Our View

Fill their bellies, feed their minds

We were under the impression that the county had received a bit of good news a couple of weeks back, when we saw that the Floyd County School System had been approved for a new federal program that would provide free breakfast and lunch to every student. It never occurred to us the school board might reject the offer.

Unfortunately, that appears to be a very distinct possibility.

During a board meeting earlier this week, school officials appeared quite hesitant about accepting the offer, worrying about the difficulties of scheduling another mealtime during the school day, or that not enough students would participate to make the program worthwhile.

However, we believe that any problems the school system could face in implementing the plan would be far outweighed by the benefits.

In neighboring Pike County, where the school system has already signed on to the program, officials expect to reap many rewards by providing two meals a day to all students. Among the benefits expected are better attendance, more productive work in the classroom and fewer discipline problems.

Those are exactly the reasons Floyd County should follow suit. It's not hard to see that children are better able to learn when the tummies aren't grumbling.

And the fact is, quite a few children are doing without. While the poorest families are protected by federal free and reduced-price lunch programs, there are other families on the wrong side of the cutoff, who make too much to qualify for assistance, but too little to make the cost of full-price school meals easy to manage. This is especially true in the current economic climate, when wages are stagnant and the price of everything continues to climb.

School officials would be well served to follow Pike County's example, and we urge those who would like to see this program in Floyd County to contact either their individual board members or the board of education's central office at (606) 886-2354 to register their support. But you must act quickly. A final decision on whether Floyd County will participate could come as soon as today.

Beyond the Beltway

Injustice Department

by DONALD KAUL
 OtherWords

It isn't so much that I'm against balancing the budget. It's that I think firing public employees is a lousy way to create jobs. I'll say this for that strategy though: it beats throwing grandma from the train, which is the other big budget-cutting plan Republicans have in store for us.

If you insist on getting rid of some dead weight in the federal budget, however, this is the way to do it: Cut the Justice Department's budget.

Recent events show that the department has more money than it needs and way too much time on its hands.

It's bad enough that they've spent an estimated $6 million proving that Barry Bonds was evasive about his steroid use to a federal grand jury once upon a time.

Think about that. They couldn't prove that he'd actually lied about it, just that he was evasive. Bad Barry. Go in the corner and write "I will not be evasive" 100 times on the blackboard.

Goodbye, 6 million dollars. Now they have attempted to prosecute Roger Clemens, another baseball legend, for lying to Congress about his alleged steroid use.

Lying to Congress! I didn't know that was a crime. I thought Congress was a no-fault zone when it came to lying. If Mitch McConnell were held accountable for every time he lied in the halls of Congress, he'd be serving five consecutive life sentences by now.

I don't know how much the Clemens trial, investigation, and so forth will cost. U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton declared a mistrial on July 14, and it's not clear whether prosecutors can try again.

Even worse, there are reports of our Feds meeting with French officials to see if they can nail seven-time Tour de France champion Lance Armstrong for using steroids and lying about it.

That tops the Bonds fiasco: The government going after an authentic American hero — one who survived the direst of cancers — because he may have cheated in a bicycle race. In France.

What's next, a federal strike force aimed at cleaning up professional wrestling in Bulgaria?

This has got to stop. I don't condone steroid use or any other performance-enhancing drug. I take my drugs on the rocks and they don't enhance performance. The ice cubes simply make my drinks more enjoyable.

But come on. Using drugs to help you play a game better isn't the equivalent of selling crack cocaine to a teenager. Athletes have always tried to "enhance" their performance by means fair or foul. Do you think all those football players got to weigh 300 or 350 pounds eating Cheerios? Ever hear of "greenies," the stimulants of choice for baseball players of the 1970s and 1980s? There are even rumors that Tiger Woods might have bulked up with steroids or human growth hormones. And he's a golfer, for crying out loud.

And the dirty little secret we share is that almost all of us would do as athletes do if we had the chance.

Oh you wouldn't? Suppose you're an accountant earning in the high four figures at a big corporation and a guy wearing a cape with a red silk lining walks up and offers you a pill that will turn you into another Bill Gates. Would you take it, even though it would give you an unfair competitive advantage over the other accountants in the shop?

You bet your sweet patootie you would. Unfair advantage is what capitalism is all about.

Are performance-enhancing drugs bad for you? I'm sure they are. So make them illegal and match the penalty to the crime. But don't spend millions trying to catch athletes exercising their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

And don't forget to cut the Justice Department's budget. It might focus the lawyers there more seriously on the Wall Street bigwigs who stole billions from us.

The Usual Eccentric

Is there a light at the end of the tunnel?

by WILL E. SANDERS

In the immediate aftermath of the power outage, I learned I don't own nearly enough candles. Nor do I have enough batteries that can be used to power flashlights, which can be especially important as you scour your home in the dark searching for candles you do not possess.

Somewhere around the start of the second hour, I had successfully fought off the urge to read a book or, through force, spend time with my family. By the third hour, though, alone in the dark without Facebook, Twitter and other ego-feeding forms of social networking, I briefly considered suicide.

Then the heavy hand of reality set in. Professional wrestling started in one hour, and with no useable huge-screen television to watch it on or DVR to record it with, things appeared bleak. The time for fake wrestling came and went; my thoughts again drifted back to suicide.

Contrary to traditional safety standards, it is perfectly fine to jam a metal fork into a power outlet during a power outage.

Four hours before, I had been carving up pixelated mayhem on my PlayStation 3 instead of paying attention to open Microsoft Word documents that needed to be saved. I am a notorious non-saver; I have no other excuse. It is for this reason and this reason alone you are not reading a nearly completed column about why — and how much — I hate spiders. It was a poor choice of topic, I freely admit that now through retrospect, but the jokes were even worse.

For example, this one: I can't stand spiders because I have a general intolerance for anything that requires a sticky web in order to make friends, and that includes my ex-wife.

Not to mention, the power outage totally put the kibosh on making a BLT. I mean, I could have made an LT sandwich, but where is the use in that? Lacking the modern-day amenities to cook even Hot Pockets with, I was reduced to consuming the largest all bologna sandwich this side of a "Garfield" comic strip. For safe measure, I drank all of the beer in the fridge, fearing alcohol spoilage (if there is such a thing).

Inevitably, someone whom a normal person goes to great pain to avoid in social situations will cite global warming as the cause of the storm that spawned the outage. But that's mostly because it's the commonplace, knee-jerk thing to say these days. Somewhere over the years, the terms "global warming" and "bad weather" became synonymous with each other. I assure you, bad weather has been transpiring since the dawn of time.

Instead, I blame something a little more rational, Midwestern weather. In Ohio, the weather can be quite hormonal, as my girlfriend, Christine, puts it. One minute your holiday barbecue, pool party or whatever you are into is in full effect and the next minute the rain is coming at you sideways as a tornado rips off your roof and lava begins flowing all over the lawn, which is amazing because there aren't even volcanoes in Ohio.

After a while, I ventured outside to see whether all of my other-neighbors had their power. This is a normal thing to do. As a person, I always know that nothing is that bad if everyone else has to put up with it, too. Heck, that's why none of the media attention Casey Anthony was receiving ever bothered me.

By the fifth hour, this survival instinct kicked in, but the sudden self-actualization that "What if things never return to normal again?" struck.

Like anybody else would in such a dire situation, I turned to the Big Feila upstairs. "Dear Lord, please bring back the power. I promise to never make fun of Casey Anthony again. Please, I beg of you, my mind has grown numb without Google, and the Popsicles in the freezer are beginning to thaw. And if the aquarium

14 miners killed on the job during first half of year

ARLINGTON, Va. — The U.S. Department of Labor's Mine Safety and Health Administration today released a midyear summary of mining deaths in the country. As of June 30, eight miners were killed in coal mining operations, and six in the metal and nonmetal sector.

"Even though the number of mining deaths for the first half of this year are at an all-time low, one mining death is still one too many," said Joseph A. Main, assistant secretary of labor for mine safety and health.

"Fatalities can be prevented," he added. "They are not an inevitable byproduct of mining. Effective health and safety programs, training of miners and proper workplace examinations can identify and eliminate the hazards that kill and injure miners. Mine operators are well aware they must take responsibility for the health and safety conditions in their mines to prevent these tragedies."

Of the eight coal mining deaths, three were a result of machinery accidents. Two miners died in rib collapse accidents, two miners were killed in powered haulage accidents and one miner was killed in a fall accident. Two of the eight fatalities involved contractors.

Of the six fatalities in metal and nonmetal mines, two miners died as a result of roof collapses. One miner was killed when he was struck by sliding material, one miner died in a machinery accident, one miner lost his life in a powered haulage accident and another miner was killed in a fall accident. Two of the fatalities involved contractors.

MSHA has taken a number of actions to identify mines with health and safety problems, and has initiated several outreach and enforcement initiatives including "Rules to Live By," a fatality prevention program spotlighting the safety and health standards most frequently cited during fatal accident investigations.

"We believe those actions, along with initiatives by the mining industry, have resulted in the improved safety record thus far this year," said Main. "No miners should have to die on the job just to earn a paycheck. MSHA is vigorously enforcing the Mine Act, and constantly

Slone set to coach college hoops in Cincinnati

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

CINCINNATI — Basketball has been a big part of Mike Slone's life. The sport is his passion. The Allen Central High School graduate is closing in on beginning his first season as an assistant coach on the college level. In August, Slone will begin a promising stint as an assistant coach with the Cincinnati Christian College men's basketball team. Cincinnati Christian College head coach Don Nelson Jr. hired Slone, Nelson, who is also the school's athletic director, had a previous history with the Eastern Kentucky native. Slone actually played under Nelson when he guided a semi-pro team. "I first met Coach (Don) Nelson when he was coach-

COMMENTARY

Rooting for Reds getting much harder

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

It's been a long, hot summer to this point, but it seems as if it's about to turn fall quickly for fans of the Cincinnati Reds.

Nothing makes the blazing heat and humidity of summer more tolerable than ice-cold lemonade, watermelon and your favorite baseball team being in the thick of things. Summer for me is just more exciting if the Reds are playing well, and while they're still only five or so back — or were heading into yesterday's merciful series finale with the Mets things certainly aren't going in the right direction.

I point to two stretches as the difference in the Reds really being in the mix and not, because honestly, when you're in fourth place in your division and are nowhere near the Wildcard possibility, you're not really in it. The first came earlier this month when the Reds closed in on the all-star break by dropping three of four in Milwaukee. Cincinnati gave away three one-run games to the Brew Crew there with the last two being blown saves by Francisco Cordero. Normally when you look at stretches like that you think "if we'd won half of those..." but honestly in this scenario the Reds should have won both of those games, giving them a three-game win streak heading into the four-day respite.

Instead, it was a two-game losing streak that did the worst kind of damage to your sense of morale. Your closer, the guy paid handsomely to take care of situations like that, could get neither job done after quietly questioning why he didn't make the all-star team, and that's a tough mentality to take into a four-day break.

The other is going on right now, or was at least heading into yesterday's finale. On Monday night Dusty Baker simply left his starter in one inning too long and gave one to the Mets.

That led to Tuesday night's game, the worst performance of the season for the Reds. Moments after finding out Jonny Gomes had been dealt to Washington, the Reds lethargically took the field and committed three uncharacteristic errors when the truth is it should have been five. They had no interest in playing after one of the spiritual leaders of the team had been swapped and got drilled.

Then on Wednesday, the Mets showed the Reds how you're supposed to handle

EKSC to hold annual Soccer-Rama at StoneCrest

Ten schools to field teams in preseason event

by STEVE LeMASTER

PRESTONSBURG — The Eastern Kentucky Soccer Conference will host its annual Soccer-Rama on Saturday, Aug. 6 on the soccer fields located at StoneCrest SportsPark. Soccer programs from 10 area high schools will be participating in the third annual event. In all, 320 soccer players are set to compete.

The event will be held in two sessions. The morning to early afternoon session will feature girls' high school girls' teams. The morning session will be 8:30 a.m.-1 p.m.. The late afternoon to evening session will feature boys' high school soccer teams. The afternoon session will start at 2:30 p.m. and last until 8 p.m.. The Soccer-Rama will use a unique format which allows a team to play against four opponents in four 20-minute quarters. Using this format allows teams an opportunity to compete against multiple defenses and offenses to help prepare for the upcoming season.

While this is a fundraiser for the Eastern Kentucky Soccer Conference there will be no entry fee to attend the Soccer-Rama. However, donations will be accepted at the gate. The funds from the event will help the conference fund programs for the its member teams. The EKSC will host its annual awards ceremony to recognize teams and individual accomplishments at the end of the high school season.

South Floyd senior quarterback Dakota Newsome ranked as one of the state's top high school football players during his senior season.

JUCO BOUND: Newsome headed to Alfred State

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

HI HAT — Former South Floyd High School quarterback Dakota Newsome has dreamed of playing Division One college football. Newsome, one of the top football players in South Floyd High School history, remains on track to play on the NCAA D-I level. This fall, Newsome will attend Alfred State College in Upstate New York. The former South Floyd signal-caller will join the University of Kentucky football program following the juno stint.

Newsome (6-2, 185) delivered 3,000 all-purpose yards and 33 touchdowns during his senior season for the Raiders. Numerous D-I football programs recruited Newsome as a wide receiver/defensive back. The University of Kentucky football program recruited Newsome as an "athlete" and he could ultimately line up at wide receiver for the Wildcats.

Scout ranked Newsome as one of Kentucky's Top-20 Seniors.

Alfred State College is a member of the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA). The Pioneers compete in Region III of the NJCAA, the Western New York Athletic Conference (WNYAC) and the Northeast Football Conference.

Pikeville inks jucos transfer Kenny Rhymes

by STEVE LeMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

PIKEVILLE — The University of Pikeville men's basketball program has announced the signing of 6-4 wing Kenny Rhymes, a transfer from Panola Junior College.

Rhymes originally committed to NCAA Division I program Chicago State University before ending up in junior college. The Chicago product averaged 11.7 points and 7.1 rebounds per game as a sophomore while shooting nearly 50-those situations. Star outfielder Carlos Beltran made a cameo in the clubhouse just to say goodbye before flying out to join the defending world champions, and the Mets missed him so badly they slapped the Reds around 8-2.

Several things are wrong with this edition of the Reds. We'll start with Baker's Achilles heel. This guy has shown time and again at nearly every stop of his managerial career that he simply can't handle pitching. I've said for three years that if he wants to continue managing the team he has to agree to allow the pitching coach to make all decisions concerning the mound.

In the last month alone the Reds have likely dropped six or more games where Dusty tried to get one more frame from the starters only to have it backfire. When you're five games out, those add up.

Another is the lack of mature leadership in the clubhouse. Last year the team got that from three sources - Bronson Arroyo, Scott Rolen and Gomes. Those guys just aren't getting it done this season.

Arroyo is now 7-9 with a 5.58 ERA. Rolen is in another stint on the disabled list but has hit only 242 in his 65 games, meaning he's missed roughly one of three this year. It's very hard to lead from the bench and before being dealt, Gomes' .211 batting average was 55 points below last season, which is the same number he was shy of last year's 86 RBIs.

Add that to the lack of production from a couple of more spot and you have trouble. The feeling was that what J. J. Ashby lacked offensively he would make up for in the field, but his nine errors helped get him sent to the minors. And coming into yesterday, outfield combination Drew Stubbs and Jay Bruce had combined for 230 strikeouts already this season.

Bruce was the NL player of the month for May but has 13 RBIs since. He's wildly popular amongst the fan base, here excluded, but his productivity has been, at best, lacking.

There have been some bright spots. Hurler Mike Leake has been solid since returning and Johnny Cueto has deserved better than he's gotten. Many members of the bullpen have pitched well by the overworked Logan Ondrusek, and you just can't say enough about Joey Votto.

Earlier this week, John Fay of the Cincinnati Enquirer blogged that it was time for the Reds to deal some veterans and give opportunities to more Triple-A players, primarily catcher

Devin Mesoraco. At this point, it's his hard to argue with that logic.

The Reds have more than one issue, and trading for a front-line pitcher at the cost of multiple prospects or Astro outfielder Hunter Pence won't solve the issues.

We've heard all along about the potential of the kids on the farm. We got Yonder Alonso to the big leagues this week, and I think everybody in baseball was impressed by shortstop Zack Cozart before his injury on Saturday.

Let's see what the likes of Mesoraco can do at this level. Maybe he'll bring an infusion of enthusiasm along the likes of Cozart. One thing's for sure.

The way they've played lately, the Reds couldn't do much worse.

Soccer

The Mountain Arts Center (MAC) will host the 2011 EKSC awards ceremony.

High school teams set to compete in the Soccer-Rama are Belfry, Johnson Central, Paintsville, Pikeville, Prestonsburg, Shelby Valley, Sheldon Clark, Lawrence County, Menifee County and Rose Hill Christian.

Belfry High School will provide concessions throughout the upcoming event.

UK adds six in 2011 Hall of Fame Class

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — Six University of Kentucky greats will be inducted into the UK Athletics Hall of Fame in late September. The 2011 class includes former UK student-athletes Jeff Abbott (baseball), Pam Browning (women's basketball), Ilkka Jantti (men's soccer), Cedric Kauffmann (men's tennis), Bill Ransdell (football) and former administrator Russell Rice.

The class will be formally inducted during the 2011 UK Homecoming Week, Sept. 23-24, in conjunction with the football game against Florida.

Jeff Abbott (1991-94) was a UK baseball All-American and a first-team All-Southeastern Conference selection in 1994 after setting single-season school records for batting average (.445), hits (102), home runs (23), total bases (203) and slugging (.886), all of which stand today. Abbott also holds the UK single-season on-base percentage mark of .533 set in 1992 and ranks in the top five in eight career offensive categories, including batting average, runs, hits, doubles, home runs, total bases, slugging percentage, walks and on-base percentage. UK won at least 30 games in each of his four years, including a then-school-record 41 wins in 1991. Abbott's class posted more wins in a four-year span than any other class in school history. He went on to play five seasons in the major leagues with the Chicago White Sox.

Pam Browning (1974-78) is one of only two players in UK women's basketball history to be named All-America by Street & Smith's annual publication (1977). She ranks fifth on UK's career scoring list with 1,598 points and she continues to hold the school record for highest scoring average in a season, averaging 25.5 points in 1976-77. As a member of the first women's basketball team at UK in the modern era, she led UK to its first two wins over ranked opponents in program history with victories over No. 2 Tennessee Tech and No. 18 Indiana during the 1976-77 campaign. Browning averaged 14.9 points during her four-year career.

Ilkka Jantti (1998-2001) was the first All-American in UK men's soccer history. The four-time NSCAA All-Region honoree was named the 2001 Mid-American Conference Player of the Year, the 1998 MAC Newcomer of the Year and earned All-MAC honors in all four years at UK. Jantti took Kentucky to three NCAA Tournament appearances and led UK to back-to-back MAC regular-season championships in 2000 and 2001, as well as MAC Tournament titles for three straight years from 1999-2001. In addition to being named to the All-Tournament team twice, Jantti was a first-team NSCAA/adidas Scholar All-American, a Verizon Academic All-American, a winner of a prestigious Postgraduate Scholarship and he was named to the conference academic honor roll three times.

Cedric Kauffmann (1995-98) was the first three-time All-American in singles play in Kentucky men's tennis history. Kauffmann went 150-54 during his four-year career at UK and finished in the top 10 in the country from 1996-98. He climbed as high as No. 2 in 1997. Kauffmann was a National Clay Court Singles Championship finalist in 1997 and a National Indoor Singles Championships semifinalist in 1996. He played on the ATP Tour after his time at Kentucky and reached as high as the world's No. 170 ranking. Kauffmann competed in the 2001 French Open and the 2000 United States Open, losing in a fifth-set tiebreaker at the 2001 French Open to tennis legend Pete Sampras. He was hired as the UK men's tennis assistant coach in 2005 and currently serves as the associate head coach.

Bill Ransdell (1983-86) is one of the top quarterbacks in UK history. He set Wildcat season records for most offensive plays, total offense, pass attempts, pass completions, passing yardage, completion percentage and consecutive passes without an interception. He held single-game UK records for total plays, pass attempts, completions and completion percentage and notched then-school career records for total offense (5,456 yards), total offensive plays (996), pass attempts (816), completions (460), passing yardage (5,564) and completion percentage (.575). Ransdell also helped lead the Wildcats to a 9-3 record and Hall of Fame Bowl victory in 1984 and went on to a two-year career in the NFL. He has been an analyst on UK TV network telecasts and also has served as president of the K-Association lettermen's group.

Russell Rice (1967-87) is a former UK Athletics administrator who was associated with UK Athletics for more than a half-century. Rice spent 20 years on the UK staff from 1967 to 1987, including 18 as a sports information director. He wrote several books chronicling the history of Wildcat men's basketball and football programs and served as media coordinator for several NCAA men's basketball tournaments hosted by UK. Rice was also a president of the SEC Sports Information Directors Association. For more than 20 years since his retirement from UK, Rice has written a weekly column for 'The Cats' Pause magazine and has been a historical resource for UK Athletics. A World War II veteran (U.S. Marines) and a UK graduate, Rice spent 16 years in the media after graduation, including five years as sports editor of the Lexington Leader, before joining the UK staff.

The UK Athletics Hall of Fame was started in 2005 to recognize and honor persons whose participation and contributions enriched and strengthened the university's athletic program. The charter class included 88 individuals who had previously had their jersey retired by UK.

Alfred State has finished 500 or above in five of the past 11 seasons. The Pioneers concluded the 2010 season 4-6 as 10 players were named All-Conference.

Under the guidance of former Magoffin County High School head coach Mick Caba, Alfred State plays an exciting brand of football. Newsome will play quarterback for the Pioneers. Caba has amassed a 49-61 record at the helm of the Alfred State football program. He led the Pioneers to their first winning season in the history of the program in 2000 and helped ASC to a 7-4 record in 2002. Caba has coached seven NJCAA All-Americans. In 2005, Caba was named the NFC Coach of the Year. Currently, Caba holds the position of president of the NJCAA Coaches Association.

Prior to arriving at Alfred State, Caba coached at Inver Hills Community College (Minneapolis, Minn.), the University of Minnesota Morris (Morris, Minn.), Parhandle State University (Goodwell, Okla.) and Iowa Wesleyan College (Mt. Pleasant, Iowa). Overall, Caba has a 63-81 mark in his 15 years coaching at the NJCAA level. He has coached 12 All-Americans.

Newsome received scholarship offers from Purdue, Northwestern, Middle Tennessee State and Western Kentucky before deciding to attend the junior college.

"Kenny will have the opportunity to play a number of different roles for us," University of Pikeville head coach Kelly Wells said. "He is a very versatile player who is equally as dangerous taking his man off the dribble or shooting it from deep. He plays with great effort and rebounds very well from the wing. He put up great stats in a very tough Texas JUCO league, and should have no trouble adjusting to the style of play in the MSC. We're very excited about adding Kenny to the UPIKE program."

ing a semi-pro team out of the EBA in Cincinnati at one of their workouts a few years back," Slone said. "I actually played with them and we stayed in contact and remained friends afterwards. When he started coaching at CCC we talked about the coaching profession at the college level and agreed on a lot of issues and had similar philosophies. One thing led to another and he offered me a spot on his staff after an interview. He's a great guy to learn from, he's very humble and has great knowledge of the game. His resume speaks for itself as well as some of the people he knows and some of the schools he's coached at."

Following a highly-decorated hoops career at ACHS, Slone signed with King College in Tennessee. Slone, making a move close to Cincinnati, transferred to Thomas More College. He then continued his playing career with the Saints.

Slone brings an impressive resume to the bench. As a player, Slone has competed against numerous professionals. The Allen Central High School product was a member of a Kentucky Pro-Am championship team.

Slone's coaching duties at CCC started earlier in the 2010-11 school year when he began recruiting for the men's basketball program.

"I'm basically responsible for recruiting — which I started several months ago — scouting, input, etc.," Slone added. "This is just an opportunity to learn, grow and get a good start at this level. My playing experience helped as well."

Family and friends will be able to catch up with Mike Slone when CCC plays in Eastern Kentucky during the 2011-12 season. The Cincinnati Christian College men's basketball program has not yet finalized and released its schedule for the upcoming campaign.

'Sundown: The Vampire in Retreat'

by TOM DOTY
TIMES COLUMNIST

Vampire cinema got a shot in the arm from this little seen entry which predated HBO's "True Blood" by 18 years, but featured the same basic premise of blood-suckers seeking to gain acceptance by artificially feeding their appetites and laying off humans. That concept alone raises the bar here but the film also works as a modern day western/comedy and features a solid cast under the expert direction of Anthony Hickox ("Hellraiser 2").

The story opens at a roadside gas station outside the remote town of "Purgatory." Three older gentlemen pass the time sitting in the shade and watching the dust settle until their reverie is interrupted by a speeding Los Angeles hipster who stops for some gas.

He turns out to be a fast-talking dink who berates the elderly attendants for not moving fast enough. A lesson in manners is due this dude, but it is a decidedly lethal one which amounts to a back-handed slap from one of the gents which sends his head into the fumblewoods while his body spasms a bit before shaking off this mortal coil. It's a fitting opening as it gives you an idea that anything can happen in this film, and it sure does.

Eventually we meet all the residents of the town and find that Purgatory is entirely staffed with vampires. They aren't looking for trouble, though, and have chosen to settle a ghost town so they can manufacture synthetic blood and seek redemption for a lifetime of living off of others. They are about in the daylight due to a generous smattering of sunscreen, but each one also rocks a pair of shades and an umbrella to be on the safe side of those persistent UV rays.

Into this mix comes several diverse characters which include two punks, who witnessed their friend's death in the opening, a nuclear family, led by a scientist dad who has been summoned to increase production of the synthetic blood; and the great grandson of infamous vampire hunter, Van Helsing. Unfortunately they have chosen a bad time to visit (like there's ever a good time to drop in on a village of bloodthirsty monsters).

The problem is that town elder Jefferson has amassed a rebel army and means to stop blood production and return to the old ways of slaking a vamp's thirst. His chief obstacle is town founder Mardulak, who has convinced most of the citizenry that a better reward awaits his brethren if they can only end their dependence on humans for food.

It all leads to a pitched gun battle and plenty of mayhem as most of the humans are conscripted into Mardulak's cause and must face Jefferson's secret army (consisting mostly of recent vampires he has fanged for his cause). Jefferson's forces may not be experienced enough to use the full extent of their newfound powers, but he has prepared for this by equipping them with guns which fire wooden bullets. It all makes for a decent battle, which adds some action elements to the proceedings and ends this campy affair on a relatively high note.

Despite a so-so script, this one gets the job done via competent direction and amazing production values, which include an inspiring musical score, breathtaking Moab,

Perkins Job Corps co-hosts Trooper Island Golf Tournament for eighth straight year

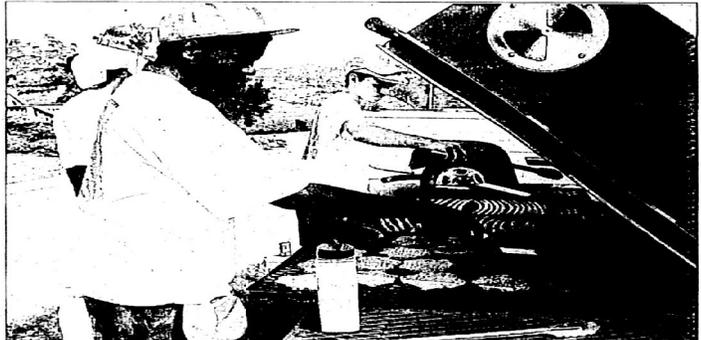

PRESTONSBURG — Carl D. Perkins Job Corps continued what is now nearly 10 years of involvement co-hosting the Trooper Island Golf Tournament Friday, July 22, 2011. This was the eighth consecutive year Perkins co-hosted the event.

Despite record high temperatures throughout the day, more than 30 teams of golfers, some 120 participants, hit the links and finished the scramble late Friday afternoon, taking occasional breaks to retrieve refreshments and a midday lunch to recharge themselves for the last half of the 18-hole professional course.

The golf scramble raised over $15,000 for Trooper Island, a camp for Kentucky low-income, economically disadvantaged youth started in 1965 by the Kentucky State Police. "I just want to say that even though I get out here and do a lot of the footwork to make this event possible, I have to thank Job Corps for everything they do to make this a reality," said Kentucky State Police Trooper Shaun Little. "Thomas (Rainey) and Marsha (Hackworth) have been such a help. This wouldn't be possible without them. Job Corps is the cog that makes this wheel turn."

Organizer's original vision, and the vision as it remains today, is to provide all Kentucky youth the opportunity to enjoy summer camp, regardless of their family's income status. More than (number) area golfers turned out to support the Pikeville Post 9 Kentucky State Police golf tournament.

Food for the event was provided by Horizons Youth Services, operators of the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center. The Perkins Culinary Arts Class catered the lunch while Hotel & Lodging students manned 'satellite stations' throughout the course, serving snacks and beverages to golfers.

"Eight years ago we looked for an organization to partner with to host a golf tournament, after seeing that both Trooper Island and Job Corps goals were so similar the choice was easy. Both Trooper Island and Job Corps were established to help the economic disadvantaged youth," Rainey said. "The tournament provides us the opportunity to again allow the local community to visit with the stars of our program, our students."

DINNER DIVA

Don't lose your cool

The last thing you need to be doing in the middle of the summer is turning on your oven to make dinner. Unless you like huge utility bills and the extra heat pouring out of your kitchen, that is.

I have an easy rule for summer: no oven recipes. My Menu-Mailer subscribers know this and to their great relief, I provide menus from now until September without using the oven. It's easy to implement yourself! Let me tell you how you can do this.

You want to keep the heat in the kitchen to a minimum? Especially if your air conditioning is insufficient. So move the cooking, if you can. Utilize your barbecue (and there are SO many great recipes just begging for a barbecue? like the one below!) as much as you can stand it. You can even grill veggies on the barby? try it, it is absolutely delicious. You can get these nifty little pans with holes in them and grill to your heart's content (kind of essential, unless you don't mind zucchini slipping through the grill slats). I toss my cut up veggies in a little olive oil and they're just wonderful grilled. Try this combo: red bell pepper, red onion, zucchini, summer squash and mushrooms. YUM!

Another keep-the-kitchen-cool, idea is to use your crockpot elsewhere. We used to put it on the screen porch, but I have heard of people moving their slow cookers to the laundry room. You can have all kinds of delicious things cooking in that thing and never have to worry about heating up your kitchen. When you're dealing with woefully inadequate air conditioning, every little hint helps.

And don't forget things like main course salads, sandwiches and fast and easy stove-top suppers.

Doing all of these things will give you a summer kitchen that won't get you all hot and bothered? know what I mean? Here's a recipe to get you grilling!

DO AHEAD TIP: Make the marinade and get your chicken marinating the night before or first thing in the morning.

Grilled Lemon Garlic Chicken
Serves 6
6 (6-oz.) boneless skinless chicken breast halves

1/2 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup olive oil
6 cloves garlic, pressed
2 teaspoons thyme

In a small bowl combine lemon juice, olive oil, garlic and thyme to make marinade. Put the chicken in a 1-gallon ziploc-type plastic bag and the pour marinade over chicken then seal the bag. Marinate in the refrigerator for 6 to 8, hours or overnight. If you can, squish it around every now and then to distribute marinade. Drain chicken, discarding marinade. (Don't even THINK about using it again!)

Light the barby till coals are to a medium-high heat. (Not red hot, but slightly ash-y if not using gas). Grill for 5 to 6 minutes per side or until cooked through. (You can also cook this on the stove top in a skillet: heat a little olive oil and cook till browned on each side, about 5 minutes per side or until cooked throughout)

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:
My boss and I are in a never-ending prank war. I really want to hook up one of those horns to his car that plays the ice-cream-truck jingle. And I want to have it come on whenever he starts the car. The problem is that I have no idea how to do this. Can you guys help me?
Cheers! — SaraMarie
RAY: That's a great prank, SaraMarie.
TOM: That meets all of the criteria of the American Prank Association: Nobody gets hurt, physically or psychologically. It's reversible, so there's no permanent damage to person or property. And, most importantly, it's not mean-spirited, so the prankee can laugh along and appreciate the cleverness that went into pulling it off — while he's plotting his revenge.
RAY: So we approve of this prank wholeheartedly. The first thing you're going to have to do is find the horn. I don't know where you get a horn that plays "Turkey in the Straw" (the annoying musical dirge of choice for ice-cream trucks), but I'm sure someone out there makes one.

TOM: I don't know where you'll find it, but I'd say the prospects are good. After all, we've heard horns that play "La Cucaracha," "Dixie," the cavalry call, the theme from "The Godfather" and the mating calls of a wide variety of farm animals. So check online, or try the JC Whitney catalog.
RAY: Then you'll need to recruit a mechanic who's willing to play along. I suggest a guy who can run fast if he happens to get caught in Agaricus delicto — which is Latin for "with battery cable in hand."
TOM: But you're going to prevent that from ever happening. Since you work with your boss, you're going to schedule an important meeting for him — preferably in a windowless room — while the mechanic is working on his car in the office parking lot. And you're going to keep him there until you get word that the coast is clear.

RAY: Installing a horn is a pretty easy job. Your mechanic shouldn't even need the keys. He'll just need a wiring diagram, so you'll have to provide him with the year, make and model of the car. The trickiest part is getting the hood open without having access to the passenger compartment. But we often manage to do that from under the car when people's hood latches break.
TOM: Once the hood's open, it's a simple matter of hooking up the horn and connecting the control box to any wire that gets energized when the ignition is on. So whenever he turns the key, the control box is powered. And if the horn is turned on at the control box (which is how you'll leave it), kids from miles around will descend on him demanding their cream-sicles.

RAY: Then all the mechanic has to do is hide the control box under the hood somewhere. You don't want to make it too easy to find, but you want him to eventually be able to turn it off — don't you?
TOM: You don't? I'm glad you don't work for me, SaraMarie! Well, let us know how it goes. And we'll start thinking about revenge ideas for when your boss writes to us. Have fun.

Low-rolling resistance tires explained
Dear Tom and Ray:
I'm writing for my brother, who never reads your column. He has a 2010 Toyota Prius with all the bells and whistles. He was told that to get the best gas mileage, he should buy low-rolling resistance tires. His dealer has never heard of them. What are they, and how do they increase gas mileage? — A loving sister who reads you guys a LOT, Margaret RAY: Well, we're sure Mom always liked you better anyway, Margaret.
TOM: Your brother already has low-rolling resistance tires, Margaret. They come standard on every Prius.
RAY: I certainly can understand that he might not be aware of that. What I don't understand is why the dealer doesn't know about it — unless he has a low-rolling attention span.

TOM: Here's the story on low-rolling resistance tires. Everybody's always looking for ways to increase gas mileage, right? One thing that decreases mileage is friction. As tires roll along the ground, they create what? Friction!
RAY: So the thinking goes, if tires could roll more easily, there would be less friction — or rolling resistance — slowing down the car, and the car's mileage would improve.
TOM: And lo and behold, this works! Tire manufacturers came up with new rubber compounds that allow cars to roll more freely while still maintaining a grip on the road.
They're not designed for high-performance sports cars, but they function perfectly well for most people.
RAY: A person who buys a Prius is not going to drive it at high speeds around hairpin turns in the rain: Prius owners prioritize mileage over sports-car handling, so Toyota opted for a tire that maximizes what the buyers care most about.
TOM: Similarly, if you buy a Porsche, it's not going to come with non-stinking low-rolling resistance tires. Because if you ask the average Goldman Sachs partner why he bought his 911 Targa 4S, the answer is not going to be "For the mileage."
RAY: But low-rolling resistance tires are available for non-hybrids now, too. And for people who can't need extraordinary handling qualities from their tires, they're a good way to boost your mileage by a few percent.

Rental Central

by TOM DOTY TIMES COLUMNIST

A strong week for renters saw three decent flicks sharing shelf space with one stinkburger.
■ "Source Code" — A man wakes up in a sealed capsule, where his only companion is a hatched faced woman on a video feed, in this interesting thriller that juggles character study with action and science fiction elements. The man learns he will be useful in stopping a terrorist attack, but must be shot back in time for 10-minute increments to succeed. Decent stuff, with a few twists and a good performance by Jake Gyllenhaal.
■ "Burn Notice: The Fall of Sam Axe" — Fans of the Miami-set action show, that follows a spy set out to dry, will enjoy this examination of that show's hero. Here, the focus is on Sam Axe, and we learn how he got booted from the FBI.

It all works, thanks to the smirking and charismatic lead performance of cult hero Bruce Campbell. He is perfectly cast as the wry and sarcastic Axe, who is also a bit of a macho lunkehead. Campbell does this stuff very well. Fun, but you miss the other characters who make up the show. Jeffrey Donovan (who stars in the series) is on hand for a cameo and directs the action as well.
■ "American Grindhouse" — I don't watch enough documentaries, but this one is definitely worth repeated viewings, as it examines the junk movies we all love. The people on hand are experts in the field and include John Landis, Robert Foster, Fred Williamson and Larry Cohen. Lots of extras, as well as some amusing "behind the scenes" stories from the folks who toiled on films like "Hell in the Harlem" and "Q: The Winged Serpent."

■ "Dylan Dog" — It is tough to do a scary PG-13 horror flick. Evidently, it was way too tough for the makers of this dreck. What a shame, as "Dylan Dog" was an extremely popular comic book in Italy that followed the exploits of a paranormal investigator.
Next week is shaping up as a good one for giant turtle fans, as five of the "Gamera" films get pasted in the newest "Mystery Science Theater" collection.

Lagoon

Utah, locations, and a plethora of talented thespians.
David Carradine heads the cast as the majestic Mardulak, though his thoughtful line deliveries are attributed to his being slightly pre-eyed on the set and struggling to remember each cue.
Bruce Campbell hams it up a little bit as Van Helsing but has a fine time with his hastily sketched character.

Old time movie buffs will dig seeing veteran character actors in weighty roles such as M. Emmet Walsh ("Blood Simple"), as the irate filling station vampire, and John Ireland ("All the King's Men") as the rebelious Jefferson.

All in all this one's a fun ride and a real treat for B-movie fans who appreciate A-List production values.
Best line: "Who is gonna believe that some relic with a sombrero knocked off Tom's head with a back hand?"
