Man arrested while walking through

HOUSTON (AP) — A man was arrested on Wednesday for allegedly walking through a security checkpoint at a Texas state university. The man, identified as a 21-year-old student, was caught with a handgun hidden in his clothing. He is currently being held in a local jail.

PRESTONSBURG — An odd turn of events landed a man in jail this past week and now sees him living under the conditions of home incarceration for a string of charges.

Police say they found James Shepherd, 54, of Prestonsburg, walking "down the creek" after they said it was reported he "being very disorderly" at the home of one of his relatives sometime earlier.

It was not reported what supposed problem Shepherd might have been involved in at his family's home in the police report. "I caught up to (Shepherd)," said Floyd County Sheriff's Deputy Dusty Newsome. "He was very loud and vulgar saying, [expletive deleted], just go ahead and shoot me ... I'm not going to jail!"

Newsome said Shepherd, who was ultimately charged with alcohol intoxication, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct, had slurred speech and had to be forced into an ambulance by himself and another officer before he could be brought into custody.

Shepherd later pleaded guilty at his arraignment and accepted a sentence of 30 days home incarceration, along with fines and probation.

Workshop to focus on crisis communications

PIKEVILLE — There will be a Homeland Security training session for communicators in Pikeville in early April that will be free to those who register before class size limits are reached.

The training, "Public

Information in a VMD/Terrorism Incident," is designed specifically for people whose duties require them to deal with the media during a community's response to a disaster or emergency, said Sara George, public information officer for the Highway District 12 office in Pikeville.

"I call it 'crisis communications,' because the principles apply to every type of disaster and emergency," said George. "When I took this class several years ago in Louisville, I knew we needed this training here in the mountains. It's the best continuing education class I've ever participated in, and well worth the time investment of two days."

The training session will take place on Wednesday and Thursday, April 6 and 7 beginning at 8 a.m. and ending each day at 4:30 p.m. It will be held at the Power Building on Main Street in Pikeville, which is adjacent to the Pikeville Methodist Church.

WISH GRANTED

Betsy Layne defeated Allen Central earlier in the week during the opening round of the 58th District Tournament at South Floyd's Raider Arena. Allen Central's Micah Harlow (55) is pictured dribbling against Betsy Layne's Casey Atkins (35). Reigning All "A" Classic state champion Betsy Layne will face South Floyd tonight in the 58th District championship game. Tip-off for the title matchup is set for 7 p.m.

David School student surprised with 'wish' trip to Hawaii

DAVID — Lucas Howard is heading to Hawaii.

Howard, 18, had his wish to travel to Hawaii granted by the Make-A-Wish Foundation on Thursday, and his fellow students at The David School celebrated with him by wearing leis around their necks.

"I've wanted to go to Hawaii for a long time now," Howard said. "I am really interested in volcanoes and rain forests. I'm very excited."

Howard was diagnosed with cystic fibrosis when he was 2 weeks old, but he has refused to let the disease control his life. Despite battling severe lung congestion at all times and having open heart surgery in April of last year,

Fla. gov sticking to decision

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Having recently completed a tour of Eastern Kentucky with the nation's top drug enforcement official to give a first-hand presentation of what the drug epidemic has done to the area, Gov. Steve Beshear is now continuing a full-throttle agenda with the problem.

Prior to that tour, Beshear attended the National Governor's Association conference in Washington, D.C., with one meeting in particular at the top of his list — a one-on-one with Florida's Governor Rick Scott.

Beshear and others in Frankfort, especially Kentucky Attorney General Jack Conway, have been speaking out over the past two weeks about Scott's proposal that would see his state without a drug monitoring system for prescriptions.

Beshear has now urged Scott not only to reconsider this proposal, but to adopt a system similar to Kentucky's KASPAR, in light of the fact that many of the prescription painkillers in Kentucky are being funneled into the state by way of what has been dubbed the "Flamingo Pipeline" from Florida.

"I sat down and explained just how important this was. Apparently, they're losing the lives of people from Florida every day, and of course we're losing the lives of a lot of our friends and family right here in Kentucky over the abuse of prescription drugs," Gov. Beshear told reporters after his visit to Washington.

But Beshear has said he failed to convince Scott during the talks, who has shown concern for issues relating to medical privacy with

Burger challenge still unbeaten

Six more to try Saturday

PRESTONSBURG — Well, no one has finished it, yet. But then with five pounds of food in front of you, it's a pretty tall order.

Since announcing their "Big Billy Burger Challenge" last month, the owners of Billy Ray's Restaurant in Prestonsburg have seen nine sizable appetites sit down for the four-pound burger and two half-pound sides and fail to leave an empty plate.

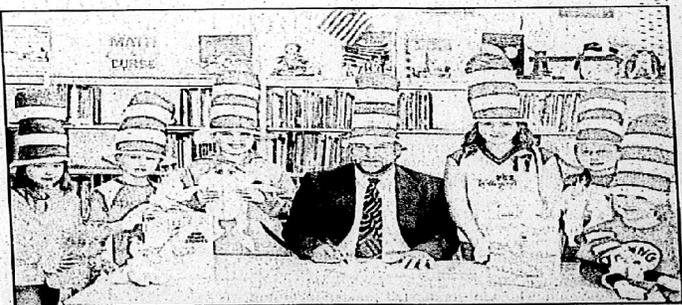

This includes the first three locals who tried the challenge for a test run last month.

But the burger can still be bested, or at least that's what six more people think who have signed on to give the challenge a try tomorrow.

Owners say six more have scheduled to beat the challenge, which would secure their name or names

Senate approves amended Medicaid budget plan

FRANKFORT — The Senate approved its own plan to stabilize the state Medicaid budget Wednesday, a vastly different version from the House's that points toward a possible conference committee to work out a compromise in the legislative session's waning days.

House Bill 305, sponsored by Rep. Rick Rand, D-Bedford, is aimed at plugging a $166.5 million hole in the Medicaid budget for the current fiscal year. The original House plan would move that money forward from FY 2012, with next year's budget being reduced thanks to anticipated cost savings, including managed care.

The Senate plan, in contrast, would make broad-based cuts across state government for the rest of the biennium to make up the Medicaid shortfall.

Under the Senate version, 0.525 percent cuts would be made to most state programs, except for K-12 and higher education, for the rest of the current fiscal year. Schools and colleges would be included in statewide cuts of 2.26 percent for FY 2012, which begins July 1. Base SEEK funding for local school districts would be cut 1.33 percent.

Local school districts would be allowed more flexibility in implementing some state regulations to make up for the reduction in SEEK funding, said budget committee chair Sen. Bob Leeper, I-Paducah. Some dedicated funds, including coal severance, would also be spared cuts.

The Senate plan also includes language prohibiting the governor from furloughing state workers until other targeted savings on state contracts, non-merit employees and operating efficiencies are met.

"In my opinion, this is a more responsible strategy," Leeper said.

HB 305, which passed the Senate on a 24-12 vote, now returns to the House for consideration of the Senate changes. If the two chambers cannot agree on one plan or the other, a conference committee will be appointed to iron out a final version.

Church holds groundbreaking

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

BETSY LAYNE — The Calvary Southern Baptist Church will soon have a new addition to its existing location, a project which several turned out to break ground for this past Sunday.

Church members and others broke ground for their new sanctuary and fellowship hall. The two buildings, connected by a covered breezeway, will be built near their current location behind the Betsy Layne Fire Department.

"This is a great challenge for us and we have stepped out in faith and accepted the challenge," said Pastor Doug Lewis. "Our members are very excited about this and we are trusting God to provide and complete this work through us and others. He sends to help us."

Construction on the 11,400 square foot facility is scheduled to begin right away.

The project will enable the church to expand its youth programs and community outreach services and provide a welcome place for anyone seeking a place to worship, work and serve the lord, Lewis said.

Church members have not said how long they expect construction to take before the new facilities are complete.

The Big Sandy Singers have been invited to compete against other collegiate groups from across the state in fun competition in "Voices in Harmony: A Pop & Cappella Singalong," which will take place this Fri., Mar. 4, 7:30 p.m. at the Lexington Catholic High School Auditorium. The competition will also feature a mini-concert by the cappella group Eleventh Hour from NBC's hit show "The Sing Off" hosted by Nick Lashay. The Singers are sponsored by Jennifer Reynolds State Farm Insurance of Pikeville. Pictured is Jennifer presenting a contribution to make the Singers' trip to the competition possible. The Big Sandy Singers include (front row, from left) Rhonda Alley, Sarah Adams, Sponsor Jennifer Reynolds, Asst. Director Clayton Case, Brittan Parker, Candace Preece (second row) Erin Conroy, Ryan Shepherd, Dustin Newsome, Brandon Lafferty, and Chesi Sprigg Dingus. Howard is excelling in school and has his future planned. Howard is a senior at The David School and has already been accepted to Alice Lloyd College, where he plans to study English. After graduating, he wants to return to The David School to teach English.

"Lucas is a great kid," said Cathy (Horn) May, with the Make-A-Wish Foundation. "This is a really big wish for us."

May, along with Jenny

Hukill, traveled from Lexington to officially notify Howard that his wish had been granted. The two Make-A-Wish volunteers also brought a special cake for Howard and the students and faculty of The David School.

Howard, along with his father, Mike Hodge, mother, Kristie Hodge, and sister, Kayla Hodge, will leave for Hawaii on April 23. They will be staying in the Aloha State for a week.

According to the Make-A-Wish Foundation website, "Since 1980, the Make-A-Wish Foundation has enriched the lives of children with life-threatening medical conditions through its wish-granting work. The Foundation's mission, reflects the life-changing impact that a Make-A-Wish experience has on children, families, referral sources, donors, sponsors and entire communities."

"I'm very disappointed so far in his reflection," Beshear continued, adding that he knows of other governors who are ready to confront Scott about the proposal. "He said he understood the problem, but he just didn't really want to have people's records online like that."

There is no charge for the training and George said 30 applicants will be taken from online registration as quickly as the spots are filled. From that point, she said, any cancellations would open a spot on a waiting list created after the class was filled.

The actual training will be done for Homeland Security by the Texas Engineering Extension Service, where the National Emergency Response and Rescue Training Center is located.

"I have invited our local media folks, too, because there is no point in us training ourselves to work with them if they don't know what we're being taught," continued George, who sent word of the sessions out earlier this week. "We're all in this together, for the benefit of our communities."

As for who might benefit from the training? George said the field is wide open, including those working as public information officers for a local government or agency such as Kentucky State Police, hospital, health department, Red Cross, disaster or relief organization, emergency management officials, firefighters, county judge-executives and city mayors.

In addition, those who might field calls from the media or send out media announcements or news releases, or media representatives who cover emergency and disaster events, added George.

Those interested can register online at <https://ky.train.org/Desktop/Shell.aspx>. Registration deadline is March 18.

on a plaque in the restaurant, if they are successful.

In order to complete the challenge, competitors must finish the burger and two half-pound side items in under 60 minutes, and cannot use the bathroom or leave the dining room area during the challenge.

"If you win, you will get your name on the Wall of Fame," Brent Graden, director of economic development for Prestonsburg explained during the first dry run last month. "You will also win an autographed poster from Billy Ray's. If you fail, then you will get a button that says, 'I failed miserably at the Big Billy Burger Challenge.'"

Since that time, owners have agreed that if anyone can finish the five pounds of food, they'll be eating for free.

For that first run at the win, a large crowd showed up to see Chris Schoolcraft, Mason Haywood and Walter Owens sit down at a table and have the belly-busting burger brought to their table.

All three, though each taking a different approach and gaining ground early, eventually walked away with only buttons, prompting Graden to then say that each of them "stumbled down Court Street like they were lost."

The Big Billy Burger Challenge went live the following week and since then nine have tried and failed. The price of the burger and side items is $24.99, unless you finish, of course.

Community is key in fighting drug problem

Here in the eastern region of Kentucky we've always been apt to receive visits from high profile names who come here to view our "condition" and report back to Washington, D.C. on what they've witnessed and heard.

Robert Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson did it in the 1960s. Bill Clinton did it in the 1990s. And now White House Drug Czar Gil Kerlikowske is the most recent in a too long line of federal representatives sent to learn about to the problems we Appalachians face.

And just like poverty was alleviated following the visits of Kennedy and Clinton, we expect our region's drug problem will be a thing of the past now that Kerlikowske has heard first hand testimonials on the issues our region is facing with drug addiction.

That's really to say that we don't expect much will change at all.

Here's why: The federal government's usual method of throwing money at the problem will certainly not work. Not this time. For one, there's no more money to throw.

Secondly, we've already thrown millions of federal dollars at the problem in the form of Operation UNITE, and while that project has paid dividends and removed some dealers from the street and moved some addicts into treatment, the addiction to prescription drugs is still prevailing.

Operation UNITE coupled with law enforcement is an important tool, but while they serve as an axe, we desperately need the precision of a scalpel. And that lies in our local communities, because law enforcement simply can not work without the community to back it up.

It won't be until our communities finally stand up to the problem once and for all that we can rid ourselves of the increase in crime, the multiple overdoses and the loss of our families. We simply can't afford to keep our heads buried in the sand while drug dealers down the street and unscrupulous doctors in town continue to dish out pain pills as they would candy.

The flip side of that coin is that we can continue to do nothing, allow another generation of young people to simply fade away to the preponderance of addiction and a ready supply, and hope the continued death and sickness goes away on its own.

We've heard the old Washington song and dance before, but in truth the only solution lies with our own understanding and ability to fight back with what we know. And as we continue to receive lip service from Washington, it's a simple choice for those of us in the mountains who are fed up to our necks with the scourge of addiction and those who would prey upon it for profit. But even the simplest choice must have the weight of action behind it.

What's at stake in Wisconsin

by DONALD KALL

When the riots in Tunisia began I went out into the streets and shouted, "Today we are all Tunisians!"

"Right on," a middle-aged guy with a Keith Richards face shouted back.

When the riots in Egypt started I went out into the streets and shouted, "Today we are all Egyptians!"

"A little old lady in goggles flashed me the peace sign."

When the Bahrain riot started I yelled, "We are all Bahraini," but all I got was funny looks.

Same when I announced common cause with the demonstrations in Libya, Yemen, and Morocco: more funny looks, along with a rude gesture or two.

But when government workers and their supporters in Madison, Wisconsin protested and I ran out to yell, "We are all Madisonians," some people began to boo and hiss, and that little old lady threw a dead rat at me.

Unions aren't as popular as they used to be. Once hailed as champions of the working class, for some Americans—including a majority of Republicans—they have become symbols of goldbricking and greed.

Unions have been accused of everything from driving jobs overseas to bankrupting state and local governments and—to a large degree—the charges have stuck.

Unions brought some of it on themselves. In an effort to protect jobs of members in an ever-more automated world, they negotiated work rules (like "featherbedding" in railroads and "bogus type" in the printing trade) that increased labor costs without improving productivity.

I suppose the shot that started the avalanche was President Ronald Reagan's destruction of the air traffic controllers union. That union attempted to hold the nation's air traffic hostage to their demand for higher wages. But Reagan, acting boldly, grabbed them by the scruff of the neck and threw them into the middle of the street.

He fired all striking workers and ran the system with supervisors, strikebreakers, and amateurs until the new hires could be brought up to speed. I've always wondered what would have happened had we suffered a mid-air collision during those first few dangerous months. But the Gipper's luck held and there were no accidents.

The episode put the fear of God into unions, however, and they've faced headwinds ever since.

That's a shame because, for all their flaws, unions did bring a measure of democracy and justice into the workplace and made it possible for working stiffs to lead a middle-class lifestyle and have middleclass dreams for their children.

The American people don't seem to see things that way. Most of us think of ourselves more as consumers than as workers.

Thus, things that are good for workers, like high wages, are widely viewed as bad because they lead to higher prices, hurting consumers.

The hostility toward public unions is even more pronounced since the general public is the entity paying the higher wages and benefits.

Make no mistake about it: the attack on the public service unions in Wisconsin, Ohio, and Indiana is the first volley in an all-out war by conservatives on all unions. If they succeed at destroying them, they'll have eliminated the last great countervailing force against the political power of corporations in this country.

Now I'm not a great believer in the Vast Right-Wing Conspiracy. Hey, we're Americans, right? Conspiracies are for Europe, or Hillary Clinton.

But if there were such a conspiracy, it would conspire to appoint a Supreme Court that would rule that corporations and unions can spend virtually unlimited amounts on elections.

Then it would destroy the unions. And then it would spend and spend and spend on elections and get really stupid people elected, people who would do its bidding.

Aren't we lucky that there is no Vast Right-Wing Conspiracy?

I didn't like being a Bahraini anyway.

The Usual Eccentric

Green eggs and spoiled ham

by WILL E. SANDERS

As lady luck would have it, I recently became the recipient of a ham. Now this wasn't just any ham, this was a special ham—a raffle ham. What is, you must be wondering, a raffle ham? Well, that's a silly question. Are you stupid or something? Everybody already knows a raffle ham is any ham (or ham-like product) awarded to any individual participating in a raffle where ham is a door prize.

You might not realize this, but I'm a big fan of hams. Be they dry- or wet-cured, country or canned, shank or spiral-sliced, smoked, salty or sugared, bone in or out. From black forests to bradenhams, these things matter not to a true ham lover. I've tried ham so many ways that the only way left to try it is to take a bite out of a live pig. I've heard its delicious, but I don't want worms.

But I like those exotic hams, too, from your traditional cottages to Smithfields. Why, I've even been known to enjoy an occasional picnic ham or two in my day, even though any ham connoisseur rating this already knows picnic hams don't technically qualify as a member of the ham family per se.

However, I don't like loney hams. The mere thought of horey repulses me. I will speak of this honey ham hated no further. Let us move on.

So, this raffle ham I'm jabbering about has me in a pickle (which reminds me, pickled ham also tastes especially delectable). A few hours ago, I walked in the door and sat the ham on the countertop. One look in the freezer all but confirmed the fact I have nowhere to adequately preserve a ham without becoming a card-carrying member of the salmonella society.

The ham is still on the countertop at this very moment because I don't think it will keep in the cupboard. It's been on the countertop for going on three hours now. When I came to a neck around from where I write this now, I can see the ham from here. It's rather unnerving and starting to make me feel paranoid. I could be wrong, but I think the raffle ham is watching me, and I swear I thought I saw it move on its own. Nevertheless, if I don't make a decision soon, I should probably give it a name. I'm thinking of calling it Sam the Ham.

I know what you must be thinking: Why doesn't this idiot just have ham for supper tonight? I suppose that would solve the raffle ham problem I'm having, but I'm not in the mood for some ham at the moment—much less an (SET ITAL) entire (END ITAL) boneless ham that weighs 6 pounds. While I'm not exactly on a strict dietary regimen, I try not to consume more than 5 pounds of meat in one sitting. I don't know many people who can pig-out and eat an entire ham themselves anyway, and I believe any doctor would agree that digesting a whole ham is ill-advised, if not potentially fatal.

This happens to me every time I win meat, which is surprisingly often believe it or not (it's the second raffle ham that I've won this year). I never have a place to keep large chunks of meat. I almost wish hams were redeemable for cash, but mostly because it would give "bringing home the bacon" an all new meaning.

Great! Now my some of my cats are messing with the raffle ham. Hold on. All right, sorry about that. Sometimes I think my five cats enjoy ham more than I do. They tore the plastic a little bit, but I think Sam's going to pull through if I jury-rig the contents of my freezer without something falling on my toe, including two other hams already crammed in there.

Too bad tomorrow isn't Easter. Easter ham, problem solved. The problem is since the next ham holiday is Easter, I don't think the ham can stay on the countertop for much longer without me getting a really bad case of "fapeworms." And Christmas is way too far away—a fugeaboutit! Come December, this thing is liable to be leather.

But in case you never hear from me again, just assume I ate the entire ham in one sitting. Heck, maybe with some green eggs, too. After all, I do so like green eggs and ham! Thank you! Thank you, Sam the Ham.

Children's book sales fund scholarship

SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — The Prestonsburg Food City has, like others in the grocery chain, participated in selling a children's book that has now afforded the chain to offer nearly $1,000 scholarship from the proceeds.

Throughout the 2010 holiday season, area Food City supermarkets once again featured the sale of a special children's book, The Santa Train Tradition, by Leigh Anne W. Hoover and illustrated by Carol Bates Murray.

The popular book made its debut during the 2008 Christmas season in Food City locations along the 110-mile route, which includes Prestonsburg. In 2009, the book was reprinted with a new green cover and again offered for sale in 2010 at a retail of $11.99 in area Food City locations. The original red cover is now a limited edition. The book tells the story of seven-year-old Ben Massey and his annual family tradition of walking to meet the Santa Train on the chilly Saturday morning before Thanksgiving. "Capturing the essence of this renowned, Appalachian Christmas tradition in a children's book has been my privilege and my pleasure," said Hoover. "I hope that The Santa Train Tradition will become a treasured holiday keepsake for many families."

Earlier this week, Food City representatives presented a check for the proceeds, which totaled $900 to officials with the Kingsport Chamber Foundation to benefit the Santa Train Scholarship. Food City has donated in excess of $10,000 to the Santa Train Scholarship in the past three years through the sale of the book in participating stores. "Food City is a locally owned and operated company. We live, work and educate our children in the areas where we operate. We're proud to have continued this opportunity to aid in the support of such a great tradition that benefits so many of our area children," said Steven C. Smith, Food City president and chief operating officer.

Each year a high school senior along the 110-mile route of the Santa Train is awarded a $5,000 college scholarship.

Each year the train makes the journey along the grocery chain's locations providing over 15 tons of toys, food and gifts which are distributed throughout Kentucky, as well as Virginia and Tennessee.

House votes 48-46 to create task force to study PSC issues

FRANKFORT — A legislative task force would study alternative ways to select members of the Public Service Commission and other factors involved in utility rate increases approved by the PSC under changes to a Senate bill passed Wednesday by the House.

Senate Bill 151, sponsored by Sen. Ray Jones, D-Pikeville, as amended passed the House 48-46 and now returns to the Senate for consideration.

"Eastern Kentuckians have had two power bill increases in four years," said Rep. Keith Hall, D-Phelps, who presented SB 151 on the House floor. Hall said the increases "don't pass the smell test."

Rep. Fitz Steele, D-Hazard, said the PSC needs to be more representative of the ratepayers, many of whom struggle to pay high energy bills.

"The people who live in this Commonwealth should have a say on what goes on in this Commonwealth," Steele said.

The task force sought by the House would include three members of the House, three members of the Senate and the House and Senate co-chairs of the Special Subcommittee on Energy. The panel would be required to report its findings to the Legislative Research Commission by Dec. 15.

House Minority Floor Leader Jeff Hoover, R-Jamestown, said the task force should be more inclusive. Having members of citizens' groups like the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce on the task force, as well as lawmakers, he said, would create inclusiveness. Hall said he would be amenable to expanding the task force.

Issues that would be studied by the task force would include finding ways to increase citizen input into the ratemaking process, protections for vulnerable ratepayers, cost of capital and access to capital by utilities, and whether municipal utilities should be regulated by the PSC.

SB 151 as passed by the Senate, would have made the PSC an elected rather than appointed commission and expanded the panel from three to seven members.

The PSC is the state body responsible for regulating utility and approving utility rate increases in the Commonwealth.

Hinton selected All-MSC for third time

Conley honored as Freshman of the Year

TIMES STAFF REPORT

FRANKFORT — A Pikeville College Bear was named to the all-conference team for the third consecutive season and another was named the league's top freshman at the women's basketball banquet Wednesday night.

Senior Natiera Hinton was named to the 10-player All-Mid-South Conference team, an honor she has received three straight seasons. Junior Megan Mosley was named honorable-mention all-league as well.

Brogan Conley, a product of Johnson Central High School, was named the league's Freshman of the Year. And four women's basketball players were named to the academic all-conference team.

The honors were selected in a vote of the league's coaches and announced at the banquet, held on the eve of the quarterfinal round of the conference tournament, to be played at the Frankfort Convention Center. Hinton, a 6-0 forward from Rock Hill, S.C., averaged 18.1 points and 8.1 rebounds per game this season. She was third in the league in blocked shots, averaging 1.22 per game, fourth in steals with an average of 2.63 and finished fifth in both shooting, hitting 48.4 percent from the field.

Tourney time brings out very best

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Here are some odds and ends from the first three nights of 15th Region action. Again, we thank a host of Sports Guys who provided help, particularly on Wednesday when I was in Frankfort for the Mid-South Conference tournament.

Now, let's get started: — OK, here's the way it's looking right now, after one night in the 15th Region boys' tournament.

Call me what you want, but in this wild basketball season I wouldn't be surprised if Hobo McCoy leads Pike Central to the title.

This kid is crazy hot right now. On Wednesday, he scored 42 in Pike Central's 63-58 win. He was 7-of-15 from the arc the center after he scored 17 points in the final two minutes to finish with 41 and lead Pike Central to the improbable comeback and 60th District title.

Sometimes in basketball, one player can get it done. I think he has enough talent around him to make it possible. If the kid can score 17 points in two minutes, anything is possible in this region.

I know Betsy Layne is the favorite. Pikeville has what it takes, and Shelby Valley just won't die. But if Hobo McCoy cuts down the nets on Tuesday night, I'll be the least shocked surprised person at the Expo Center.

Before I move away from this game, South Floyd's Shannon Turner scored 26 in his team's final game. Pretty nice way for the senior to go out.

The stars shined brightly in Tuesday night's opener when Shelby Valley beat Belfry 56-43. And another one may have announced her presence with authority.

While Belfry senior J.J. Bevins tried her best to keep her team alive — pouring in 30 of her team's points — and Pikeville College signee Brooke Coleman tossed in 20 and pulled down seven rebounds, it was a sophomore standing in the middle of the floor when the player

SPORTS EDITOR

BETSY LAYNE — Betsy Layne High School head coach William Newsome Jr.

(Junior Newsome) has been named the 2010-11 15th Region Coach of the Year. Newsome will also be inducted into the KABC Coaches Court of Honor.

Betsy Layne senior guard/forward Nathan Martin was runner-up in voting for the 15th Region Player of the Year boys' basketball award.

Earlier in the season,

Martin led Betsy Layne to the All "A" Classic state championship.

Lady Cat Taylor Hott was runner-up for the Girls' 15th Region Player of the Year award. The leading scorer for the Betsy Layne girls' basketball team, Hott has signed to play for neighboring Alice Lloyd College.

Both Martin and Hott will compete in upcoming

All-Star games. Hott will play in an All-Star game on March 13 at Warren Central High School.

Martin will be in action in an All-Star game on March 20 at Transylvania University.

The All-Star games will be held in conjunction with the KHSAA Sweet Sixteen boys' and girls' basketball tournaments.

Betsy Layne advances to semis

Sheldon Clark ousts P'burg

PIKEVILLE — Both Betsy Layne and Sheldon Clark advanced out of the opening round of the 15th Region Girls' Basketball Tournament at the East Kentucky Expo Center. The two longtime 15th Region powerhouses prevailed when the tournament opened earlier in the week at the Pikeville venue.

In the tournament's first game, reigning 58th District champion Betsy Layne pulled away and defeated rival Pike County Central 43-25.

The Taylor Hott-led Betsy Layne Ladycats fended off more than one like County Central challenge on their way to the win.

Betsy Layne moved to 19-8 after netting the victory.

In the nightcap Monday,

Magoffin County outlasted East Ridge 60-54. The Lady Hornets entered the regional tournament as the runner-up out of the 58th District.

In opening round matchups played Tuesday night it was Shelby Valley 56, Belfry 43 and Sheldon Clark 73, Prestonsburg 36.

Katelyn Newsome netted a game-high 21 points and Carla Booth contributed 18 as Sheldon Clark (22-8) shook Prestonsburg 73-36 in the postseason contest.

Cassie Burchett / led Prestonsburg with 14 points and eight rebounds. Alexis DeRossett added six points for the Lady Blackcats.

Prestonsburg exited the 2010-11 season 13-17.

The semifinals are set for tonight: Betsy Layne-Magoffin County, 6:30 p.m.; Shelby Valley-Sheldon Clark, 8:15 p.m.

The winners from the semifinals will meet in the 15th Region championship game on Saturday. Tip-off for the regional title game is set for 7 p.m.

Pike Central ousts Raiders

SPORTS EDITOR

PIKEVILLE — Senior guard Hobo McCoy poured in a game-high 42 points as Pike County Central defeated 58th District runner-up South Floyd 63-58 Wednesday night in the opening round of the 15th Region Boys' Basketball Tournament at the East Kentucky Expo Center.

South Floyd ended the 2010-11 season 15-11.

McCoy, strong from start to finish, drained seven three-pointers.

The two teams swapped leads numerous times. Pike County Central gained an early advantage, outscoring South Floyd 16-10 during the opening quarter. But after the successful start, Pike County Central allowed South Floyd to score nearly 20 points in the second quarter. The Hawks, however, hung on to lead 32-28 at halftime.

The Raiders managed to move out in front of Pike County Central in the third quarter, outscoring the Hawks 15-10. Leading 43-42 at the start of the fourth quarter, South Floyd came up empty on several trips down the floor as Pike County Central concluded the con-

East Jessamine golfer signs with Bears

Coach Nelson Scott lands Central Kentucky standout

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — A senior who has played high school golf for seven years has signed a scholarship agreement to play at Pikeville College.

Coach Nelson Scott has signed Hillary Harkins, a senior at East Jessamine High School in Nicholasville.

Harkins began playing golf at age seven and joined her high school team in the sixth grade. In addition to golf, she also plays on the tennis team at East Jessamine.

Harkins, who plans to be a veterinarian, is active in many clubs at East Jessamine, including FCA, DECA and NHS.

Lady Eagles fall in KIAC championship game

Alice Lloyd was picked to finish seventh in preseason

by STEVE LEMASTER SPORTS EDITOR

NEW ALBANY, Ind. — Indiana University Southeast defeated Alice Lloyd College 72-58 Saturday night in the KIAC women's basketball tournament championship game. Alice Lloyd concluded the 2010-11 season 15-15. Ashmore Woods paced IU-Southeast with 25 points and six rebounds...

Alice Lloyd endured a rough start, facing double-digit deficits during the opening half. "We were prepared for this game," Alice Lloyd Coach John Mills commented. "We opened up in a zone because of their quickness. Unfortunately, IU penetrated our zone and was able to stick some early shots. It was simply a combination of them getting to the goal and hitting shots off their penetration, and our inability to take care of ball. We committed five turnovers in the first two-and-a-half minutes of the game, which is totally out of character for us. I believe our nerves showed early..."

total of 72 points in the three tournament games. Gray (Manchester) pulled down a team-high six rebounds in the season-ending setback. Ariel Nickell (Claiborne, Tenn.) also reached double figures, adding 11 points for the Lady Eagles. Despite falling in the championship game, Mills was pleased with his team's season as a whole. "We had a good season overall and made a great run in the conference," Mills commented. "I believe our challenging non-conference schedule did prepare us for the tournament. When you consider that these ladies were picked by the league's coaches in the preseason to be seventh out of eight schools, to see them finish tied for second and be runner-up in the KIAC tournament speaks volumes about their work ethic and determination..."

Pikeville signs Chattanooga native to softball deal

TIMES STAFF REPORT PIKEVILLE — The latest signee for Pikeville College is a pitcher from Chattanooga. Courtney Patrick, a senior at Grace Baptist Academy, has signed to play softball for the Bears next season. Patrick posted a 5-4 record as a junior with a 2.25 earned-run average. She threw 90.1 innings, striking out 34 and allowing opponents to hit only .269. "Pitching is something you can never have enough of, and we like what we've seen in Courtney," said Coach Robert Staggs, softball coach and athletics director at Pikeville College. "She brings a lot to the table and we look forward to her arrival on campus in the fall."

PC cheerleaders finish third in conference competition

TIMES STAFF REPORT FRANKFORT — The Pikeville College cheerleaders repeated their third-place performance in the Mid-South Conference cheer competition on Wednesday night. The competition is held annually the night before the conference basketball tournament begins. Tonight, it was in the Frankfort Convention Center. Pikeville had two players on the 12-person all-conference team and four others who were named academic all-conference. Pikeville finished third behind champion University of the Cumberlands and runner-up Campbellsville University. The Mid-South Conference is the only league in the country on any level that gives President's Cup points for cheerleading. Seniors Leah Harris and Brittany Moore were named all-conference. Both are two sport athletes. Harris plays volleyball while Moore is a soccer player in addition to their time as cheerleaders. Harris was one of four Bears to be named to the all-conference squad. Student-athletes must have a 3.25 grade-point average and be at least a sophomore to qualify for this honor. The senior from Whitesburg majors in psychology. She was joined by seniors Kayla Hutton, an elementary education major from Stamping Ground; Corey Huston, a Business Administration major who is emphasizing both management and accounting from

Flatwoods; and sophomore Ashlee Looney, a native of Grundy, Va., who majors in political science. Leah Harris and Brittany Moore

by TOM DOTY
 TIMES COLUMNIST

A thief makes his last stand at an amusement during the off-season, in this gritty crime thriller that should have been so much better, but settles for adequate.

The story begins on an arresting note, with a getaway driver taking time out of his schedule to court a young lady he meets on the road. She turns out to be a psycho who freaks out and shoots him when he won't reveal his full name.

Besides being bad news for the driver, it is also a problem for a guy named Stone. He has put a lot of time into planning a heist that is now in jeopardy. He ignores his better judgment and enlists a new driver. The guy is green and a bit young, but Stone appears to be a gambling man.

The job goes off well, at first. It's also a well-executed sequence that finds our crew breaking into an armored car by blowing it off the road. A steep incline does the rest, ripping the vehicle open as it plunges down a steep hill. The crew has to race after it, but the money is easy enough to get.

The new driver decides to execute some fancy maneuvers on the getaway trail, but it is apparent that he's no Steve McQueen, as he loses control and runs an innocent vehicle off the road.

Stone goes ballistic when he observes the crumpled form of a young lady in the wreckage. He proceeds to throttle the driver, but his troubles are just beginning.

The girl's dad is a powerful businessman and he hires a ruthless killer to get his revenge. The killer is straight out of a 1980s horror movie and prefers to stay in shadow while killing all of his victims in inventive ways.

Stone manages to survive getting shot in the back and decides it is time to get out of dodge.

Stone winds up in England, where his friend Terry has taken over an amusement park while hiding out from some gangsters. Their reunion is short-lived, however, when gangsters and the killer, who is after Stone manage to track the pair to the park, which transforms into the titular location.

The finale is well staged and makes great use of the junk you typically find at an amusement park but it is over too quickly.

The main problem here is that the producers got their hands on a marvelous novel and then deviated as far away from the text as possible. The film comes from Richard Stark's book of the same name. It was one of his "Parker" novels, written during the 1960s. Each one of these books was a lean gut punch of a story. The hero was a hard-as-nails type who embodied the philosophy that one should have no attachments and always be on the lookout for a double cross.

Here, Parker becomes Stone, but, ironically, they soften the character. The result is terrible. It makes for an okay film but it would have been a magnificent one had they read the book.

Despite how cinematic these novels are, they have been botched plenty of times. Mel Gibson also softened the character for "Payback" though the director's cut (available on DVD) corrects the problem.

Jenny Wiley hosting 'Appalachian Roadkill Supper' on Saturday

by JARRID DEATON
 FEATURES WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — "Roadkill" will be the specialty on the menu at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park this Saturday, and the Appalachian cuisine will include items such as Bumper Tenderized Baked Quail, US 23 Walking Fried Catfish, Hop No More Frog Legs, Wheelin' Squealin' Wild Boar BBQ and '65 Pick-em Up Truck Buffalo Chili.

The meal will also feature a variety of vegetables, desserts and breads, and the price includes beverages.

"Come on over and join us for lip smacking, finger licking, knee slapping, belly pleasing time," said Trinity Shepherd, with Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

The serving time for the Appalachian Roadkill Supper is 4 p.m. until 8 p.m. The cost for adults is $17.95 plus tax, and children from ages 6-12 can eat for $8.95 plus tax. Children under the age of 5 can eat for free.

For more information about the Appalachian Road Kill Supper, contact Jenny Wiley State Park at (606) 889-1790.

Sophomores and Juniors at Allen Central High School listen as Todd Allen, a representative of Monster.com, talks about preparing for college.

FUTURE PLANNING

Students learn how to make college count

by JARRID DEATON
 FEATURES WRITER

EASTERN — A "monster" came to Allen Central High School late last month to help students prepare for college.

Todd Allen, a representative of Monster.com, engaged sophomores and juniors with a presentation titled "Making College Count" on Feb. 18. Allen talked to students about FAFSA and scholarships, and also about life situations and how to be prepared by having a college education.

"I am glad to have a checklist for the things I need to complete during my senior year to be ready for college," said Kendra Perry, a junior at Allen Central High School.

Heather Hall, also a student at Allen Centrl, said she will strive for a higher GPA after the presentation.

"I found it interesting how he pointed out that, while 'C's' do get degrees, a better GPA shows that you have truly worked hard," Hall said.

Katie Vanderpool, also a junior, was surprised to learn about the cost of a higher education.

"It has been an eye-opener to find out how much college costs and how important KEEES money and other scholarships are in assisting with that cost," Vanderpool said.

According to information provided by Monster, "Making It

Count is an educational organization in the business of improving lives. We educate, motivate and empower students and professionals, young and old, employed and unemployed through live, in-person and online presentations, online tools and printed resources. We strive to provide the information needed to achieve academic and career success."

DINNER DIVA

Dinners with boneless chicken breasts

The great thing about boneless skinless chicken breasts for the cook is they are like a blank canvas—the creativity and ideas to take this poultry to the next level is endless! Chicken takes on the flavors of the spices and ingredients accompanying it, making it amazingly versatile.

Besides being extremely convenient, boneless chicken breasts don't even need to be thawed before cooking (most of the time anyway) and are great way to get your clean, lean protein.

Bon appetite and enjoy all these great new recipes, all using chicken and a delicious fruit salsa!

Chicken Tacos with Fruit Salsa

The Salsa
 1 cup cubed fresh pineapple (or use frozen)
 4 nectarines, pitted and chopped (or use frozen peaches)
 2 mangos, peeled and chopped (or use frozen)
 2 large tomatoes, chopped finely
 1/2 cup diced red onion
 2 limes, juiced (use only juice)

2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
 1/4 teaspoon sea salt
 1/2 teaspoon ground cracked black pepper

1 small jalapeno pepper, seeded and chopped finely
 Combine all ingredients in a bowl tossing gently. May store in fridge for up to 24 hours before serving. You may also process, prior to chopping, in a food processor to desired consistency.

Family Medicine

Martha A. Simpson, D.O., M.B.A.
Associate Professor of Family Medicine

Question: Can you tell me about Niacin? Some people use it for raising their good cholesterol, and I have also heard it can prevent Alzheimer's. Is this correct? Are there other uses?

Answer: Niacin is a naturally occurring B vitamin, commonly referred to as B3. Like all of the B vitamins

(there are eight), niacin helps to improve metabolism, keeps the nervous system functioning properly, and is essential for keeping the skin, eyes, hair, and digestive tract—especially the liver—healthy. It also plays an important role in manufacturing hormones, improving circulation and lowering blood cholesterol levels. Niacin is found naturally in many foods, such as dairy products, lean meat, poultry and fish, eggs, green vegetables and nuts. It is also found in yeast, breads and cereal grains. Vitamin B3 deficiency is very rare in the United States, but it does occur. Alcoholism is the most frequent cause of B3 deficiency in the U.S. If the deficiency is severe, it causes a disease called Pellagra, with symptoms of skin disease, diarrhea, dementia and depression.

Because vitamin B3 is a water soluble vitamin, it is not stored in the body. It passes through the kidneys and is excreted in urine, so it must be replenished regularly. Most people do not need a B3 supplement; in fact, it can be toxic in high doses, causing damage to the liver and vision, increased blood sugar levels, and recurrence of pre-existing gout.

Niacin has been widely used in the last 50 years to lower the low density lipoprotein, or bad cholesterol, as well as triglycerides. It also raises the high density lipoprotein, or good cholesterol. Because of its beneficial effects on cholesterol, Niacin has been incorporated into several prescription medications.

It is also believed that niacin's affect on cholesterol has secondary benefits, such as reducing the risk of atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and in reducing the risk of a second heart attack.

As for Alzheimer's disease prevention, some studies have shown that people who have diets high in niacin may be at a lower risk for Alzheimer's, but no studies have been done to see if niacin supplements make any difference.

If you have Type 2 diabetes, you need to be careful with niacin supplements because they've been shown to raise blood sugar, so close sugar monitoring is important if you are diabetic and take niacin. Also niacin should not be taken if you have gout.

A common side effect of niacin is facial flushing. This can be reduced by taking a regular strength adult aspirin about 30 minutes before taking the niacin.

Niacin does interact with many medications so please check with your physician before you start taking any niacin supplement.

A little oil in your gas is usually no big deal

by TOM and RAY
MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
My husband and I had to go out of town for work for a few weeks, so we left our 14-year-old daughter with an 18-year-old girlfriend of hers whom we trust(ed). Well, the 18-year-old brought over her boyfriend, "Einstein," without our knowledge. There was a strict no-boys policy from us, and many "Don't worry" from the two girls. They decided to try to start our Ford E250 V-8 three-quarter-ton Econoline van, which has a dead external fuel pump. Not knowing that, and seeing that the gas gauge read "Empty" (since it doesn't work either), they apparently assumed that it was out of gas. So Einstein took all the gas cans in the garage and dumped them into the van's gas tank. Living in northern Michigan, we use a variety of somewhat ancient tools, including lawn mowers, chain saws, snowblowers, etc. All of them use gas that is mixed with oil.

Now we are wondering what to do. When we replace the fuel pump, do we just top off the tank and drive? Or will the gasoline mixed with oil damage the engine? This van has two tanks, and we have yet to talk with Einstein or said girlfriend, because they have the fear of God in them and have yet to step foot in the house since we've been back. So Einstein may have put the gas-and-oil mixture in both tanks. Please feel free to laugh boisterously on our behalf, as long as you tell us whether we can drive the van. Thanks! — Theresa fine. Theresa.

TOM: We HAVE had a good laugh, but you'll be

RAY: When you mix oil into gasoline for a two-cycle engine, it's usually in the ratio of something like 40-to-1 or 50-to-1, a small amount of oil in that gas to begin with.

TOM: And I doubt there was enough fuel in those gas cans to fill up both of your van's tanks. I mean, even if Einstein poured 10 gallons of gas in there, the capacity is probably 30 gallons. So you'll be able to dilute the oil even further with fresh gasoline.

RAY: And of course he poured it into both tanks. Pouring it into the first tank didn't get the van started (and I'm sure they were late getting to Burning Man for the week), so he tried pouring some in the other tank.

TOM: Diluting the mixture is exactly what you should do. But even if you don't, it won't harm the engine. The oil will burn in the cylinders, so you'll get some bluish-gray smoke coming out the tailpipe.

RAY: — like every one of the heaps my brother has ever owned.

TOM: Yeah. But in your case, once the oil in the gas tank is gone, the smoke will disappear. And no permanent damage will be done.

RAY: Except to your daughter's social life — which I'm sure will be severely curtailed from here on in.

Her dog isn't a junkie — he's car sick

Dear Tom and Ray:
My dog is addicted to getting his lips on the air ducts on the dash of my car. He licks the vents feverishly, and he drools as a result. I told a friend that I think my dog is a Freon junkie. I think the dog is getting a boost of energy from the Freon by licking the air vent. My friend says, "No way." He says that Freon would not be coming out of the vents. This is a daily occurrence, as I take him across the highway to the soccer field to run. Do you think there is any Freon coming through the air vents? — Vera

RAY: No. I think the poor little guy is car sick.

TOM: Yeah. Dogs often drool when they're nauseous. Or when you dangle a pork chop in front of them. But since there are no pork chops in the vicinity, I think it's a warning sign that your puppy's stomach contents are considering a return engagement, Vera.

RAY: He's probably just trying to get the coolest, freshest air possible in hopes of trying to keep his kibble down until he gets to the soccer field.

TOM: So you can try driving a little slower or smoother. Or if the issue isn't you (like people, some dogs are more sensitive to certain drivers or certain cars), you should check with your veterinarian and get Fido the canine equivalent of Dramamine. Don't give him any human medicines, because the results could be disastrous.

RAY: Even more disastrous than cleaning dog barf off your velour upholstery. Good luck, Vera.

Rental Central

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

One Oscar hopeful and three fun genre flicks made for entertainment of every stripe for renters this week.

■ "127 Hours" — The classic film of the bunch is definitely Danny Boyle's ("Slumdog Millionaire") film about a guy who faces a terrible choice when he becomes trapped in a crevasse with his right arm trapped under a ledge. The film is a true story and benefits from the solo acting by James Franco. He's very good here and has to engage the audience for most of the running time. I won't give away the ending, but even horror fans may flinch at his ultimate solution.

■ "Burlesque" — If you are one of those folks who likes a formulaic dance drama, then this "Flashdance" sort of flick is just for you. Christina Aguiera makes her acting debut as a young lowan who yearns to dance. She gets her wish at a smoky nightclub run by Cher. There are, of course, plenty of obstacles to happiness, including a predatory customer and a plot to close the club. Goofy but the numbers are pretty good and Cher continues to defy aging with aid of modern medicine.

■ "Faster" — Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson finally returns to gritty adult-oriented adventure with this lean thriller. He plays a convict who gets out of jail and sets out on a down and dirty mission to kill a lot of guys. Each death brings us closer to why he's doing it, while two detectives (Billy Bob Thornton and Carla Gugino) dog his trail. Excellent action that feels like a companion piece to Walter Hill's "The Driver."

■ "Dr. Black, Mr. Hyde

— 35th Anniversary Edition" — This horror flick was almost as good as "Blacula," and 10 times better than "Blackenstein." It stars Bernie Casey as a doctor with a lot on his plate. He runs a free clinic in Watts, just after the riots leveled the area, and spends his spare time looking for a cure to liver disease. He concocts a serum to reverse liver damage but gets all mad scientist when he opts to try it on himself. The side-effects wreak havoc with his schedule. Turns out that being a hulking wench-faced killer doesn't mesh with his other responsibilities. Fun, low-budget nonsense. Has it really been 35 years? Nice to finally fill that hole in your DVD library.

Next week, look for the DVD debut of zombies with class, when AMC trots out "The Walking Dead."

Lagoon

Robert Duvall did a decent version of "The Outfit" in the 1970s. That film is available from the "Warner Brothers" Archive Collection. Hopefully someone will start filming this series as it was written, but don't hold your breath. In the meantime, check out the books and you'll feel like you've just read the best movies never made. Best line: "One wrong move, and we'll collect your face in a bucket." 1983, rated R.

The Tacos
4 large boneless skinless chicken breast halves, cut into bite sized pieces
1 cup lemonade
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 1/2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 clove garlic, peeled, smashed
2 green onions, chopped finely, including green part
1 (12 ounce) package corn tortillas
1 container Greek yogurt (use like sour cream)
In a large skillet over medium high, heat oil until hot, then add onion and garlic and cook until onion is clear. Add chicken, cooking until outside of chicken is white and center is almost done. Now add the rest of the ingredients, cover, turn down and simmer until chicken is no longer pink and juices run clear. Wait about 15 more minutes. Remove lid to cook down liquid if necessary. While cooking the chicken, warm the tortillas in the oven until soft. Once chicken is cooked transfer to serving bowl, place chicken mixture into tortillas, wrap. Add yogurt and Fruit Salsa as desired.

Variations: Use lettuce greens of your choice, pita halves for the shells. Put all ingredients out and let each person make their own. You can also use a good salad. Romaine lettuce leaves in lieu of the tortillas for a truly low carb meal.

Grilled Chicken with Fruit Salsa
Serves 6
Fruit Salsa (from above)
6 skinless, boneless chicken breasts halves
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon cracked black pepper, grated
1 tablespoon fresh ginger
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup lemon juice
Combine juice, soy sauce, ginger, pepper, and garlic in a plastic bag or bowl with a good seal. Place the chicken inside, seal and shake to coat, marinate for at least one hour, but no more than four, turning each 30 minutes or so.

Chicken Taco Salad
1 head lettuce of choice, shredded, (not Iceberg; no nutrition)
1 cup feta cheese, crumbled
1 green bell pepper, chopped
1 red bell pepper, chopped
2 cups tortilla chips, crushed
Grilled Chicken, cut into cubes
Fruit Salsa
Greek yogurt
In a large bowl mix all in ingredients except, Greek Yogurt, separate into four to six servings, and top with a dollop of Greek yogurt.
