protect and preserve the coal industry. We encourage you to contact your politicians in Washington, D.C. and express your concerns about coal."

Officials with Big Sandy

RECC say that this will force a passing along of increased costs that will translate to higher bills.

"As a not-for-profit cooperative, Big Sandy RECC must pass along this increased cost from our power supplier to retail members," added Bruce Aaron Davis. "This rate increase will add about $4.80 to the typical residential monthly bill.

Following the commission's decision, Big Sandy RECC's average residential member rates increased by about 3.53 percent effective Jan. 14.

PSA representatives conducted a public hearing on the case in December prior to announcing its decision.

Governor Beshear announces an additional $2.8 million in emergency energy assistance funding

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT— Governor Steve Beshear today announced an additional $2.8 million in federal appropriations to be allocated to the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP).
“We’ve encountered week after week of cold weather this season,” Gov. Beshear said. “This emergency funding will ensure that more families can apply for benefits and keep their homes warm.”

Kentucky’s allotment is part of $200 million in emergency LIHEAP funding announced Jan. 24 by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to help eligible low-income families meet their home energy assistance needs.

Kentucky’s cumulative amount from HHS this fiscal year, combined with carry-forward money from the prior year, is $64 million.

In Kentucky, the Cabinet for Health and Family Services (CHFS) administers the LIHEAP program through a contract with Community Action Kentucky (CAK), which disburses benefits through Community Action Agencies (CAA) across the state. Eyerich has at least one staffed CAA office.

Gov. Beshear said he will authorize the immediate distribution of the funding to local CAAs as soon as it is released to the state.

LIHEAP’s first winter funding phase for all eligible families who need heating assistance ended in December 2010. The program’s crisis phase for families facing a home-heating emergency began on January 4 and ends March 31, 2011, or when funding runs out.

CHFS Secretary Janis Miller praised LIHEAP as a highly effective program.

“A warm home is essential during the winter months,” Secretary Miller said. “LIHEAP allows families on lower or fixed incomes to pay their high utility bills. They don’t have to make a choice between heat and medicine or food.”

Emergency LIHEAP

funding will be allocated to the local CAAs based upon each agency’s percentage of the statewide eligible population at or below 130 percent of the poverty level and their crisis expenditures last year.

Miller said CHFS and CAK are helping as many families as possible with the money. Last year, Kentucky served about 329,100 families through both winter phases.

Families that can most benefit from LIHEAP may include seniors, young children or people with disabilities, Miller said. Families may qualify regardless of whether they own or rent their homes.

LIHEAP is a short-term aid program available to clients at or below 130 percent of the federal poverty guidelines. For example, a family of four must have a monthly income of no more than $2,389.

Families applying at their CAAs during the crisis component must bring a past due or disconnect notice from their utility provider.

Having past due or disconnect notices are not the only criteria that make households eligible. If someone is within four days of running out of fuel and their primary heat source is propane, fuel oil, wood or kerosene; or if they have received an eviction notice for nonpayment of rent, and home heating cost is included as an undesignated portion of their rent, they may also qualify for assistance.

For more information about applying for LIHEAP, go to <http://chfs.ky.gov/dchs/dff/LIHEAP.htm>. Or visit www.communityactionky.org or call (800) 456-3452 to find a local CAA.

SBDC success story: Jackson Peg Tube Stand

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

MOREHEAD — Tina Jackson and her husband, Mark, live in Louisa. Tina was born with Cerebral Palsy and paralysis on the left side of her body. In her 20s, she suffered a stroke which resulted in swallowing difficulties and an inability to speak. Fast forward 20 years and Tina’s condition deteriorated to the point of no longer being able to eat without breathing and digestion complications. In 2000, feeding tube placement became necessary because of concerns of pneumonia. Tina’s left side paralysis made it nearly impossible for her to successfully feed herself.

Tina’s husband, Mark, knew she wished to remain independent, so he constructed a device — the Jackson Peg Tube Stand — that would enable her to feed herself with only one hand. The device Mark created was portable, practical and convenient and, most importantly, it enabled his wife to maintain her sense of independence. For this reason, they believed their feeding tube users and caregivers could also benefit from the Jackson Peg Tube Stand.

This is when Mark & Tina Jackson first requested services from Morehead State University’s Ashland Small Business Development Center. They initially met with the Center’s management consultant, Kim Jenkins, in March 2001. They inquired about how to protect their medical device with a patent. Jenkins provided them with business start-up advice and guidance and encouraged them to pursue their dream. She then referred them to a local patent attorney who worked with the couple for the next nine years to submit drawings, prototypes, and applications to the U.S. Patent Office in Washington, D.C.

In August 2010, the device was officially issued a patent, and they are now ready to begin marketing and promoting their product to the medical industry and to feeding tube users and caregivers. The Jacksons recently returned from the Olef Foundation’s annual conference in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. This Foundation provides information and support to feeding tube users and caregivers as well as medical professionals who work with tube-fed patients and suppliers of feeding tube equipment. The Foundation invited them to participate in the annual conference and to display the Jackson Peg Tube Stand. This opportunity enabled them to meet with potential customers and suppliers.

They are now working to become a Medicare insurance provider and are registering with various other insurance companies to receive payments for the sale of their medical device. The Jackson Peg Tube Stand has many different features that make it an ideal choice for feeding tube patients and caregivers. The stand is fully collapsible, and its lightweight design allows for easy transport and portability. The device features varied height capabilities and can be easily positioned for use with only one hand. A Jackson Peg Tube Stand can be purchased for $250 and includes free shipping and handling for a limited time.

For additional information about the Jackson Peg Tube Stand, call (606) 638-3234, e-mail them at markj@setel.com or go online to www.jacksonpeg-tubestands.com ment investigations.”

An informational rally to show support for these two bills will be held at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Capitol Rotunda in Frankfort.
“We have heard from citizens and law enforcement representatives across the commonwealth that this law is definitely needed,” Kelly added. “The bottom line is people are dying and children are being placed in extreme danger because of the growth of meth labs.”
The rally will include bipartisan support from state representatives and senators, various law enforcement entities, as well as organizations including the Kentucky Education Association, Kentucky Medical Association, Kentucky Commonwealth Attorney’s Association, Kentucky Jailers’ Association, and the Kentucky Association of Counties.

Opponents of the bills say the provision would hamper law enforcement’s ability to track down meth labs because pseudoephedrine purchases would no longer be tracked by MethCheck, an electronic reporting system, while also pointing out that cold and allergy sufferers would not be able to get needed medications.

Kelly maintains that all medicine currently on shelves across the state would stay put, adding that there are roughly 100 other over-the-counter products available to treat systems leaving plenty of “good alternatives” for these in need.
U.S. Congressman Hal Rogers has committed to throwing his endorsement in favor of Senate Bill 45 before the state Senate Judiciary Committee before attending the rally tomorrow.

Mental health issues need national discussion

Just a cursory glance at the police mug shot of young man who opened fire on the defenseless citizens lined up to talk to U.S. Representative Gabrielle Giffords in Tucson last Saturday says it all — he looks, quite simply, like a lunatic.

In the coming weeks and months of investigation, we will probably learn that he exhibited the classic symptoms of a man whose mind had become broken. And the reasons for his slide into insanity will probably never be understood. As a result of this horrific tragedy, and that it has all the trappings of a political assassination, there has been much said about the level of vitriol in politics today. We agree. The political rhetoric has spiraled out of control. Just prior to the massacre, the GOP was referring to Health Care Reform as the "job killing health care bill." And that is only one example.

And there are those who point to the killer's ability to carry a semi-automatic handgun equipped with an additional capacity magazine as an example of why we should reform our nation's gun laws — bring back the assault weapon ban that was allowed to lapse by Congress in 2004. We also agree. Common sense is needed to regulate weapon ownership in the U.S. There is absolutely no reason on the earth that a civilian would ever need a 30-round capacity magazine for a handgun — none.

These issues need examination. These are questions that strike at the very core of our identity as Americans — freedom of speech and the right to bear arms. Healthy, and civil, debate as to how to strike a balance that satisfies most citizens while maintaining the integrity of both rights should never stop.

Almost forgotten, behind these two politically-charged issues, is one that we hope will become a larger part of the discussion about what can be learned from this tragedy: the killer's descent into madness, his symptoms and what could have been done to find him the help he so desperately needed.

When one's mind becomes sick, and not from an obvious physical malady like cancer, Multiple Sclerosis or Parkinson's disease, the diagnosis is simple. A simple MRI of the brain can detect these physical abnormalities.

But that simple MRI doesn't work when trying to diagnose paranoia or schizophrenia. That takes the expertise of a trained specialist who often must spend hours counseling and observing a patient before a diagnosis is made.

But what about the practical reality of the killer's days and weeks before he began his rampage? We now know he was asked to leave the community college where he was a student because of his behavior. He was told to get a psychiatric evaluation before he could return to class. We also know that his friends and family said he had begun acting strangely.

These were clear warning signs he had become sick. Practically speaking, would he, or even could he, comprehend there was something wrong? Using current mental health guidelines, the only time he would be forced to undergo that evaluation, without his consent, is if he had become a danger to himself or others. But who makes that determination?

All too often, it is the legal system after a crime has already been committed. Fortunately, the crimes committed by these sick people are usually relatively minor — shoplifting, simple assaults. But the impact on their ability to get well can be permanently compromised. Our legal system is just not designed to diagnose and treat those suffering from mental illness. But, instead, mete out punishment.

Like the balance needed to find a middle ground on questions of free speech and the right to bear arms, we need a national discussion on how to offer help to those who suffer the quiet pain of mental illness with a recognition of their personal liberties, while at the same time insuring the safety of our society as a whole.

If we don't and continue to focus on the spectacle of "gotcha" politics, we do so at our own peril.

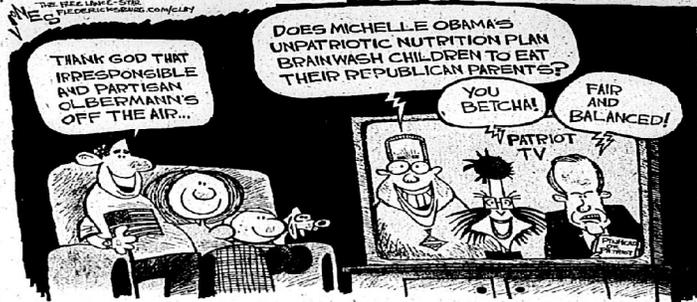

And then sadly, someday not too far into the future, we will again stare into the wild-eyes of another man, or woman, who has descended into lunacy and horrified the nation once more.

Guest Column

A legislative perspective

by REP. GREG STUMBO
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

It has been a little more than a decade since Kentucky re-dedicated its efforts to improve the lives of our youngest citizens.

Thanks in large part to an influx of hundreds of millions of dollars from the national tobacco settlement, we have made tremendous strides in this area, the dividends of which will be felt long into the future.

From 2000 to 2007, for example, a campaign to encourage more women of child-bearing age to take folic acid led to 25 percent fewer birth defects affecting the brain and spine. Newborn screenings of virtually every infant, meanwhile, identified more than 7,000 children last year alone who are at-risk of hearing loss, and more than 40,000 immunizations have been given to underinsured children whose health coverage did not include the cost.

Before 2006, we were behind the curve when it came to testing infants for genetic or metabolic disorders. Now we're one of only nine states that look at all 44 disorders screened in a blood test, which has helped us diagnose nearly 1,000 children with these conditions.

A program that has led to some dramatic improvements is HANDS, which offers voluntary — but intense — counseling for first-time parents in need of guidance.

Research provided to legislators last summer shows that teens with more than one prenatal visit are much less likely to have their pregnancy end prematurely, and infant mortality for families taking part is far lower than for similar families that don't. A two-year study comparing families enrolled in Medicaid found those using HANDS took their children to the emergency room half as many times as those not in the program. That difference saved Medicaid an estimated $13 million.

Health is not the only focus of the state's work in this field. The Reach Out and Read program provides age-appropriate books to children ranging from six months to five years of age during their well-child visits to the doctor. More than 80,000 books were distributed in nearly 50 counties last year.

A little more than a month ago, a task force formed by Governor Beshear gave its suggestions on how we could better promote early childhood development and education.

Among its eight recommendations are that we do more to boost the STARS for KIDS NOW program, which began in 2000 as a way to give childcare centers incentives to go beyond the basics required by law. Nearly 800 centers now take part, but there is always room for more. Those wanting further details can email an email to STARS@ky.gov.

The 28-member task force also said the state should better highlight a benchmark system developed in 2003 that helps parents, educators and others understand what children from birth through four years of age should be able to do. Kentucky is working with others across the country to ensure that our standards align with those in other states.

Another problem noted by the task force is that many of the programs designed to help early childhood development are scattered across state government, creating a "fragmented system that is confusing to many." We need to do all we can to improve coordination.

While the state has made some great gains during the last decade, much more work remains. There is a definite financial benefit as well; for every dollar that goes into early childhood development programs, we get as much as $17 in return. Doing the right thing during those first years of life will help all of us for decades to come.

This week, as you may know, the General Assembly has returned to the Capitol to finish out the 2011 Regular Session. We have about two dozen days left to consider a wide array of legislation.

If you would like to share your thoughts on the subject of this column or any other issue expected to come before the legislature, you can leave a message for me or for any legislator at 800-372-7181. For the hearing impaired, the number is 800-896-0305.

Meeting Obama's challenge for girls

by LINDA TARR-WHELAN

The President's challenge for all of us to create the country that 9-year old Christina Taylor Green thought we had when she made the fateful trip to hear her elected representative rings true to me. Christina had an ambition to be the first girl to play in the major leagues. Tragically it's a chance she won't have. It made me think about what are the chances for all those bright girls across our country to become the leaders we need?

There is an "off-the-radar" issue we must address to provide girls with a meaningful roadmap to meet Obama's challenge by opening up the doors to women becoming leaders. Our complacency that "we are the best" and that "women's equality is a done deal" masks a murky picture of reality.

While both parties fielded women candidates for high office in 2008, the political ladder remains a pretty closed shop. Despite fine women like Rep. Giffords, our progress report is dismal: we are backtracking rather than moving ahead on women's representation. Congressional representation of women has slipped downward, leaving the U.S. as an unenviable 72nd in the world. Numbers are important, but the big picture is we are missing the benefits of new thinking and consensus-building skills that women bring to the table.

It isn't just politics and government where our promises of "you can be whatever you want to be" are overblown. In a series of informal focus groups with women of all races, ages and economic status from coast-to-coast, women told me we are only halfway to achieving full equality because "our talent is untapped." They are right — half of the good ideas are not heard when decisions are made.

Other countries are taking a different approach. Recently, the French Assembly passed legislation to reach a 40 percent target of women on France's corporate boards in six years; France joined Norway, Netherlands, Spain, Finland, Australia, Israel and Iceland in dramatically shoring up the leadership of their corporate sectors by tapping the value of women's talent.

The business pattern of having overwhelmingly male boards who appoint more men certainly diminishes the chances for women to succeed. The conservative male sponsor of Norway's legislation held that if they kept appointing the hunting and fishing buddies of the current board members, their corporations would not be competitive. In 2010, the only large U.S. firm to have 40 percent women on their board was General Motors. Across the Fortune 500, the gender make-up of corporate boards has been stagnant for five years.

Why is it imperative to open up the power tables? Companies are more profitable when there's a critical mass of 30 percent or more women on their boards. Women add 21st century management skills around team building and partnerships, make decisions in a more "risk-aware" fashion, prioritize family and work solutions which increase productivity, and decrease turnover. More women at the table can open up organizations to maximize their competitive advantage in the search for talent.

Surely, quotas are unlikely here, but there's no excuse for inaction. Forward-thinking countries and companies realize and act on two big ideas — economic viability takes talent and the value-added talent is "women-power." That is certainly true here. Ask yourself a few questions: Who is starting businesses in this jobless recovery? Women. Who is getting the education needed for a knowledge-based economy? At every level from high school to PhD programs women are graduating in equal or greater numbers than men (and

State division of mine permits unveils online watershed data; DNR awarded two grants

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — The Department for Natural Resources' Division of Mine Permits announced today a new online service that gives public access to vital watershed data, which may include surface water quality, benthic information, groundwater quality, water quality violations, pollutant discharge elimination information, maps, mine history and information regarding pending mines. The files are packaged and organized by the watershed's Hydrologic Unit Code (HUC), which is used to uniquely identify the watershed. Each of these "characterization" data packages contain between 25 and 35 files. In addition, each package is equipped with a Water Quality Results Viewer designed to enable individuals to view, filter, sort, graph and export groundwater and surface water quality data. The development culminates a year-long effort by the department to streamline and improve the procedures regarding a Cumulative Hydrologic Impact Assessment (CHIA). An environmental scientist for DNR, Dr. Richard Wahrer secured the original funding of $327,888 from the federal Office of Surface Mining (OSM). Additionally, DNR has been awarded two grants from EPA, $50,000 to purchase sampling equipment for the watershed assessments; and, $74,537 for the advancement and implementation of a GIS-based coal mining database that will supplement the national GeoMine program. The GeoMine program will provide a collaborative vehicle to share coal-mining data including coal permit boundaries, critical watershed features, federally listed species and the status and success of land reclamation. This program will ensure transparency in regulatory decisions among our partners, e.g., the EPA and Army Corps of Engineers (COE) and other federal/state regulatory agencies. With these federal grants, DNR is now in receipt of $452,425 to supplement their water resources and mapping programs. Carl Campbell, DNR commissioner expressed his appreciation to both federal agencies. "They have been great partners in promoting this cutting-edge technology. The funding from OSM and EPA was critical in allowing us to develop this valuable online resource. Over the years, OSM's commitment to this department has given us the opportunity to provide the latest technical and geographical tools to ensure protection of coal field residents and their environment."

Lottery officials hope new game will offer revenue

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

A new Kentucky Lottery game has made a buzz over the past several days.

The game — Decades for Dollars — replaces Win for Life and will have its first drawing tomorrow. Lottery officials say three states will play in the new game — Kentucky, Georgia and Virginia. The same states played in the Win for Life lottery game.

State numbers show a drop of 4 percent in overall Kentucky Lottery ticket sales from July to December. Lottery officials are traveling around the state hoping to bring attention to the new game as monies taken from the lottery revenues fund educational and other programs.

Spokesperson Sara Westerman says the change is a basic business decision. "When a game gets stagnant, we realize players are looking for a change and we start a new game," Westerman said.

Those playing Decades for Dollars will pay for a chance at winning are hoping for the major payoff off annual installments of $250,000 for 30 years for a total of $7.5 million or a cash option that will pay on lump sum of $4 million.

Drawings will take place every Monday and Thursday at approximately 10:59 p.m. live on www.kylottery.com with winning numbers broadcasted as usual on local television and radio stations.

The Kentucky Lottery hopes the new game will generate about $300,000 in weekly sales over the next six months.

Super Bowl XLV fans rewarded for responsible decisions

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Office of Highway Safety is reminding football fans that if your Super Bowl celebration includes alcohol, make the right decision before kickoff and always have a designated driver. This local message complements that national Fans Don't Let Fans Drive Drunk message supported by the National Football League (NFL), the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), the HERO Campaign, and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). "We're reminding everyone that real Super Bowl Fans Don't Let Fans Drive Drunk," said Highway Safety Office Director Boyd Sigler. "If your post-season game plan includes alcohol, make sure you have a designated driver in your starting line-up. We are asking all party hosts and bar owners to take extra good care of designated drivers this year. Designated drivers make sure everyone gets home safely. For taking on such an important responsibility, they should be rewarded." The Fans Don't Let Fans Drive Drunk message supports the league-wide designated-driver campaign called Responsibility Has Its Rewards. Celebrating its eighth season in 2010, the campaign encourages fans to participate in designated-driver programs supported by beer and concessionaire companies at every NFL stadium nationwide. Throughout the season at all 31 NFL stadiums, more than 170,000 fans made the responsible decision by pledging to be designated drivers this season. Those fans now have a chance to earn the ultimate reward — a trip to Super Bowl XLV@in North Texas at Cowboys Stadium. The Responsibility Has Its Rewards Super Bowl XLV winners will be the Designated Drivers for the Season from the AFC Champion and NFC Champion teams. And the Designated Driver for the Season from the Buffalo Bills — Barbara Owczarczak of Lancaster, NY — will attend the 2011 Pro Bowl in Honolulu, HI. "We want everyone to make the right decision for Super Bowl," said Sigler. "Having a designated driver should be an obvious call in everyone's play book. Making sure designated drivers know how much we appreciate their responsible decision is what will make this year's celebration extra special — and extra safe." If you are hosting a Super Bowl party: — Make sure all of your guests designate their sober drivers before kick-off — help arrange ride-sharing with other sober drivers — Find unique ways to recognize the designated drivers at your party — Give them a great spot to watch the game. — Whatever non-alcoholic beverage they are drinking, make sure their glass is always full. — Let them have the first pass at the buffet table — Make sure their cars are easy to access when it is time to start driving people home — Serve plenty of food — Offer a variety of non-alcoholic choices like soft drinks, juice, and water — Serve one drink at a time and serve measured drinks. — Only serve alcohol to guests over 21 years of age — Determine ahead of time when you'll stop serving alcohol, such as one hour before the end of the party or at the end of the third quarter of the game (just like NFL stadiums) and begin serving coffee and dessert — Add the numbers of local car companies into your phone so they are just one touch away — Take appropriate steps to prevent anyone from driving while impaired. — Be prepared for guests to spend the night if an alternative way home is not available. If you are attending a Super Bowl party or watching at a sports bar or restaurant: — Designate your sober driver before the party begins and leave your car keys at home if you plan to drink. — Find unique ways to recognize the designated drivers when you are out at a bar or restaurant. — Offer to be the designated driver the next time you go out. — Cover the cost for parking or even pay for a tank of gas. — Whatever non-alcoholic beverage they are drinking, make sure their glass is always full. — Pick up the tab for their food and drink. — Before you go out, add the numbers for local car companies in your cell phone so if you find yourself in need of a ride, it is just one touch away. — Avoid drinking too much alcohol too fast. Pace yourself — eat enough food, take breaks and alternate with non-alcoholic drinks. — Take appropriate steps to prevent anyone from driving while impaired. Remember, Fans Don't Let Fans Drive Drunk. — Always buckle up — it's your best defense on the road. Online: www.FansDontLetFansDriveDrunk.org or http://www.nhtsa.gov/Impair.ed.

Commissioner Farmer extends deadline 'College Circuit' helps Kentuckians for KDA's Poster and Essay Contest plan for higher education.

Students in K-12 are eligible to enter through Feb. 11

TIMES STAFF REPORT
FRANKFORT — Agriculture Commissioner Richie Farmer has extended the deadline for entries to the Kentucky Department of Agriculture's annual Poster and Essay Contest to Feb. 11. "School districts throughout Kentucky have lost several days of school this year because of winter weather," Commissioner Farmer said. "This has made it more difficult for Kentucky students to work on their entries and turn them in on time. I have extended the deadline so every student may have an opportunity to participate in this contest. In the process, they will learn about the importance of Kentucky Proud and Kentucky agriculture in their everyday lives." To enter, students in kindergarten through 12th grade must submit either a poster or an essay based on the theme "Kentucky Proud: Your Family, Your Food, Your Future" to the Kentucky Department of Agriculture. Statewide winners in each grade level will be announced Feb. 21. Each winner will receive a $100 savings bond and will be honored at the Kentucky Agriculture Day Luncheon in March in Frankfort. For more information, contact Elizabeth McNulty at 502-564-4983 or elizabeth.mcenulty@ky.gov or go online to www.kyagr.com/marketing/ag_education/agday2011.htm.

Federal regulators propose new safety rules for mines

by SHELDON COMPTON STAFF WRITER
RICHMOND, Va. — The Associated Press has reported federal regulators have proposed new safety rules that would see a faster turnaround for enforcement of mines showing a past pattern of violations deemed serious. Regulators are asking that warning letters usually sent to mines be eliminated, and was prompted, as has been widely reported, following the Upper Big Branch mine explosion in West Virginia that killed 29 men, the worst such mining disaster in more than four decades. "We have long wanted changes (pattern of violations) rules so that needless tragedies like the Upper Big Branch disaster of last April do not happen again." UMW International President John P. Roemer said. AP reporters Monday, "We believe that this rule will help us get there." Federal officials say putting the new rules into practice would have an annual cost of about $4.2 million, the Associated Press reported, but those same officials say implementation would ultimately save $9.3 million in savings as they estimate some 150 fewer workers would be injured on the job following the changes.

SPORTS EDITOR

EASTERN — Dakota Hall scored a game-high 22 points as South Floyd defeated host Allen Central 70-59 on Friday night at J.E. Campbell Arena in a 58th District/Floyd County Conference contest between longtime rivals.

Hall was one of three South Floyd scorers to reach double figures. Dakota Newsome netted 17 points and Shannon Turner tossed in 15 for the Raiders.

South Floyd improved to 8-8 overall and 4-2 in the district after securing the victory. Allen Central dropped to 5-13 overall and 0-5 in the district following the loss.

South Floyd thrived at the foul line, connecting on 25-of-24 free throw attempts.

The Raiders drained five-of-13 free-throw attempts. South Floyd packed a fourth quarter bid featured a lead-out of each quarter. The Raiders used a successful start to move ahead of Allen Central, outscoring the Rebels 15-10 in the opening quarter.

South Floyd led 29-24 at halftime. The Raiders were able to add to their lead in the third quarter, outscoring Allen Central 18-11.

Allen Central's strong fourth quarter bid featured a 24-point outburst. The Rebels, however, couldn't recover.

Luke Rhea (six points), Brandon Marson (five points) and Luke Rhea (five points) were the Raiders' only scorers in the fourth quarter. (See RAIDERS, page two)

Bears beat Lindsey for 18th victory

TIMES STAFF REPORT

COLUMBIA — Sophomore Trevor Setty hit a three-point shot from the left wing with 47.1 seconds left to pushed Pikeville College in front by five and it held on from there for an 82-78 win over Lindsey Wilson College on Saturday.

Setty's three-point shot was the only made three-point basket in six second-half tries for the Bears, who had hit 6-of-12 from the arc in building a 36-29 lead at the break.

Pikeville improved to 18-5 overall and 7-4 in the Mid-South Conference. Lindsey Wilson slipped to 15-6 overall and 6-4 in the league. The win for the Bears avenged an 85-76 loss to the Raiders at home back on Dec. 4.

For Lindsey, it was their first loss in 12 games this season when it has scored at least 70 points in nine seasons under Paul Peck, the Raiders are now 145-16 when scoring 70-or-more points.

Five players reached double figures for Pikeville, scoring all but five points in the win. Senior Chris Donald came off the bench for 19 points, hitting 6-of-7 from the line as part of an impressive appearance for the Bears. Donald also had five rebounds, four off the offensive glass, and had two assists in 29 minutes of action.

Senior Vance Cooksey followed with 18 points and his six rebounds matched those of senior Quincy Hankins-Cole, who had 14 points, all in the second half.

Senior Justin Hicks had 15 points, leaving him tied for 11th on the school's all-time scoring list with Mike May with 1,395 points in his remarkable career.

Setty's triple in the final minute gave him 11 to go with five rebounds.

Lindsey Wilson had three players reach double figures, led by sophomore Kalen Kimberland's 18 points. Senior Jeremiah Diebler came off the bench for 16 points, hitting 5-of-6 from both the floor and the line.

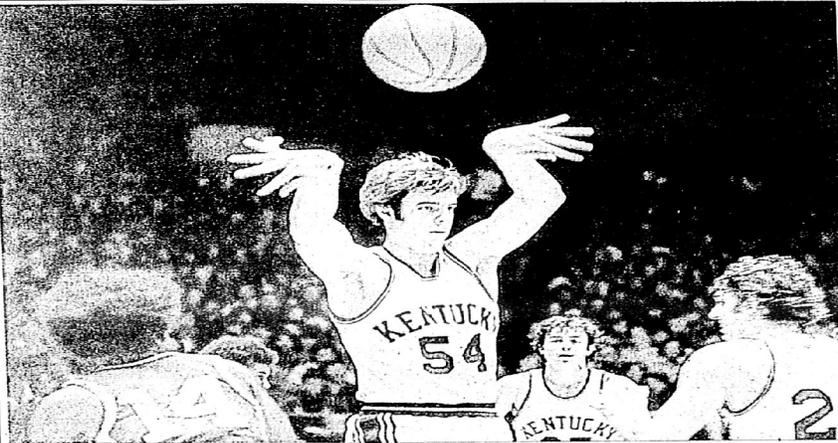

Senior Brandon Clemons tossed in 15 points for the Raiders.

Pikeville, which shot 46.8 percent overall and 38.9 percent from the arc, won the rebounding battle 39-34 and had 14 rebounds of its own misses.

Pikeville will be back in action on Thursday night when Georgetown comes to town for a game that will tip off at 8:07 EDT at the Expo Center.

NETTING PROSPERITY — BOUNCING BACK FROM ADVERSITY

Betsy Layne's Big Dan Hall still Big Blue

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

BETSY LAYNE — Big Dan Hall shared the dream most every kid growing up in the state of Kentucky hopes to live out at one time or another. He wanted to play basketball at the University of Kentucky.

Growing up in the Eastern Kentucky community of Betsy Layne, Hall thrived, athletically while more than holding his own in the classroom. As a youngster, Hall ranked as one of the nation's most dominant Little League pitchers. Still, basketball was his game. By the time he was a senior at Betsy Layne High School, Hall had grown into an athletic 6-10, 225-pound center that ranked as one of the nation's top boys' basketball players. Heavily recruited, Hall received interest from every NCAA Division I men's basketball program in the nation except UCLA. He settled on the University of Kentucky where he had an opportunity to play two seasons, one of which ended with a runner-up finish to John Wooden-coached UCLA in the NCAA championship game. Fortunately Hall's career as a Wildcat didn't end with the runner-up finish in his freshman campaign. Unfortunately Hall's career as a Wildcat ended way too soon.

A promising career at the University of Kentucky was cut short by not injury but outside influences over which Hall had no control. Hall found out years later that his departure from the UK basketball program was actually spurred by individuals from his home county who, rather than see him prosper at the next level, had worked feverishly to create adverse situations for Hall whom had earned a starting position during his sophomore season. But the big man from Betsy Layne finished

Alice Lloyd upends KIAC foe Asbury

TIMES STAFF REPORT

WILMORE — Host Asbury College erased a 15-point first half deficit but couldn't hold on in the second half dropping their fourth straight game Thursday night. Visiting Alice Lloyd defeated KIAC foe Asbury 70-66.

The Eagles fell to 9-14 overall and 1-5 in the KIAC. Asbury allowed Alice Lloyd to shoot 54 percent in the first half, and shot only 32 percent but still were down only one at the break. Alice Lloyd took their biggest lead at 26-11 but Asbury fought back in the final eight minutes. The Eagles would outscore ALC 18-5 in the final 6:15 of the half.

Lain Griffith scored 15 points and tied a season-high with 15 rebounds. Laura Carroll was the only other Eagle in double-figures with 17 points which led all scorers. Those two combined to make 14 of the team's 25 field goals. No other player made more than two field goals.

Asbury took the lead with the first basket in the second half, a jumper by Chelsea Williams. The lead would change hands eight times in the half and Eagles would push their lead out to five at 49-44 with 12:46 remaining.

Alice Lloyd would take back the lead for good at 53-51 as Gemma Gray knocked down her second three of the game. She finished with 13 points and five assists. Williams finished with 13 with 16 points and four assists.

Cooksey named MSC Player of the Week

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — His team was 1-1 for the week, but he sank eight three-point shots in the two games and has now been honored by the Mid-South Conference.

Senior Vance Cooksey received the honor on Monday after a vote by the Sports Information Directors of the Mid-South Conference.

Cooksey, a 6-0 point guard from Chicago, Ill., averaged 21.5 points, 4.5 rebounds and three steals per game while helping the Bears to splitting a pair of road conference games last week.

strong, ending his career close to home at Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va. Following the mandatory one season he had to sit out due to his transfer, Hall excelled at Marshall University, averaging 14.4 points per game. Also thriving in the classroom, he made the Dean's List with a 3.8 GPA his senior year.

Hall, however, remained blue. He's always been a Kentucky Wildcat.

"I found out years later that there was individuals from Floyd County, with whom I was familiar, who had come in and said things while I was sick during my sophomore season," Hall recalled. "After that, I felt like I needed to move on and I ended up at Marshall. I did nothing to do with Coach (Goe B.) Hall or anyone else within the program."

Big Dan from Betsy Layne represented Floyd County extremely well during his hoops career at the University of Kentucky. He lettered two seasons and his name still comes up in conversations regarding UK big men. When he arrived at the University of Kentucky, Hall was one of three players, G-10. He was a part of an historic recruiting class that included Rick Robey, Jack Givens, Mike Phillips and James Lee. That's quite possibly still the best recruiting class in UK history.

Prior to the 2009-10 season, boasting future NBA first round draft picks John Wall, DeMarcus Cousins and Eric Blodgett, there had been no recruiting class in UK history that has had the immediate impact that the 1974 class enjoyed. When freshmen had just become eligible to play on the varsity team, the 1974 class immediately excelled. Kentucky was 13-13 the year before Hall and his four teammates arrived. Robey and Givens averaged double figures in scoring for the elite eight before falling to UCLA in the championship game. No UK class has had a better four-year run than the 1974 class. The '74 class made it to the championship game in 1975, won the NIT in 1976, reached the elite eight in 1977 and won the national title in 1978. Robey was the third overall pick in the NBA draft while Givens was drafted 16th.

Fresh out of high school, Hall played in 17 games during his freshman season, including the national championship game versus UCLA. He played for Coach Joe B. Hall, successor to legendary Wildcat coach Adolph Rupp, and is quick to point out Coach Hall wasn't the reason he left UK.

"I've had the chance to stay in contact with Coach Hall; he wasn't the reason I left," Hall reiterated. "Since then, I've maintained a good relationship with Coach Hall, our former coaches and my former teammates."

Earlier in the current basketball season, prior to a UK game on Dec. 18, 2010, Hall attended a reunion held for Coach Hall. Those in attendance included, among others, Kenny "Sky" Walker, Sam Bowie, Givens, Robey and Lee. Hall, the player, had the chance to catch up with dozens of former players during the event. He was attending his first group event since the mid-1980s.

During his Kentucky career, Hall wore jersey number 54. Others to wear number 54 have included, before him, Tom Payne, and after him, Melvin Turpin and Patrick Patterson.

During Hall's career at Marshall University he played in numerous memorable games like the Thundering Herd competed in the Southern Conference. One of those matchups pitted Hall and the Herd against Herb Williams-led Ohio State. Hall's roommate at the time was Greg White, a lifelong friend who eventually returned to coach the Thundering Herd. Hall is scheduled to attend an upcoming reunion at Marshall University.

Following his career at Marshall, Hall had an opportunity to play professionally overseas in Europe. His biggest regret? Not going to Europe.

"Looking back, had I went overseas, I might have had an opportunity to come back and play in the states," Hall commented. "At the time, the ABA and NBA were both going strong."

Hall likes nothing better than to see an Eastern Kentucky player excel on the next level. He's enjoyed watching Shelby Valley High School graduate Elisha Justice thus far during his freshman season at the University of Louisville. Hall also saw several similarities between the Betsy Layne team during his high school career and Justice's Shelby Valley squads. The 1972 Betsy Layne team had the potential win the state, posting a 32-4 record.

"I hope he does well and succeeds," Hall said. "In my opinion, he's the best playmaker that they have. He's a very smart and unselfish player. It's good to see a kid from Eastern Kentucky develop. You have to have the backing of local people. It's so important to have that support."

Hall has had an opportunity to catch countless high school college games, and since his playing career ended. A letterman of two NCAA Division I men's basketball programs. Hall has plenty of good advice to give.

"Begin your fundamentals at an early age and learn to improve on specifics and specialties as you progress," Hall said, when asked what advice he would give to area high school players. "Go from basic fundamentals to advanced and focus on proper technique and development of skills. You should be able to dribble the ball with advanced accuracy using either hand, regardless of what position you play. You should reach and maintain a level of physical conditioning that will give you an advantage over your opponent. When you step onto the court learn to develop a mindset to conquer all. Playing basketball in Eastern Kentucky can be a challenge within itself. Sometimes outside and elected influences can hinder your ability to shine. Some individuals and teams have been denied the opportunity to advance to the state tournament. It's the adversities cheer, afraid of losing their luster. Sometimes individuals even fall victim to conspiracy and propaganda after entering the college ranks. Your team should not be a victim of local influences and opposition as your success finds some resentful. Through prosperity and adversity always stay focused; you will become wiser and more resilient to life's responsibilities, develop a better sense of character and realize those who are your true friends."

A student of the game, Hall enjoys following the Kentucky and Marshall programs as well as numerous area high school teams. Thirty-plus years removed from the court, Hall has seen the game go through some changes.

"While jump ball situations, alternate possession and incorporating the dunk have been part of the changes, I will say the three point shot has been the biggest influence during those transition years," Hall said. "The three-point shot has given those individuals an opportunity to further their skills and plants as a player; it also opened up the inside game for the big man giving him more room on the inside."

When he was done playing basketball, Hall took up softball playing in several leagues over the years.

Today, Hall works in the state transportation department. His office is located close to home in neighboring Pikeville. A big man with a big heart, Big Dan Hall is an Eastern Kentuckian who continues to help fellow Eastern Kentuckians. He catches plenty of college basketball in the comfort of his own home, often times with family, and makes it back to Lexington to catch the Cats from time to time.

Cooksey

"Vance has been a terrific player for us all season, and last week he was certainly as solid as they come," said Coach Kelly Wells. "He played exceptionally well in two tough road games, two very difficult places to play. He is deserving of this honor for sure. We're proud of him and for him."

Cooksey, is the second year to receive player of the week honors from the Mid-South Conference. Senior forward Chris Donald picked up the award on Jan. 3 after scoring 25 points and pulling down nine rebounds off the bench at Faulkner on New Year's Eve.

The senior scored 25 points and recorded four steals in a 79-68 loss at University of the Cumberlands on Thursday night. Cooksey made six of seven three-pointers and 8-of-14 overall from the field in the game. He finished the week with 18 points and six rebounds in the Bears' 82-78 win over Lindsey Wilson College on Saturday.

For the week, Cooksey connected on half of his 28 shots from the field, including 8-of-13 shots from beyond the three-point arc.

Cooksey leads the Mid-South Conference in scoring with an average of 18.1 points per game. His 416 points is fourth in the country this season. He leads Pikeville and ranks second in the MSC with 4.5 assists per game average. Pikeville is 18-5 overall and 7-4 in the conference. The Bears return home this week as they host Georgetown College on Thursday at 8:07 p.m., and Shawnee State University on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Alice Lloyd beats Asbury

Frazier leads Lady Eagles in KIAC setback

WILMORE — Host Asbury College erased a 15-point first half deficit but couldn't hold on in the second half, dropping their fourth straight game Thursday night. Visiting Alice Lloyd erased KIAC foe Asbury 70-66.

The Eagles fell to 9-14 overall and 1-5 in the KIAC. Asbury allowed Alice Lloyd to shoot 54 percent in the first half, and shot only 32 percent but still were down only one at the break. Alice Lloyd took their biggest lead at 26-11 but Asbury fought back in the final eight minutes. The Eagles would outscore ALC 18-5 in the final 6:15 of the half.

Lakin Griffith scored 15 points and tied a season-high with 15 rebounds. Laura Carroll was the only other Eagle in double-figures with 17 points which led all scorers. Those two combined to make 14 of the team's 25 field goals. No other player made more than two field goals.

Asbury took the lead with the first bucket in the second half, a jumper by Chelsea Williams. The lead would change hands eight times in the half and Eagles would push their lead out to five at 49-44 with 12:46 remaining.

Alice Lloyd would take back the lead for good at 53-51 as Gemma Gray knocked down her second three of the game. She finished with 13 points and five assists. Whitney Frazier led ALC with 16 points and four assists.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

Taking a tip from the gladiators

by SANDY MILLER HAYS AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

No matter how high the potential "glamour quotient," I don't think any of us today would envy the ancient gladiators.

First, most of the gladiators were slaves. Some scholars say the first gladiators were slaves forced to fight to the death in honor of a deceased Roman aristocrat. While the ranks of gladiators later included criminals and prisoners of war as well as slaves, some free-born men also chose life (and death) in the arena. But in doing so, they had to take an oath to agree to be treated as slaves, and they suffered the social disgrace of "infamia" (a social stain that also covered prostitutes and actors).

It's hard to see how our modern life could ever intersect with that of the ancient gladiators, but these two words cover it: "barley" and "energy."

Historians tell us that the ancient gladiators consumed barley for energy. In fact, it was such a key component of their diet that they were known as "hordearii," literally, "barley men." (Barley is a cereal grain produced by the annual grass Hordeum vulgare.) Some say the gladiators were required to eat barley every morning as a rich source of energy to sustain them in the intense competitions.

Now, in the best tradition of "everything old is new again," some scientists with the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) are turning to barley as an energy source—but they're not eating it, and they're not even using the grain.

Instead, they're utilizing the byproducts of barley—the straw and hulls, as well as dried distillers grains (DDGS) made from barley—to produce an energy-rich oil called bio-oil. This bio-oil could be used either for transportation fuels or for producing heat and power needed for the conversion of barley grain to ethanol.

The straw, hulls and DDGS are left-overs from the fermentation of barley grain for ethanol, a biofuel option that's slowly gaining ground in the Mid-Atlantic States and in the Southeast, where farmers could cash in on the production of winter barley crops while continuing to raise corn and other food crops in the summer.

Not only would this give farmers a chance to boost their income from their acreage, but it also could help reduce soil erosion and nitrogen leaching in the soil, which is a major concern for farmers in some areas, including the Chesapeake Bay Watershed. So there's a definite agricultural advantage to using barley in this way.

But would it work with our current fuel infrastructure? The scientists say yes, that bio-oil from barley leftovers could potentially be refined, stored and distributed with the same infrastructure that's already in place for the petroleum fuel industry.

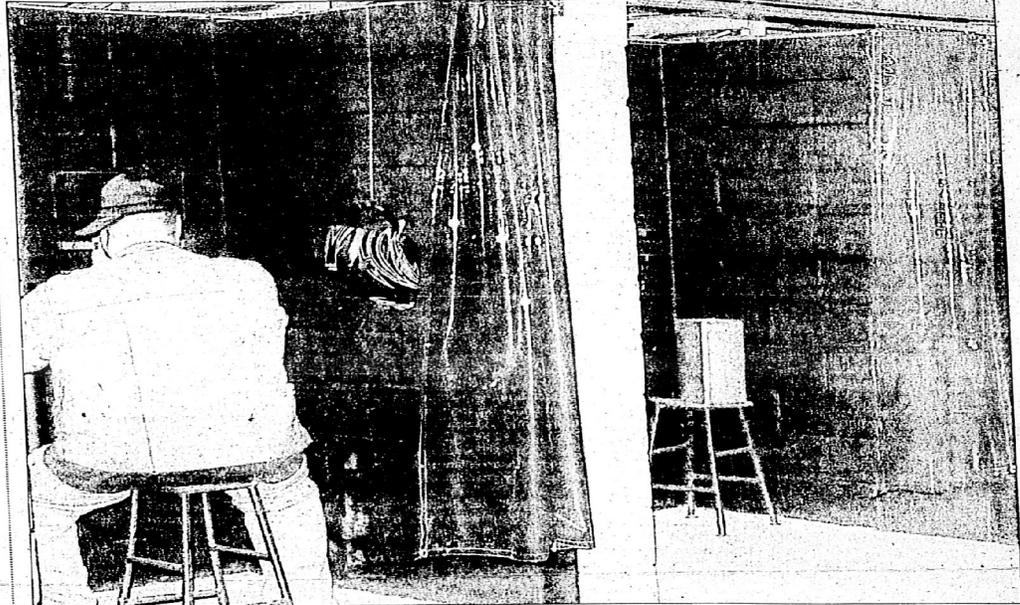

So how, precisely, does one go about turning seemingly worthless barley straw and hulls in energy-rich oil?

The ARS scientists used a process called "fast pyrolysis," an intense burst of heat delivered in the absence of oxygen. With this method, they say a kilogram of barley straw and hulls will yield about half a kilogram of bio-oil with an energy content about half that of Number 2 fuel oil.

The energy content of bio-oil made from barley DDGS (including DDGS contaminated with mycotoxins, which means those DDGS can't even be used for livestock feed) was even higher, about two-thirds that of Number 2 fuel oil. But the barley DDGS bio-oil is a bit more problematic, because it's more viscous and has a shorter shelf-life than the bio-oils made from the straw, or hulls.

The fast pyrolysis process also produces a solid substance called "biochar." A familiar example of biochar is the activated charcoal used in aquarium filters. The biochar from fast pyrolysis of barley byproducts

Big Sandy CTC welding program features state-of-the-art equipment

by DAPHNE KIRK GOBLE

The Welding Program of Big Sandy Community and Technical College (BSCTC) was recently renovated and modernized by the installation of state-of-the-art equipment and new welding booths.

The enhancements, supported by BSCTC President, Dr. George Edwards, Chief Institutional Officer, Bobby McCool and Chief Business Affairs Officer, John Herald maintains and expands the Big Sandy Welding Program to one of the best in Eastern Kentucky.

A collaborative endeavor, the restorations were made possible via the dedication and hard work of the BSCTC Masonry Program, led by Randall Haney, the Mayo Maintenance Department, managed by Garry Senters, the Carpentry Program, directed by Michael Froman, and the HVAC Program led by Eric Campbell.

The welding renovations added six new welding booths and six new welding machines to the Big Sandy Welding Program, hence increasing the total number of booths and machines to 30 for teaching and training purposes.

Assistant Professor, John McKenzie remarks, "Our Welding Program is top-notch. We have the finest welding booths and stands anywhere in the State." McKenzie adds, "Our equipment was purchased from Triangle Engineering, Hanover, Massachusetts. The stands and booths are multi-purpose for both plate and pipe welding."

Since the new welding booths and stands support both plate and pipe welding, the renovations allow students to plate weld in 2-G, 3-G, and 4-G, as well as pipe welding for 2-G, 5-G and 6-G.

Welding student, Michael Meeks of Johnson County states, "The new equipment and booths are awesome. The renovations create a better learning environment because of improved lighting and space." Additionally, Meeks adds, "The equipment runs smoother and welding positioning is much easier."

Students, Kalen Spencer of Johnson County and Ben Hicks of Floyd County demonstrated their craft and echoed the sentiments of Michael Meeks.

The Welding Technology Program at Big Sandy provides a strong core curriculum that prepares students with various options for employment. Welding occupations are primarily concerned with joining, surfacing, fabricating, and repairing structures or parts made of metal and/or other welding materials.

Graduates of the Big Sandy Welding Technology Program are prepared for entry level positions in the welding industry. Coursework includes, oxy-fuel systems, metal arc welding, small metal arc groove welding, gas tungsten arc welding, blueprint reading, gas metal arc welding, shielded metal arc welding as well as mathematics, computer fundamentals and other necessary courses.

Admission to the BSCTC Welding Technology Program requires the following:
 Application for admission
 Be at least 16 years of age
 ACT scores or equivalent
 Copy of high school transcript or GED certificate

Verification of completion of prerequisite courses
 Official transcripts of all post-secondary course work OR Copy of midterm grades

MEDICINE CABINET

At a time when our state lawmakers should be looking for ways to reduce healthcare costs, some politicians are trying to pass legislation that would require Kentuckians to go to their doctor and get a prescription for certain common cold and allergy medicines like Advil® Cold & Sinus, Claritin-D®, Mucinex® D, and Sudafed®.

The last thing Kentuckians need are more hassles and higher healthcare costs. Patients agree—7 in 10 oppose "prescription-only" laws for medicines containing pseudoephedrine, according to a recent national survey by the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

There are better ways to deal with Kentucky's illegal drug problem.
Let's work on solutions that punish criminals, not patients.

Pikeville College student artist featured at EKU exhibit

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The artwork of Pikeville College senior Brittany Moore will be among the artists featured in a juried-art show at Eastern Kentucky University (EKU).

The theme of "Nature's Human Art Exhibition" is a national show open to artists across the country, and includes a wide range of media and "innovative approaches to the theme. The EKU Chautauqua Lecture Series and the Department of Art and Design sponsored the exhibition.

The 3-D piece, titled "Money Bees," is composed of thousands of coin wrappers, paper clips and a light source and represents a bee hive.

"I chose a money theme because bees are as the working class citizens," said Moore. "While the bees are working to supply their honey, people are working day and night to sustain money."

"Being juried into the "Nature's Human" exhibition is both an honor and a great professional accomplishment for this young artist," said Petra Carroll, assistant professor of art. "The process of submitting artwork through digital documentation, writing artist statements, completing entry forms and meeting all entry specifications and requirements in a professional manner. This is all done in addition to creating an outstanding piece of artwork."

"I truly admire her fearless approach to her art," said Pat Kowalok, professor of art at Pikeville College. "She works hard. She is reflective in her thought process. She is curious. She is willing to experiment and accept all the possibilities of success or failure experimentation carries with it."

Moore is the daughter of Angela and Ricky Thomsbury of Belfry, Ky.

The exhibit runs through Feb. 18 at the Giles Gallery the EKU campus. The show is free and open to the public.

but something tangible: I pulled my Dad's 35mm out of the closet and began to take it with me on outings. Now, I frequently travel to destinations in Appalachia with my Nikon digital camera to document these old hills," said Bentley.

"I needed a form of presentation and, inspired by local frame maker and photographer Kenny Mitchell, I started crafting my own frames from various hardwoods. Using wood for framing affords me full creative control when it comes to style and accentuation of my images."

Bentley is an exhibiting member of the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen as well as the Appalachian Artisan Center.

A reception for the artist will be held Wednesday (Feb. 2) at 11 a.m. in the gallery, which is located on the second floor of Record Memorial Building. For more information, contact Pat Kowalok, professor of art, at 218-5758.

Pikeville College students raise $1,300 during school's first-ever Greek Week

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — Pikeville College students raised more than $1,300 and logged nearly 60 volunteer hours for four local charities during the college's first-ever Greek Week.

Pikeville College introduced fraternities and sororities to the campus last spring to promote leadership and service on campus and in the community.

Gamma Sigma Chi fraternity volunteered six hours at Appalachian Hospice Care and presented Shriners Hospitals for Children with a check for $440. Delta Alpha Lambda fraternity worked 20 hours of volunteer service and donated $320 to the March of Dimes.

Delta Delta Nu sorority volunteered 32 hours at Pike County Animal Shelter and donated more than $400 in cash and supplies. While volunteering, sorority members walked adoptable dogs, fed the animals and cleaned cages. Members donated towels, cat litter, bleach, toys and more than 40 bags of cat and dog food.

"Animals may not be able to say 'thank you' but the wagging of a tail or hearing a little purr after helping them makes all the difference," said Taylor Mullins, Delta Delta Nu president.

Zeta Omega Chi sorority donated $170 to WestCare homeless shelter after raising money during a bake sale. Students toured the facility, spoke with staff about the services provided at the shelter, and plans on volunteering during the spring semester.

Other Greek Week activities included a scavenger hunt, Olympics and Greek sing.
