This Town— That World

OUR JEREMIAH This column becomes more difficult by the week. At best, it is no collection of scintillating wit and humor, nor is it in its profoundest moments any fount of wisdom. But, with the events of these recent months, their tragedy and trial, it is not even at its mediocre best.

Still life goes on. "The moving finger writes, and having writ, nor all your piety nor wit can erase a word of it," wrote Omar Khayyam a long time ago.

AND ON WE DRAG

In many ways our people are impatient but in others we are too long-suffering. We are quick to react to an insult, fancied or real, but we will permit conditions that are an insult to our dignity, will accept excuses for such conditions that are an insult to our intelligence, and will wait for months and years, patiently murmuring, "Maybe things will get better."

Patience with a lot of things has ceased to be a virtue in Prestonsburg and Floyd county.

HOUSE GROUP VOTES FISHTRAP DAM FUND

PERKINS SEES SENATE HELP FOR VALLEY

Pound, Fishtrap Reach Planning Stage; Haysi Funds Are Yet Lacking

The House Appropriations Committee called Monday for the earmarking of $140,000 to start advanced engineering on the Fishtrap reservoir, bringing to two the number of impoundments in process of planning to prevent Big Sandy floods. For continued engineering on the Pound reservoir $150,000 had already been appropriated.

The $140,000 appropriation was a "drop" in the "bucket" of $52,000,000 in appropriations to be spent on Kentucky river projects in the next two years.

A third dam mapped at Haysi, Va., has not reached the planning stage because no funds have been appropriated.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins said he was disappointed that more money was not allotted for the Fishtrap engineering. He had asked for $450,000, but Army engineers said only the $140,000 could be used in the fiscal year. Perkins said it will take years, at the present rate, to complete the engineering. It is to cost approximately $600,000.

But he was hopeful a speed-up in the planning could be put into effect in fiscal 1959-60, and that construction of the $37,000,000 project might begin in calendar year 1960.

Perkins also said he had been told that the Senate Appropriations Committee plans to include additional money for engineering on the Pound Reservoir. And he

Liquor Possession Hit By Stiffest Penalty In Quarterly Court

Nineteen persons have been convicted in quarterly court since June 3, records of the court disclose. All the penalties were invoked upon pleas of guilty.

Two of the heaviest penalties went to Ella Colley, who was fined $20 and costs, given a 30-day jail term and required to execute $500 peace bond for 12 months, upon her conviction on a charge of possessing gin and beer; and to Raymond Davis, whose drunk charge was reduced to reckless driving and who was fined $100 and costs. The moonshine possession charge against him was waived to the grand jury.

James Fulks was convicted of keeping deer in captivity without a permit and was fined $15 and costs. Mr. Fulks explained that he had bought the deer from another who had a permit. He will acquire one for himself, he added.

All other convictions resulted in fines of $10 and costs. Defendants and charges filed against them follow: Prock Cooley, improper passing; Foster E. Goff, speeding; William Mollett, improper passing; Elmer Stone, Effort Newsome, Bascom Hall, Cecil New-

These three make a total of 42 scholarships awarded by Inland Steel Company since adopting its scholarship plan, H. O. Zimmerman, manager of coal properties, said.

NEED STATUS IS EXTENDED

Cooper Informs Times URO Grants 3-Mo. Stay Of Application Deadline

Senator John Sherman Cooper last week told The Times that the Urban Renewal Office of the Housing and Home Finance Agency had agreed to extend for three additional months the "disaster status" declared in February, 1957 for Eastern Kentucky counties, as a result of the floods of the Big Sandy. By extending the status to October 2, 1958, the Urban Renewal Office makes it possible for communities in the area to file applications for federal assistance in urban renewal development programs, with less rigid requirements and with the likelihood of speedier action.

The initial request for the extended time came from B. F. Reed, of Drift, chairman of the Eastern Kentucky Regional Planning Commission.

In a statement commenting on the action of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Senator Thurston C. Morton and Senator Cooper declared: "We are gratified by the decision of the Urban Renewal Office to extend the time within which Eastern Kentucky cities may apply for federal assistance in evaluating their needs for long range development plans. Even though the original 'disaster status' resulted from the 1957 floods, the situation was made worse by the floods of this spring. The federal government should do everything that it can to assist the people in Eastern Kentucky and this particular step is appreciated by the people of the area."

HALL LIABLE FOR $66,960

Commissioner Rules Firm Improperly Paid On Knott Road Projects

A special Franklin Circuit Court commission ruled Wednesday of last week that the State is entitled to recover $66,960 improperly paid to Hall Trucking Company for work on 13 Knott county road projects.

Held jointly liable with the Hall firm for repayment of the money were Rural Highway Commissioner James W. Martin, Finance Commissioner Ward J. Otes, and O. J. West, Pikeville district highway engineer, and their sureties.

The ruling, a report of Special Commissioner Squire N. Williams, Jr., will be presented to Judge William B. Ardery for a final judgment.

The Knott county road work was performed last year with equipment and operators furnished by the Hall firm and its predecessor, C. & C. Trucking Company, both of Hindman.

The two firms are owned by Richard Hall, son of David Hall, the Highway Department road supervisor for Knott county.

Prestonsburg Youths Hurt in Truck Mishap On Middle-Cr., Sunday

One of two 15-year-old Prestonsburg boys who figured in the wreck of a truck on the Middle Creek road Sunday afternoon was reported in serious condition this week at a Huntington, W. Va. hospital.

Donald Wallen was seriously hurt when a pickup truck driven by Ray Joseph left Route 114, near the home of M. T. Stumbo, and dropped over a 60-foot embankment into Middle Creek, striking a tree en route. Joseph's hurts were minor.

State police said the truck apparently was being driven at high speed at the time of the wreck. It traveled 75 feet along the side of the embankment before turning over, the report said.

GRAY, BLACKBURN KILL EACH OTHER IN SUNDAY AFTERNOON GUN BATTLE

The City building (former City Hall) on the second floor of which Sunday's double-slaying took place. A part of the crowd that gathered in front after the tragedy is shown.

WIFE OF GRAY TELLS STORY OF SHOOTING

Gray, Fire Chief Here, Blackburn Former Chief, Were Considered Friends

Two well-known Prestonsburg men, Fire Chief Amos Gray and his predecessor in the fire department post here, Vernon Blackburn, shot each other to death in Gray's apartment in the city building on Highland between 6 and 6:30 p.m., Sunday.

The double-tragedy shocked tragically-named Prestonsburg. The two men were next-door neighbors and had apparently been on the friendliest relations. Gray was 35 years old, and Blackburn was 36. Both were World War II veterans.

Gray died as he was being driven to the Prestonsburg General hospital by his wife, Marguerite White Gray. Blackburn died at the same hospital, about an hour later.

The sudden flurry of shots, fired at a distance of only a few feet, created little alarm among those outside the apartment, and it was not until Mrs. Gray sped through Court street with her wounded husband that it became known that anybody had been shot.

The tragedy unfolded before the eyes of the fire chief's wife, his two young sons and his wife's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth White. These were the only known witnesses, with the shooting taking place in the kitchen and adjoining bedroom of the Gray apartment.

Without bitterness and with expressions of sorrow for the widowed Mrs. Blackburn, her children and other relatives of Blackburn, Mrs. Gray and Mrs. White told The Times the story of the Gray.

Mrs. Gray said Mrs. Blackburn had invited her and her husband to a picnic supper at the Blackburn home and that her husband had taken some food to the Blackburn home in preparation for the

SOUTH BOUND COAL TARIFF

Reduction Is Planned On Carolina Shipments; Move Late, Coal Man Says

The so-called Pocahontas railway lines—the C. & O., N. & W. and the Virginian and Clinchfield—have filed notice of plans to reduce their freight rates on fine coal into the Carolinas by 35 cents a ton, but a coal spokesman said Wednesday the cut in transportation costs by no means equals the cuts already made by the Southern Railway on coal shipped into the South.

He pointed out that C. & O. and the other two lines are doing nothing more than meeting a freight rate reduction already made by western railways on coal to the Great Lakes; that Southern Railway already has made very substantial reductions and that, so far, C. & O. and N. & W. have not met these reductions.

Southern Railway three years ago reduced its freight rate on fine coal used by industry by 35 cents a ton. It now proposes a further 45-cent cut on such coal and a matching 80-cent cut on lump or domestic coal.

The Eastern Kentucky coal representative said, "We are very much concerned about the possible loss of markets."

He added that the reductions proposed by the Pocahontas lines would be limited to certain destinations and on coal for certain uses. "As for this reduction, we would just be holding our own with Western Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana coal that already is benefitting on freight reductions to the lakes allowed by western lines."

He added that for the present he can see no reason for awarding C. & O. and N. & W. "any bonuses for reducing rates."

The overall coal picture is confused, what with freight rates and other factors providing the confusion, it was said. The spokesman who declined to have his name used, said he expects June to be 10% better than May in coal production but that he can see no marked improvement in the situation for the entire year.

V. Clark, Health Department director said. He emphasized the point that only those referred to the clinic by physicians will be accepted for examination by either technicians or specialists.

NINE NABBED DURING RAIDS

Week-End Sees Roundup On Rum Range; 7 Taken In Prestonsburg Limits

Eight persons were arrested in Prestonsburg and vicinity last week-end and a ninth at Estill in raids staged by deputy sheriffs and Prestonsburg police.

Among those arrested by police here were three taxicab drivers who, the signer of affidavits for search warrants said, had sold him whiskey. Search of their cabs, however, failed to uncover any liquor.

Deputy Sheriffs arrested Jim Marsillett, Ezra Marsillett and James Newsome Saturday morning at West Prestonsburg when they confiscated 24 cases of beer found in a car occupied by Newsome and Ezra Marsillett. Jim Marsillett was driving another auto but was taken as their accomplice.

The same day, police here arrested James Lucas from whom five half-pints of whiskey were taken. Cab drivers arrested were Harold Yates, James George and Lloyd Kestner.

Last Friday, deputies of Sheriff Hershell Warrens arrested Mrs. Ella Colley near the old Winchester camp, five miles south of here, and confiscated a few half-pints of gin and about 30 cases of beer. The same day, four cases of beer and some wine were taken in a raid on Corbett Taylor at Estill. Both Mrs. Colley and Taylor were jailed here.

Also booked at the jail within the week were:

David A. Wyatt, damaging mortgaged property; Billy Charles Curry and Elijah Hall, fishing without license; Raymond Goble, failing to support children; Ray Adkins, speeding, reckless driving and driving on wrong side of road.

Herald-Thompson Vows Said In Church Rites Here Friday, June 6th

In a candlelight service at 6 p.m., Friday, June 6, at the Methodist Church here, Miss Dorothy Herald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herald, was united in marriage to Mr. Bill Ray Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson, of Ashland, Ky. The Rev. Harold W. Dorsey, pastor of the church, performed the double-ring ceremony.

The altar was decorated with palms, cathedral baskets filled with white gladioli and mums, and with branched candelabra. Mrs. Chalmer H. Frazier at the organ gave a recital of wedding music, followed by "O, Promise Me," sung by Mr. Randall Wells, and "Because," sung by Mrs. William Rowe. The ushers, Harry Hale Ranier, Prestonsburg, and Bill Gilliam, Ashland, lit the candles.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length gown of nylon, the full skirt with overskirt of scalloped nylon lace forming a point at the hemline in front. The tight-fitted bodice fastened in the back with self-covered lace buttons, and was fashioned with an off-shoulder boat neckline with short sleeves. Her shoulder-tip veil was fastened to a satin bandeau of pearls. Lace inserts made the border. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid and satin streamers.

Her matron of honor, Mrs. Harry Hale Ranier, wore a short dress of dotted pink nylon with accented pleated skirt over pink, ruffled net, pink mitts and pink satin head bandeau with short veil attached. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations. Mr. Jim Clark, of Ashland, served the groom as best man. "The Lord's Prayer" was sung by Mr. Wells.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Administration building of the church. The bride's table was beautiful with its cover of Quaker lace centered with a tiered cake, with a miniature bride and groom on top flanked by tall branched candelabra with white candles. Smilax and wedding bells decorated the table. Mrs. John Paul Francis presided at the punch bowl and Miss Patty Pelphrey served the wedding cake.

Mrs. Thompson will graduate from the Good Samaritan hospital School of Nursing, Lexington, in August. She is a graduate of Prestonsburg high school. Mr. Thompson is a 1957 graduate of the Engineering College, University of Kentucky. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and is with Bill Cromwell & Associates in Lexington. Mother-Daughter Banquet Held At Methodist Church

Women of the First Methodist Church here convened in the church basement Friday evening for their fourth annual Mother-Daughter Banquet. Approximately 100 grandmothers, mothers and their daughters participated in the festivities.

Following the covered-dish dinner, Mrs. James Carter, president of the local Woman's Society of Christian Service, introduced the program. Four three-generation families, consisting of grandmother, daughter and granddaughter, were recognized. Tribute was paid the oldest mother, Mrs. Nicie Kenney, mother of Mrs. E. D. Roberts, and the youngest daughter, Debby Davidson.

The devotions were given by Jane Mayo Fitzpatrick, daughter of Mrs. H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr. Highlight of the celebration was the presence of Mrs. J. W. Holbrook, Kentucky Conference president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service, who inspired the group with her talk on Christian motherhood, wholesome mother-daughter relationship, and the importance of Christian service.

hoped added funds would also be forthcoming in the Senate for Haysi.

These additional amounts, if approved by the Senate, then would come back to the House for consideration. The three projects — Fishtrap, Pound, and Haysi—affect the Big Sandy Valley where serious floods have occurred in Eastern Kentucky.

The Fishtrap project has been the subject of competition between Kentucky Republicans and Democrats in Congress, with Governor Chandler also playing a role.

Chandler appeared with Republican Senators John Sherman Cooper and Thurston B. Morton before a Senate appropriations subcommittee to ask for $600,000 in engineering money for Fishtrap.

Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, chairman of the public-works subcommittee, promised that if the committee would stand by him, he didn't "think we will have much difficulty getting the money."

Perkins planned originally to ask for $140,000 for Fishtrap in the coming fiscal year—a sum also requested by Morton.

But Perkins raised his sights in testimony before a House appropriations subcommittee to $300,000, and later wrote the President to ask for "at least $450,000."

Attorney General Jo M. Ferguson filed suit last December to recover $66,960 that had been paid to the Hall firm. Warrants authorizing $19,855 to the Hall firm have been canceled.

In his report to Judge Ardery, Commissioner Williams listed these findings of fact:

"In March, 1957, Richard Hall signed certain blank papers, before O. J. West, at the Department of Highways district office in Pikeville.

"Said papers were supposedly proposals to rent equipment to the state, but were not filled in at the time they were signed.

"Thereafter, in May, 1957 Hall commenced road construction at 13 separate sites in Knott county, Kentucky.

"On June 11, 1957, George H. Hailey, director of the Division of Rural Highways, assigned rural - secondary force-account project members for each of the roads under consideration.

"Authorization that those projects be done by force account was made by J. B. Wells, Jr., rural highway commissioner.

"On July 1, 1957, purchase requisitions were made and approved by O. J. West and J. B. Wells, Jr., of the Department of Highways.

"On July 11, 1957, award of contract was executed by the Department of Finance. Authorization of payment, as indicated by standard invoice, was then approved by O. J. West and authorized by J. B. Wells, Jr.

"Work done by Hall on the road projects under consideration was accomplished by equipment and operators furnished by Hall. The contract executed July 11, 1957, provided that hourly rates be paid for such equipment and operators.

"Ward Oates, then deputy commissioner of finance, made a personal investigation of the circumstances surrounding the contract in question and concluded the rates were too high.

"Thereafter, he and Dr. James Martin, then commissioner of finance, conferred with Richard Hall and reached an agreement at a lower rental rate, at which rate payments were thereafter authorized.

"Checks representing payment for rental of the equipment were held by the Department of Highways during the time an investigation by that department was being made, and subsequently released to mail.

"No bids were asked for on the subject projects."

Commissioner Williams then reached these conclusions of law: "Statutory law in this state specifically provides that bids on highway work shall be advertised for a specified period of time, and that in the event no satisfactory bid is received, work may be done by force account . . .

"The roads under consideration here are classified as rural-secondary and are as much a part of the State highway system as are the primary roads.

"The Department of Highways must seek bids on work to be performed on such roads, and if it does not, it is proceeding contrary to a direct mandate of the Legislature.

"It is patent that most of the work was done prior to any authorization by the State and prior to execution of the contract. That fact should have been apparent to each official who approved the documents.

"The documents plainly showed that work had been performed some months before the date they were presented for approval. The Highway Department was obviously aware that no bids had been sought and that the work had been performed during prior months.

The Finance Department certainly was aware of the situation as witness the fact an investigation was made and rates renegotiated and the contract kept in force.

New officers of the Hall of Fame are Russell Harmon, Huntington, W. Va., president; Burl Spurlock, first vice-president; Robert Wallace, second vice-president, Mrs. Betty Stephens, corresponding secretary, and Miss Ruth Sippell, treasurer.

Chalmer H. Frazier, is the retiring president.

The program began Saturday night at a banquet where the two principal speakers were introduced. They were Col. Barney Oldfield, director of information services of the North American Air Defense Command, Colorado Springs, and Mrs. DeVina Wheelodon, the first woman passenger on a supersonic airplane.

Stressing the need for national security, Oldfield pointed out that the deterioration of the "fiber and determination in the rear of any military force eventually destroys its fiber and determination, too."

He said "We can see our way clear to send a geologist to the Arabs to help open the door to the pools of oil under his desert, because we all know we need the oil and there is money in it."

But, he continued, "We do not see so clearly the requirement to develop the man who can bounce us into outer space, simply because space does not have any known market value as of this moment.

"All our military instruments are to deter war, to preserve the peace. If they ever have to fight, it will be such a hemispheric hassle that only chaos and catastrophe will result."

A former newspaperman and radio commentator, Oldfield was one of the first Americans trained as a paratrooper in World War II.

Mrs. Wheelodon, a Louisville native and now a Cincinnati housewife, has been honored by the Air Force Association for her writings and radiocasts in connection with aviation and civil defense matters.

In her address, she defended the development of atomic weapons by United States armed forces. But for the use of the atomic bomb, she said, it might have cost this country 500,000 casualties to invade the Japanese home islands as well as tremendous loss of life to the Japanese defenders and civilians.

"You and I know," she said, "that Nevada and Eniwetok atoll are far from Prestonsburg, but we also know that what they do there has great bearing not only on our old Kentucky homes but all homes everywhere in making them safer to live in and to assure that we will have them to come back to for years to come."

Chalmer H. Frazier presided at the Hall of Fame ceremonies, as at the banquet on the preceding evening. The address of welcome to Prestonsburg was made by Mayor Bill Napier, and the response to this welcome was made by Dr. Palmer L. Hall, of Morehead State College, former superintendent of Floyd schools.

The Hall of Fame awards were made by Robert Wallace, new second vice-president of the organization.

Commissions as colonels on the staff of Governor Chandler were presented Mrs. Wheelodon and Colonel Oldfield by H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr. Corsages to Mrs. Wheelodon, Mrs. Winnie F. Johns, Mrs. Betty Stephens and Mrs. Robert Martin were presented on behalf of the Hall of Fame group by Miss Ora Howard of David.

Homer Wright presented gifts to the two speakers.

Mrs. E. R. May, of Tollesboro, Ky., a leader in the move to honor Floyd countians for worthwhile endeavors, introduced to the audience those Hall of Fame members who were present. Of them all, only Pete McCoy, one of the great heroes of World War I, received an ovation.

An outstanding feature of the Sunday afternoon program was the group of folk songs rendered by Mrs. Edith F. James, Mrs. Claude P. Stephens, Miss Laura Virginia Roberts and Franklin W. Moore. The invocation and benediction were pronounced by the Rev. J. P. Carr, of Allen. The Processional and accompaniment to group singing was rendered by Mrs. Chalmer H. Frazier.

We Hope the Man Sticks by His Guns

Some of the officials of Lebanon and Marion county last week demanded a "public apology" from Safety Commissioner Don S. Sturgill after he had dispatched thirty state troopers and plainclothesmen there to attempt to cope with a lawless situation in that legally wet area.

"If there is any crime wave here, I'd like to know about it," said Lebanon Chief of Police Garrison. Before he stopped talking the police chief admitted that fifteen persons had been arrested there on the preceding Saturday night.

If Mr. Sturgill has apologized, the newspapers haven't recorded the fact. Indeed, it is highly doubtful that an apology is in order. For, as long as three years ago, the editor of The Marion Falcon said in an editorial that Lebanon "is fast adding to the reputation she has as an oasis. This thing . . . is about to overwhelm us." The editorial added that "The Strip" section on the west side of Lebanon at that time had three night clubs, four package liquor stores, a couple of square dance halls and an assortment of places where beer was sold.

It is indeed strange that the Chief of Police "would like to know about it" if there is a crime wave in Lebanon and at the same time arrest fifteen persons—most of them visitors from "dry" counties—in one night. Such officers have every opportunity to know all the facts in communities such as Lebanon.

Don Sturgill, of course, had no ulterior motive in saying that "gambling, prostitution and illegal sales of liquor have become commonplace" there. He had the figures on how much "red likker" was going out of Marion counties to "dry" counties. He got that information from federal records. His plainclothesmen, working anonymously, quietly, unheralded, apparently caught Lebanon and Marion county when they weren't expecting that kind of investigation.

We have an idea Mr. Sturgill wasn't talking, merely to make somebody a good news-story. We hope he continues with what he set out to do in Lebanon and Marion county.

Furthermore, we hope he favors Prestonsburg and Floyd county with the same kind of service.

If our skirts are clear, we should not fear the state police or any other officer of the law. If they aren't, local officers should cooperate with the state police, not be insulted by any offers of help—and, if they are insulted, something is wrong that may not meet the naked eye.

"music" of the chase whiled the hours away.

Cline grew up in a mountain fox hunting country with traditions of the chase for generations back. His father was "Dood" Cline, actually christened Peter El Caney Delaney General Mustang Cline. Despite the impressive handle, Dood loved to follow the hounds as did his son, Homer and others. One of the others was Warnie's grandfather Peter Cline, Union soldier, who was born in West Virginia, right smack into the center of what later became the Hatfield-McCoy feud section. Peter told and retold his grandsons and sons many a story as they sat on the high points and listened to the baying of the hounds.

Warnie Cline's grandfather married Betty McCoy and to all clan-minded mountaineers that automatically put Peter on the McCoy side. Peter made the mistake of shooting a Hatfield in the shoulder and his wife induced him to leave the blood-letting tug and move to Johns Creek. He found land, plenty of it, all fine for agriculture, logging and fox hunting in what is now the Jenny Wiley State Park area.

Cline remembers his aged grandfather with the nostalgia of one who is growing old himself. They would start up a mountain and as his grandfather had a wooden leg it was no trouble for the fledgling fox hunter to keep up. Peter often told how he lost that leg. He was going "down the river" on a raft and while tying up near Georges Creek the rope caught him around the leg just below the knee and the slowly moving raft tightened and severed it with the exception of a few shreds of flesh. His fellow raftsmen finished the job with an axe and Peter suffered until they reached Louisa. He survived to teach his sons and grandsons to love the chase as they loved the land and the fox hunting terrain in almost pristine Johns Creek.

Warnie Cline remembers old Big Foot, the fox that seems to have become a legend in the hunting fraternity much as Paul Bunyan was the object of stories by the Northwest loggers.

To hear the hunters talk, especially oldsters, Big Foot was the greatest of all for speed and cunning. His fame spread from the Tug to Tennessee. State Senator Doug Hays, of McDowell, once related to Allan Trout, for his Greetings column, of how he and several of the Hargis family of Breathitt county chased Big Foot for days and when they thought they were in the Blue Grass asked a Negro boy how far it was to Lexington. The boy replied he had never heard of Lexington or Kentucky either but that Dallas Texas, was just around the bend.

Cline chased old Big Foot, too, but whether it was the same fox, he doesn't know. It probably wasn't. The hunters always knew it was Big Foot by the imprint of an oversize paw as it made a track in the snow. Cline thinks the fox may have been injured by a trap.

The oversize foot didn't bother Big Foot much when it came to running off and leaving the dogs. When the animal really got pressed he moved north and west, out of Johns Creek, into Rockcastle, through Greasy and Georges Creek. If he was still pressed he headed for the Bluegrass.

Cline affirms that Lige Richmond chased Big Foot one time for a day or two and lost his hounds. He started searching for the lost dogs, asking people along the road if they had heard hounds with such and such a bark. They had. He continued to hunt and ask. Plenty of people had heard the hounds, it seemed. Richmond recovered them at Mt. Sterling and he and others, after chases in which Big Foot was the intended quarry, found their dogs several times after that in the vicinity of the Bluegrass town.

Cline has only one hound today. He and old Jack retired at the same time. Old Jack is 14, mighty old for a dog, especially a fox hound. Cline has owned some mighty fine dogs in his life, much better than Jack. There were Sport and Joe. Not many hounds ever catch a fox but these two picked up 12 in one winter. He kept the dogs five years, sold

AN APPRECIATION

We, the undersigned parents of those who lost their lives in the school bus tragedy of February 28, 1958, seek, somehow, to express our thanks for so many services and kindnesses.

It is impossible at this time for us to designate each person or group to whom we are indebted, and for that reason we must trust that every individual who served will accept this as our personal appreciation. Indeed we would like to greet each person individually and personally, shake his hand and tell him, if we could, how much we are indebted to him, but this also is not in the realm of the possible.

There is no need here for us to comment on our own sorrow and trial. We mention our own anguish of soul only to say that the kindnesses that you showered upon us, your prayers, your ministrations through personal services, through long hours of work and unshrinking devotion to us and our children—all were of great comfort and made our burdens more bearable.

So it is that we, as humbly and sincerely as we in our faltering, human way can, thank all who worked and planned and led in the work of recovering the missing; all who came to us in our darkest hours with words of comfort and hope and with kindly services; all who prayed with and for us; all who followed our dead to their last resting places.

To you all—and there are so many!—we join in voicing a grateful, heartfelt "Thanks, and God bless you."

them for a good price to a Beaver Creek hunter.

The retired hunter is a raconteur par excellence when it comes to remembrances of the chase. He tells bits of humorous sketches like the time Boss Music had a moon-eyed hound named Track. That dog couldn't see much after night but Music kept him for his daytime prowess.

One time while encamped on a high ridge in the Johns Creek mountains near a 75-foot cliff the fox got hard pressed and headed toward it. Over it went and Track, who was lying nearby in his moon-eyed state saw a glimpse of the fleeing animal. He jumped and both went over. Music swore they must be killed, wouldn't believe Track was living until he heard his bark down in the timber as he chased unavailing around in the darkness.

Cline married Celia Burchett and years ago when he was an eager beaver hunter he induced his wife to go along. But fox hunting is not for women, especially in the mountains. She would sit down on a high ridge, listen awhile to the music of the "tonguing" hounds. Her husband would walk away, she would fall asleep, wake up alone on a high mountain. "She got burned out quick," her husband says.

Two dogs recalled with great pride were Drum and Dora. One night several men came from Prestonsburg to hunt with the Clines. There was Jim Sizemore, Sambo Nelson and others. They "hit a fox" and the dogs, led by Drum and Dora, took it into the Wolf Creek country of Martin county. Dora never came back.

Cline set out to find his dog, called on a man who was suspected but got no information. He talked to a woman, inquired if she had seen a dog or knew of anyone killing one as mountain sheep men would shoot a hound if he was strange. The woman hadn't either, she said with tight lips.

Ten years later the woman sent for Cline. She was on her death bed.

"I want to tell you who killed your dog," she said. "I lied to you once but I was afraid of what you would do. A boy at Long Andy McCoy's did it." Women of the fox hunting country were always tight-lipped about a dog killing.

Years ago Warnie Cline, and his wife, Celia, too, were great banjo players. The banjo is now retired along with Old Jack and himself. But at evening, when the work on the mountain farm was done, they often played for "company" for there were visitors aplenty.

Cline played and sang a song much loved by the hunting fraternity of the area for it was composed by Cline himself and it contained names, places and things. In the song ran the great hounds of the past while the addicts of the chase listened to the sweetest music in the world to them—the baying of a great dog as he flung his lithe body over the rough terrain in the heat of the chase.

Now, although Cline no longer engages in the hunt as he did for 50 years or plays the banjo and sings of hunting sagas of long ago he does sleep with an ear attuned for the baying of the hounds of some neighbor's as they streak along. If he hears the "sweetest music in the world" he "tears out of bed to listen."

Drivers' Licenses Under The New Law

Beginning Monday, June 16, 1958, all licenses will be $2.00, regardless of expiration date. The applicant must apply in the county where he lives and the necessary blanks will be prepared and verified in person by the applicant.

The clerk will prepare a ninety-day driver's permit for all renewal licenses and when these papers are prepared the clerk mails them to the Department of Public Safety, Frankfort, and if the record of the applicant is found to be all right, then the department will mail the applicant a photostatic copy of his driver's license to the address stated in the application.

All applicants will apply at the office of the Circuit Clerk as in the past. Renewals for 1958 will expire during the birth month of the applicant in 1960 and those in 1959 in the birth month of 1961.

There has been a lot of misunderstanding as to the manner of the issue of the new licenses, and I hope the above statement will clarify the situation.

KIWANIS-FARMER GET-TO-GETHER

The annual Kiwanis-farmer meeting was held Thursday, May 29, at the farm of J. B. Clarke, at Laner. Everybody was treated to a barbecued chicken supper following a conducted tour of the farm and woodland.

The Clarke farm, which has been protected from forest fire and overgrazing has one of the best stands of young poplar in the section, it was noted by many of those attending.

Artificial Limbs Aids Miss Auxier To Walk Again

Rosella Auxier, 16-year-old Johnson county girl who was found last December with her legs badly frozen in an abandoned Prestonsburg shack, will walk soon with artificial limbs contributed by Emmett Blevins, Louisville manufacturer of them. She took the first few halting steps last week.

Miss Auxier, whose legs were amputated a few days after she was taken to a Louisville hospital, has been the recipient of gifts and money since she was hospitalized.

Blevins, who lost his legs when he was the same age as Rosella, promised her artificial limbs in January. It was necessary for her to go through what doctors describe as "a toughening up" process before she could use the new legs.

She took her first steps in a walker. She will increase the number of steps each day until she has learned to manage the equipment. Rosella is looking forward to returning to school next September. She is a patient at Kosair Crippled Children's Hospital.

She has a bank account of more than $800, which she hopes to use for her education.

Chamber of Commerce Opposes Special Meet of State's Lawmakers

The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce last week urged Governor A. B. Chandler to refrain from calling a special session of the General Assembly to extend unemployment compensation payments at this time.

In a telegram signed by Harper Gatton, Louisville, executive vice-president of the state Chamber, the Governor was informed that the board of directors of the state businessmen's organization had originally opposed the extension of temporary unemployment compensation as proposed by the President of the United States, deeming such action as a "dangerous precedent."

"The State Chamber feels," according to Gatton, "that the extension of unemployment compensation payments at this time would present an undue hardship on Kentucky employers should the present $112,000,000 reserve fund be depleted. Furthermore, the unemployment compensation program, whether a temporary federal loan project or an expedient state extension of the present program, was not designed as a huge, governmental, anti-recession assistance program."

The Governor was reminded, according to Gatton, of the Senate resolution passed during the 1958 General Assembly stating that government officials examine discretionary actions relating to business that may have any subsequent discriminating or deterring effect upon the investment of capital and the creation of needed payrolls in Kentucky.

"We believe that the maintenance of a healthy business environment is necessary to continue the outstanding record that we presently enjoy in Kentucky in the field of industrial development," commented Gatton.

Jones attended the Eastern State College from 1947-48, then enrolled at the University of Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1951 with a bachelor of science degree in agriculture.

Ivan C. Craddy and Raymond H. Lickert, district supervisors in the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Kentucky, received similar scholarships and plan to attend the same university.

Jones came to Floyd county, September 1, 1955, as assistant county agent and succeeded O. E. Boggs, as agent.

Rape Charge Fugitive Taken In Ohio, Meted 21-Year Term In Pike

Elmer Blankenship, 21, one of nine alleged participants in the rape of two young women last summer, pleaded guilty in Pike County Circuit Court, June 3.

Blankenship, of Freeburn, was arrested at Toledo, Ohio, last month.

Circuit Judge F. Pierce Keese sentenced him to 20 years in the State Reformatory near LaGrange.

Carl Ferrell, 22, also of Freeburn, was tried and convicted last November and now is serving a life term. The cases of the others—five men and two juveniles—are to come up later this month. They are free on bond.

Blankenship's plea was to a charge accusing of raping the young sister of Mrs. Gladys Spurlock in a car near Freeburn last August 18. He also is accused in the raping of Mrs. Spurlock, now 20, and in the wounding of Mrs. Spurlock's husband, Everett.

The Spurlocks and the sister, now 16, are from Home Creek, Va. Mrs. Spurlock was expecting a third child at the time of the attack.

They claimed that they had stopped their car to repair a flat tire on the night of August 18 when a group of boys and young men arrived and attacked them.

Besides Blankenship, Ferrell, and the two juveniles, others indicted in the case include Philip Smith of Coleman, Harold and Thurman Dotson, brothers, all of Freeburn, and Lawson Ashbire of Phyllis.

Commonwealth's Attorney Kelsey E. Friend said they will be tried separately starting June 25. He did not indicate which would be first.

Blankenship, who remained at large until his recent arrest, will be eligible for parole after serving seven years.

Jack London Adds Death-Defying Act

Jack London, who will appear here under the sponsorship of the American Legion, Saturday, has added to his show the sensational bullet catching act that has astounded audiences throughout the world.

Mr. London invites any local marksman—anyone who is well-known in town—and using any gun the local man desires, to fire a .22 long-range bullet at him. This is done at close range—and London says he will catch the bullet in his teeth.

In order to guarantee that the gun is actually fired and that a real bullet is discharged, there is a piece of glass held between the end of the rifle and Mr. London. The bullet goes through the glass, breaking it, and London then catches the bullet in his teeth.

neighborly get-together. The first sign of trouble she told of noting was when Blackburn drove home, left his car and kicked over a picnic table. He drove away, later returned, stood outside and wrenched his gun, she said.

(The Blackburn home and the Gray apartment are separated only by an alley.)

The two women said Gray then told his two sons to go into the living room, expressing the fear that Blackburn might shoot and a bullet strike them. He got his own revolver and stuck it in his pocket.

They decided the picnic was off and that they would eat at home, they said, and were preparing supper when Blackburn suddenly appeared, waving his pistol and declaring to Gray, "I've come to kill you."

"Oh, no, Vernon," they quoted the fire chief as saying. "Sit down and drink a cup of coffee with me."

The visitor's answer was another threat to kill him, they said. The two women agreed that the heart-grIPPING period which followed, with Gray, his wife, his mother-in-law and the Grays' two sons pleading for Gray's life, must have lasted 10 to 15 minutes.

"Amos raised his hands, he begged for his life and tears ran down his cheeks," Mrs. Gray said. "I believe he at first thought he could talk Vernon out of it but that he soon was convinced he meant to kill him."

Mrs. White said she stepped between the two men, begged Blackburn not to shoot. She added that he shoved her aside, bruising her right forearm. They said the two boys, Johnny, 12, and Hughie, 10 added their entreaties, and that Mrs. Gray threw herself in front of her husband.

It was then, Mrs. Gray said, that Blackburn told her he would kill her if she did not get out of the way. "Amos threw his arms around me and jerked me to one side," she said. "And when he did that Vernon fired. Amos fell to his knees and he drew his pistol and began shooting."

"How the rest of us escaped being hit I'll never know," Mrs. White said. She added that they were almost within arm's-length of each other.

Gray was hit above the heart, and it was held that a blood vessel was severed, causing him to bleed to death. Blackburn was shot through the temple, in the chest and abdomen.

The shooting over, Gray walked downstairs and out to his car. His wife helped him inside, then began the drive to the hospital.

The two women said Blackburn was drunk and expressed the belief he would not have shot, had he known what he was doing.

Members of the Blackburn family did not make a statement pertaining to the shooting, explaining that they had no first-hand information. Survivors of the two men have expressed to each other their sympathy since the affray.

Prestonsburg police, which came in for some criticism, said the two patrolmen on duty at the time of the shooting had sought Blackburn after he had created an earlier disturbance at his home, but failed to find him. A call from a neighbor for the state police at Paintsville got no answer.

The family of the slain fire chief discounted the theory expressed here to the effect that Blackburn may have held a grudge against Gray because Gray got his job as head of the fire department. "We just think he didn't know what he was doing," they said.

Gray was employed as fire chief last June. He formerly was policeman here and a deputy sheriff. He was a Democratic candidate for Sheriff at the 1957 primary election.

Blackburn became fire chief after the death of his father, Arthur Blackburn, who held the post for many years. Both men were regarded as highly efficient in the work of organizing, training and maintaining the department here.

Funeral of Mr. Blackburn was held Wednesday at 3 p.m., from the First Presbyterian Church here where he attended Sunday School. The pastor, the Rev. Paul Bingham, and the Rev. Harold W. Dorsey

Perry, Acting Fire Chief At Present, Mayor Says; Cooperation Is Invited

Johnny Perry is acting fire chief here following the death of Amos Gray and the formal appointment of a head of the department will not be rushed, it was indicated by Mayor Bill Napier.

The mayor explained that Perry has been substituting for Mr. Gray on the day off given him each week, that he is thoroughly familiar with the equipment, and that otherwise the volunteer department is at normal strength.

Discussing the double tragedy of last Sunday when Fire Chief Gray and Vernon Blackburn, former chief of the fire department, killed each other, Mayor Napier said he is not satisfied with the work of Prestonsburg police but that he does not have all the facts pertaining to police activities prior to the shooting.

He also said he has been urging the padlocking of the Turner hotel here but that preparation by the City Attorney of necessary legal papers has been delayed.

"I want to see Prestonsburg make progress, but we have got to start thinking about the people as a whole and their welfare if we are to do anything," Mayor Napier said. He added that he invites the people to work with him, to attend Council meetings and to show an active interest in a better town.

FLOYD SOLDIER AT CASSINO

While finishing up Fred Majdalany's "The Battle of Cassino," I was handed, merely as a coincidence, a clipping from a metropolitan newspaper on a Floyd soldier who was with the Fifth Army there battling toward Rome in 1944. The story was by Graham Hovey, war correspondent, and was datelined, "With The Fifth Army at Cassino, March 17 (INS) Delayed."

There was no individual heroics in that story no acts of outstanding personal bravery mentioned. It is the story of a few incidents in a battle in which a Floyd soldier had a part. Just to survive at Cassino required courage and heroism. Earl Hall was there, as were other Floyd soldiers. Hall rode in a jeep with a noted war correspondent who depicted the holocaust of battle.

Hovey, Hall and Capt. Mark Reardon, of New York, rode the night of March 17 into the town of Cassino after it had been battered to pieces by American bombers. German soldiers had barricaded themselves behind and within the rubble. A few moments before the trio arrived 51 New Zealand soldiers were shot down by a hail of bullets from 40 yards down the street.

The three, after a short journey toward Cassino, parked the jeep and struck out on foot into the Rapido River valley where the tide of battle had ebbed and flowed for days, where the stench of death and cordite was all around and machine gun bullets splattered before, behind and around them but they were not hit. Overhead the big guns flung great shells toward a mountain-side. The star shells exploded in the darkness and the earth rumbled from the roar of the artillery.

The correspondent, Hall and Reardon trudged across a bridge in the darkness and began to inch forward.

From here we allow Hovey to tell the story. It is not merely the story of a battle in which one Floyd soldier participated but it is typical of life as many other young Floyd men lived under from day to day.

The Hovey narrative continues: On the other side of the bridge occasional New Zealand soldiers filed toward the rear. The walking got much tougher as we went along because of bombs and craters in the road and the enemy added to our discomfort. They were starting to shell the valley on both sides.

At intervals tracers flew out of a spot known as Hangman's Hill, as well as Monte Cassino, then a stream of lead followed. When flares were sent up we hid in ditches.

The small arms and machine gun fire grew louder as we moved up. We passed several bulldozers working on a road. Those bulldozer guys are tops," Mark said. "It's wonderful the way they go right on with their job under fire with nothing to protect themselves."

On a stretcher by the side of the road a wounded New Zealander lay very still. I asked him where he got hit.

"Machine gun slugs in the knee," he said. "I was a first aid man trying to evacuate wounded men when they let me have it."

An orderly who was standing there with him, said: "There's daylight and darkness, then another day—I lose all track of time up here." Then the wounded New Zealander made the remark that it seemed like three months since yesterday.

When a jeep ambulance came along we helped slide the stretcher in the grove and wished the wounded veteran good luck.

"Wonderful things, these jeeps—they're winning the war," said the New Zealander whose own countrymen are winning this particular war a few hundred yards up the road.

A short time later, Mark turned to me and said: "We're in Cassino now."

I looked around. We seemed to be in some kind of a square. There seemed to be one fairly intact building on the left and nothing but occasional white walls anywhere else. The bulk of Mount Cassino loomed up—seemed only a few yards off.

A few tanks and a handful of soldiers were standing guard as stretcher bearers labored through the rubble with their burdens.

We waded through plaster and mud to a cavelike hole. I almost tripped over the body of a soldier near the entrance. Then we got down on our hands and knees and crawled through a tunnel. My steel helmet scraped the tunnel roof but I don't think it was that sound that made shivers run up and down my spine.

Finally we stood erect again and by the light of a lantern I saw that we were in a cellar of a ruined building. Wounded men lay all over the place. Most of them were sniper casualties. They smoked and said little or nothing.

It's true that wounded men don't cry.

DIAMONDS ARE A girl's best friend, they say. Oddly enough they're also good friends of the telephone company. Industrial diamonds—black and greasy—are used as dies to reduce copper wires all to exactly the same size. Last year more than $200,000 worth of diamonds were used to streamline 48,000,000 miles of copper wire to uniform size. You don't ordinarily think of diamonds when you think of everyday telephone service, but it takes many products and many people to keep the calls going through.

REMEMBER THIS ONE? A lot of our young people may be humming it as June brings their wedding day closer. If you'd like to "ring a bell" with a gift that's really different, send the happy couple an extension phone in color to match their new apartment or home! We have nine decorator shades to choose from. It's the ideal gift because it's inexpensive as well as good-looking and practical.

TIPS TO HUBBY: Just a little reminder that last June's bride is this year's anniversary girl. Surprise her with a lovely extension phone... have a new "bell" ringing for you and your gal.

STRMPPH! LA LA! Overseas telephone service is now provided to 119 countries and territories. Last year use of this service increased 20% over the preceding year. Between points served by new underseas cables the increase was even greater.

HERE IN OUR OWN COUNTRY Long Distance calling increased 7.5%. Looks like folks realize more and more just how nice it is to keep in touch with out-of-town friends and relatives.

Our service is marked by our high standards of integrity and sympathetic attention to all details in accordance with the family's wishes.

One call to us, and our thoughtful staff takes care of all arrangements at time of sorrow. Our reverent services are a lasting, beautiful memory.

Alcohol Acts As Stimulant And Depressant, Too

Frankfort, June—Dr. Otto L. Bettag, director of public welfare for the State of Illinois, delivered to the Institute on Alcoholism, Committee on Alcoholism of the American Medical Association an address on "Alcoholism in Illinois," which is also applicable to Kentucky. Dr. Bettag said:

"Alcoholism is a social problem. It is an economic problem. It is, of course, a medical problem. It is a paradox that alcohol may act simultaneously as a stimulant and a depressant. It may stimulate a man's imagination, his base desires and instincts, at the same time it depresses the inhibitory mechanism which would normally control his actions . . .

"All of us have had occasion to observe the marked personality change in some individuals after they have had two drinks. We have observed the normally quiet, retiring individual suddenly become 'the life of the party.' We have observed normally peaceful individuals suddenly become aggressively argumentative, perhaps even physically violent and viciously brutal. The reason for mentioning this paradox is to point up the difficulty of accurately assessing the true extent of the problem relating to the use of alcoholic beverages.

"Perhaps the total problem may be likened to a huge iceberg . . . with only one ninth of its bulk visible above the surface . . . the vastly greater, costlier, more dangerous portion, that which is concealed from view. It seems wise to remember this when estimating the cost of alcoholism.

"As we aim at control and rehabilitation we must not lose sight of the need for effort aiming at prevention. Perhaps the most important part of a campaign for prevention is educational program . . . utilizing all available communications media . . . and aimed at informing the general public concerning the nature and effect of the total problem. If I seem overly repetitious in the use of the word 'problem' it is because in alcoholism, we have a condition which is perplexing, presently unsolved, and urgently requiring solution. As is true in connection with every social problem, an enlightened public holds the key to solution."

These quotations from Dr. Bettag's address points out the pressing need for public interest and public understanding that alcoholism is not confined to the skid row bum or the chronic jail offender. It affects 6 1/2 percent of every segment of our drinking population. The past decade has shown that alcoholics who desire and seek help can find it. Realization that the alcoholic is ill, that he needs help and that he can be helped in the first step in the right direction.

BREATHITT'S NEW OIL FIELD TERMED 'GOLDEN TRIANGLE'

Oil rigs are springing up all over Breathitt county's "golden triangle"—along the roads, on hillsides, deep in the woods and far up the hollows.

Highways are crowded with huge tanker trucks hauling black gold to the refinery.

Experienced oil men are convinced that this oil discovery, which promises to revamp the economy of an impoverished county, is no flash in the pan.

"This is going to be a real oil field," says Arch L. Thompson, gas and oil inspector for the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals. "If it had shown any signs of weakening in a week or two after it was discovered, I wouldn't have thought much about it. But the flow keeps on getting stronger."

Standing beside the Prater well, at the junction of Kentucky Highways 30 and 315, a few miles west of Jackson, John Robinson voiced his feelings.

"This oil boom means everything to the people of Breathitt County," he said. "It's a godsend. There was a time when the whole county was covered with valuable hardwood; but now the trees have all been timbered off. Then there was wealth in the coal seams; but most of the good coal has been mined out. Now we have this oil. We have something to hope for now."

Robinson, a Jackson businessman who owns a string of gasoline filling stations, owns one-eighth of the Prater well, which came in the night of April 18 and has been producing more than 100 barrels a day ever since, with no signs of weakening.

Robinson and seven associates have leases on 800 acres surrounding the highly successful Prater well, so called because its permit was issued in the name of Earl Prater, Falcon, one of the eight. They are preparing to drill three more wells on their holdings.

The Prater well, one of the 30 or more drilled since the Highland Field was discovered last January, came in as a mild gusher, spouting oil at least 30 feet above the rig top before the workers could get it capped. This well, like others in the new field, requires no pumping. Gas pressure in the oil-bearing formation is enough to force the oil up through the 6 1/2-inch well casings and into the 2-inch pipes that carry the oil from wells to trucks.

This new oil discovery is bringing a lot of money into Breathitt county. The oil sells at $3 for a 40-gallon barrel, and there's no difficulty in getting rid of it. An Ashland Oil Company tanker truck is always on hand to take it away.

The drilling outfits receive $2.50 a foot for sinking the wells. As most of the wells come in at about 1,800 feet, it costs in the neighborhood of $4,500 to sink one of these wells.

The oil discovery has been a delight to the owner of an almost worthless tract of land within sight of the Prater well. He sold the mineral rights alone on a 91-acre hillside for $9,100, plus a one-eighth royalty on any oil that might be produced there.

Naturally, oil is the subject of almost every conversation at Jackson, which is humming. It is practically impossible to get a place to stay in the County seat without a week's advance notice, and the few eating places are crowded. Many oil workers, accustomed to that sort of thing, have moved in with their house trailers.

"People are buying and trading oil leases like cattle," Thompson chuckled, and the whole area is filled with drillers, contractors and supply men. He said he counted 13 different engineering crews operating in the Golden Triangle one day last week.

Although most of the wells are being sunk by big outfits from other oil-producing states, many of the Breathitt county wells are being exploited by individuals and groups of men in Breathitt and adjacent counties.

And whereas all the oil now is being trucked out of the area, the Ashland Oil Company is planning to install a pipeline from the new field to its pumping station near Campton. This company has installed a 1,000-barrel storage tank on KY 52, about 7 miles out of Jackson. Oil from several wells is piped into that tank and held for the trucks. This big tank alone has been handling up to 650 barrels a day, said one of the workmen there.

Some wells are being drilled within a few hundred yards of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, which skirts the field.

Only a few dry holes have been sunk, Thompson said, and these seem to be on the outer limits of the triangle formed by the junction of KY-30 and KY-52. The dry holes are filled with mud and cement to prevent salt water from mixing with the underground fresh-water seams.

The producing wells are flowing at the rate of from 40 to 135 or even perhaps more barrels in a 24-hour period. The flow is holding up remarkably well, according to the inspector, who said that the Creesh well, which came in last January at an initial flow of 118 barrels a day, continues to produce 100 barrels a day. And one of the wells of the Petroleum Exploration Company has a steady flow of 135 barrels a day.

Some of the wells could produce even more, but the output is regulated.

The pressure is so high Thompson said, that it has not been necessary to "shoot" these wells, either, with high explosives or with acid. The drillers merely sink the shaft into the "pay" formation and let nature take its course. This oil-soaked rock strata is about 86 feet thick. Drillers of the Prater well had to halt their shaft after it had penetrated only 8 feet into the pay formation, because of the oil pressure.

Drillers of wells even outside the Golden Triangle are highly optimistic, since nobody knows for sure what the limits of this field are. Take Jonas Miller, for instance. An experienced gas and oil well operator from Prestonsburg, "Preacher" Miller is sinking a well near KY-52. The nearest producing well to his is a mile and a half away. But he expects to find oil where he is drilling.

"I look for this field to be the greatest thing that ever hit Kentucky," he said, explaining that he is only getting started on his well, which will take 20 days to drill into the pay formation.

And Thompson added, "This is the biggest oil boom I ever heard of in all the 40 counties of my district."

Oil produced last year in a dozen widely scattered wells in Breathitt county totaled 32,361 barrels, while Kentucky's entire production for 1957 in 59 counties was 17,087,909 barrels. Kentucky counties producing more than 1,000,000 barrels last year were Henderson, with 3,218,041; Union, 1,956,291; Magoffin, 1,852,690; Daviess, 1,610,982; Webster, 1,422,431; Ohio, 1,186,084, and Muhlenberg, 1,102,353 barrels.

Adjacent to Breathitt are three of the oil-producing counties. The huge gas-producing counties of Kentucky lie just east of Breathitt. They are Pike, Floyd, Knott, Magoffin, Johnson and Martin, with some in Clay, Leslie, Bell and Whitley.

PEALE HELPS BATTERS, CLAIM MADE BY CONN

By Quentin Allen

It's surprising how complicated some baseball players can get about the subject of hitting.

On the surface, a bad hitter just can't hit and the good ones really meet the ball, squarely and cleanly.

Harold Conn, a rather successful professional minor league hitter, was holding forth on the subject at the Fountain Korner the other day.

"It's your attitude that determines your success or failure at the plate. You know," he said, "I believe that Norman Vincent Peale's book on Positive Thinking is a must for baseball players. Every batter ought to think that he is going to get a base hit every time at bat. He ought to be firmly convinced that there isn't a pitcher who can get him out."

Harold, a resident of Harold, is the holder of a lifetime mark boring the .300 circle in minor league baseball. He is a firm believer in Little League baseball and the following leagues which permit a boy to develop his ability in baseball and enjoy team fellowship and play.

Conn was reminiscing about the reasons why he did not make the coveted big leagues. "When I was a kid," he said, "I played every position. And I grew up and played every position. Consequently I never learned to play one position as it should be played. I think my playing would have been helped if I had concentrated on outfield, instead of playing catcher, pitcher, shortstop, third base, second, first, everything. Playing one position is a fulltime job," he said.

"That's no sour grapes," Conn quickly added, "but some promising kid who might want to play professionally might profit by concentrating on one position."

Conn is of the opinion that youngsters need the supervision of more adults who have studied the game. He said they need men who can teach the game and, at the same time, teach the principles of fair play.

Conn said he has been out of baseball for the last two years but is now playing with the Shelby team in the Mountain Baseball League. He said he has his hitting trouble but expects to get started. (As of last week Conn had crashed two homers and some long base hits.)

"I used that Norman Vincent Peale stuff one time. I told myself I'd get base hits at least fifteen times during one season—really convincing myself that I'd get a base hit. I got fifteen base hits. If I could have gone to the plate—firmly convinced of a hit every time—my average would have been better. As it was I hit around .300 with 170 basehits per season but nothing phenomenal."

Floyd countians will remember Conn as the hard-hitting outfielder who teamed up with Bill Gobel, Jr., Sonny Allen, Red Darnon, Joe Hinchmann, and others to give Harold of the old Elkhorn League a dangerous club. Not long after his distinguished play with the Harold team, a Cleveland scout, Joe David Weddington, now a Prestonsburg businessman, signed Conn to a contract.

Now Conn, out of professional baseball, is working for the man who scouted him, Weddington, who holds down an outfield post on the Shelby team.

And old man river just keeps rolling along. Basehits keep spraying off the bat of Jimmy Vance, Shelby catcher. Jimmy is a clean, sharp hitter who looks like a picture at the plate. So far this season his average has been astronomical—or something.

Jimmy Goines, Drift righthander, is an excellent professional prospect. That is a qualified statement, written after futilely striking out three times against Goines, who shot out the Prestonsburg team 8-0 several weeks ago. Goines is a robust righthander whose fast ball takes off. He struck out about 18 Prestonsburg batters who gathered only four hits off him.

Johnny Ellis, Prestonsburg catcher, had an odd experience Sunday against Wheelwright.

Two runners mistakenly wound up on third base and both tried to score after being discovered.

One followed the other, almost toe-to-heel, into home plate. Ellis, in the excitement tagged both of them, although there were two out at the time.

SPORTS AFIELD

By TED KESTING

There is some confusion in the proper nomenclature of certain types of lures reports Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield Magazine.

A large blade revolving loosely around a shank is called a spoon; but in smaller sizes it's a spinner. The term "spinner" is also given to a small, propeller-shaped lure, either in single or double form. Then, there's the wobbling-type metallic lure, completely different because it does not revolve; this, whether it's large or small, is also called a spoon.

Some lures come with a small, built-in keel. However, many do not, and so you must add one. It may be a small piece of sheet lead cut to size and clamped on; or a little dipsey sinker on the snap of the leader will do.

How can you tell if there's enough keel to prevent twisting? Just tie a toothpick or match into the line at right angles. Then make a short cast and retrieve at the greatest speed you'll use in fishing. If the toothpick turns, your line is twisting, so you need a heavier or more off-center keel. Of course, you remove the toothpick once you've satisfied yourself about the matter.

Some lures come with wire weedguards. It's well not to use them unless the weeds are heavy. With these lures, it's generally difficult to throw the weedguards out of operation temporarily and then get them back into place again. The answer is to buy two such lures and remove the weedguard completely from one.

Some users of spinning tackle stick exclusively to metallic lures. This is unquestionably a mistake for, useful though they are, there is no one type of lure that's always best — there are times when a good plug would get them more fish, especially bass.

A pork rind improves the action of almost every spoon of the wobbling type, and brings more strikes—and also is very likely to keep it from turning over and twisting the line. However, when too many strikes are being missed there's a strong chance that the fish are hitting the rind only; so it should be removed, or at least cut short.

Junior Golf Tournament Scheduled June 26-27 At Beaver Valley Course

Plans for the 13th International Jaycee Junior Golf Tournament are currently under way, according to Quentin Allen, chairman for the event in Prestonsburg.

The Prestonsburg Junior Chamber of Commerce golf program will again be conducted in cooperation with the Coca-Cola Bottlers throughout the United States.

The tournament will be staged at the Beaver Valley Golf Course at Allen, June 26 and 27. All Floyd county boys who have not reached their 18th birthday as of August 15 are eligible to compete in the Junior Chamber of Commerce golf program.

The junior golf program, as it is conducted by Junior Chambers throughout the country, is considered "The Nation's Number One Junior Golf Event." Last year over 35,000 teenagers representing over 1,100 communities took part.

The program culminates each year with the international finals. This year over 210 contestants representing all 48 states, D. C., Canada, and the Canal Zone will be present in Tucson, Arizona. The international finals are scheduled to be played on the famous El Rio Golf Course, August 18 to 23.

Area Development Needs Public Aid

Frankfort, June 9 (SpL)—"The whole-hearted support of all" is necessary to develop thoroughly the recreation and tourist advantages of eastern Kentucky, Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield said.

Waterfield spoke at the dedication of a new swimming pool in Levi Jackson State Park.

He described the dedication as the completion of another segment in plans to encourage the development of recreation and tourist trade in Kentucky.

"Eastern Kentucky," he said, "has many attractions awaiting only the proper roads and other facilities to make them accessible to the traveling public."

"These sites can be developed through proper planning and co-operation. The wholehearted support of all is necessary. This is not something that can be dictated from the state government, but must be built solidly on local support."

He added, "State projects can do much toward forming the nucleus around which private enterprise can flourish."

Waterfield said state government was vitally concerned with the improvement of statewide tourist facilities, particularly in eastern Kentucky.

DANIEL URGES TREE SETTING

In Eastern Kentucky To Advance Program To Assist Section

Reforestation of Eastern Kentucky was advanced this week as a future aid to an ailing regional economy by Dewey Daniel, Hazard banker.

Daniel suggested that the East Kentucky Regional Planning Commission help set up a five-year program for planting of from 100,000,000 to 500,000,000 trees each year.

Tree-planting programs are already in operation in some counties. But these are "only a drop in the bucket," Daniel said.

Daniel said his home county of Perry has planted about 2,000,000 trees in the past several years.

Such a reforestation program as he proposed could, in the future, attract industries that use wood products such as pulp, paper, furniture and the like. It also would help solve flood-control and soil-erosion problems.

To start the program Daniel said he is trying to arrange for purchase of a tract of cleared timberland on Quicksand Creek in Perry and Breathitt counties to give to Berea College for a reforestation project.

The commission authorized its executive director, John Whisman, to study:

1. A tree-planting program, with recommendations to the commission.
2. Local-tax aspects of such a program, with recommendations in time for the 1960 General Assembly.

Daniel said the Kentucky Bankers Association is interested in reforestation, but has never contributed financially to such a program.

He suggested that East Kentucky banks set up a pool, buy seedlings, and distribute them among the counties. The program, he added, would be coordinated with state and federal conservation agencies.

The main problem, Daniel said, is to get local people interested in reforestation.

Col. George T. Derby, Ashland, supported the proposal, but suggested that tax aspects of the program be studied. His opinion was that cut, not standing, timber should be taxed to make reforestation more profitable to the land owner.

(Kentucky law requires timberland to be assessed according to the fair market value of standing timber.)

The commission, at Daniel's request, also endorsed printing of a brochure of local improvements at Hazard.

Daniel told members that "millions are on the march to our community." He listed new roads, Buckhorn Dam scheduled to be completed by 1960, a proposed new state park, airport to provide commercial service, urban-renewal projects, sewage-disposal plant, and other projects in Hazard and Perry county.

The brochure also would describe work of the commission. It would be wholly financed by private interests in Hazard.

Commission members agreed that improvements at Hazard could serve as an example to other towns.

Paul Menk, Washington, executive director of the Association of State Planning and Development Agencies, told the commission that Kentucky has the most comprehensive economic development program he has studied.

Menk said that if the Federal government should authorize a $25,000,000 public-works program, Kentucky would be in position to provide data that would help determine eligibility.

Gayheart-Hall Vows Solemnized At Allen

Troy Hall, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Hall and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Riley Hall, of Allen, and Mary Alice Gayheart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gayheart, of Hindman, were united in marriage, May 31, at 6 p.m. at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Reece, pastor of the First Baptist church of Allen.

The bride wore a white embroidered sheer street length dress with a blue corsage. Miss Ann Sturdivant, of Hindman, friend of the bride, was maid-of-honor. Mr. Johnny Bradley, of Wayland served as best man.

Mrs. Hall is a graduate of Hindman high school and of the Mayo Vocational school, Paintsville, and was employed by the Board of Education of Knott county.

Mr. Hall was graduated from Prestonsburg high school and is a student at Pikeville College.

The couple left shortly after the ceremony for a brief trip to Virginia. They plan to reside at Allen.

McMillen and Others Witness Demonstration By de Gaulle Supporters

Some of the events, marked by tenseness, that led up to the installation of de Gaulle as premier of France were witnessed last Friday night by the Rev. Ira McMillen, pastor of Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church here, and seven other members of his party while they were in Paris on a tour of Europe and en route to the Holy Land.

Wrote the Prestonsburg minister from Paris:

"Eight of us from our party decided to tour a part of the city on foot, so we struck out from the hotel and walked through the theatre and cafe district past the Obelisk of Ramesses II. . . . We continued up the Des Champs-Elysees to the Arch of Triumph. It was in this area that several thousands of policemen and soldiers were stationed, expecting some sort of demonstration in regard to the recent political crisis. Soon several hundred students began to form and someone came through in a car flying a large French flag and that set off quite a demonstration which we watched for nearly an hour.

"Two of our party stayed longer and said they saw one car turned over and a fire started in the street. The police came quickly and dispersed the group. I think it was all for excitement and in fun, but if it had gotten out of hand it would have been dangerous."

This was a demonstration in favor of de Gaulle, the minister wrote. Two days earlier, however, 200,000 persons in a poorer section of Paris demonstrated against him.

Modern Families Everywhere— are Living Better Electrically...

More time for "fancy" cooking!

More time for relaxation!

More time for hobbies!

"All of our appliances are electric... real time savers! That's why we have more time for hobbies and pastimes"

"Ours is a busy family," Mrs. Charles E. Buck says. "My husband and daughter Barbara have many interests. In addition to my regular housework, I do a lot of baking, sewing and gardening and much church work. We couldn't possibly participate in these activities to the extent we do without plenty of help from electricity. My range is my favorite helper, and I never feel uneasy when Barbara tries her hand at cooking or baking. It's safe!"

Mr. Buck, a sales manager, agrees. "You've got a lot to like when you have the appliances we have in our home. We're living better with electricity, and any other way of living, in my opinion, would be thought of as 'old-timey'. And penny for penny, I think we're getting more for our money in electric service than anything else we could buy today."

Here are some of the Buck's modern electric appliances —

- Range
- Washer
- Clothes Dryer
- Blankets
- Sewing Machine
- Toaster
- Radios
- Television Sets
- Record Player
- Water Heater
- Refrigerator
- Coffee Maker

"Endless Waters" Shown Editors

Conrad Nagel, narrator of "Endless Waters," presented nightly at Cumberland Falls State Park.

Frankfort, June 9 (Spl.)—The first showing of "Endless Waters" was presented at the opening night of the Kentucky Press Association summer meeting at Cumberland Falls.

Conrad Nagel, narrates the story based on the 23rd Psalm and prepared especially for the place of the "Moonbow." It will be presented nightly at 8 o'clock (EST).

Music by a symphonic orchestra is heard as dozen of lights play upon the Falls while Nagel, a former movie star, speaks.

Eben Henson, Danville, wrote the script in co-operation with Mrs. Ben Kilgore, director of parks. Musical background was compiled and edited by Howard Scott, recording director of Columbia Recording Co., New York City, with stereophonic sound equipment installed by J. M. Hisle and Associates, Lexington.

Lights over, under and behind the Falls, as well as along the gorge and in the trees, were installed by REA. Special platform for the seating area is near the base of the Falls.

The production cost the Division of Parks several thousand dollars, Mrs. Kilgore said, and is intended to create a spiritual experience for the public in association with the extraordinary wonders of God's handiwork seen here.

"We feel the drama reveals resources available to the human spirit are as limitless as the endless waters of the Falls," the director added.

Governor Helm Was Considered A Secessionist

By Charles F. Hinds, Secretary-Treasurer, Kentucky Historical Society

Frankfort, June 12 — If it is true that Kentucky seceded from the Union after the War Between the States was concluded as a Cincinnati newspaper announced in 1868, then, prominent in that secession was John Larue Helm, twice governor of Kentucky, 1850-51 and 1867.

Governor Helm had spent the major part of his adult life in Kentucky politics and as president of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, but in 1860 he retired to his farm near Elizabethtown. He was considered a Confederate sympathizer during the war, partly because of his known attraction to the rebel cause and partly because of his son, Benjamin Hardin Helm, a Confederate general killed in the battle of Chickamauga.

Following the war, Governor Helm re-entered politics and was elected to the state senate. In December 1865, as chairman of the Committee on Federal Relations, Helm led the successful fight to restore full rights of citizenship to returning Confederate soldiers.

Almost two years later Helm was swept into office as governor in an election year which sent to Congress the complete slate of the Confederate-Democrat ticket, which led Senator Charles Sumner of Massachusetts, a leading Radical Republican in Congress, to say that "nothing can be more certain than that Kentucky at this time is without a republican form of government."

Helm, however, lived only five days after taking the oath of office as governor for the second time. (In his first term, 1850-51, he replaced John J. Crittenden, who resigned to become attorney general of the United States.)

Governor Helm was born in 1802, the son of George and Rebecca Larue Helm, on the old Helm place, formerly the site of Helm Station, founded in 1781 by his grandfather, Thomas Helm.

He married Lucinda Barbour Hardin, daughter of Ben Hardin, a prominent Kentucky lawyer. Twelve children were born of this marriage, eleven of whom lived beyond infancy.

Helm's political career was confined to his native state. He served 11 years in the house, five years of which as speaker, and six years in the state senate.

He is buried near the ancestral Helm home in Elizabethtown. Over his grave stands a handsome monument erected by the Commonwealth of Kentucky.
