

Fight on Strip-Mining Centers in 2 Counties

Knott Co. Court Acts To Outlaw Strip Industry

The growing pattern of resistance to strip-mining centered last week on neighboring Knott and Johnson counties, with the Knott fiscal court last Saturday reaching a landmark decision in voting to outlaw the industry.

In Johnson county the battle was being waged between irate householders and coal-truckers who, the citizens' group says, are damaging roads with over-weight trucks and creating a damaging dust problem.

Notices that strip mining is no longer permitted in Knott county were due to be sent out Monday to all strip-mine companies which hold permits and to officials of the Kentucky Division of Reclamation, according to Knott County Clerk Archie Everage.

The clerk said a resolution adopted by the county fiscal court Saturday banning strip mining is worded so that the reclamation department could not issue further strip-mine permits in the county and could not renew those permits now in effect when they expire.

Knott County Judge Sid Williams, after much deliberation, broke a 2-2 magistrate vote Saturday as the fiscal court voted to ban strip mining.

Knott county thus became the first Kentucky county with active strip mines to ban such mines.

Some 200 persons were present in the Knott court Saturday, and several witnesses voiced their opposition to strip mining.

The action followed a public hearing last month in which the magistrates voted 3-1 in adopting a resolution that cited strip mining as "a public nuisance in Knott county."

The resolution to ban strip mining was introduced by Magistrate Dan Wicker and seconded by Birchel Smith. They voted for it.

Opposing the measure were Magistrates Bill Everage and Johnny Dyer. Judge Williams then broke the tie vote.

However, Everage said he expects the (See Story No. 4, Page 14)

Three Raids Net Beer, Whiskey Last Weekend

Three raids staged last week by sheriff's deputies and ABC agents netted almost 35 cases of beer, 45 half-pints of whiskey, a moonshine still which had long lain idle and two barrels of mash, the product of another still which was not found.

First of the raids was made last Thursday when Deputy Sheriff's Dester Hamilton and Paul Stilton confiscated 14 cases of beer from the premises of Orville Tom Hall on Branham's Creek.

Saturday night, Hamilton and Deputy Sheriff Ray Adkins raided the premises of Walker Newsome at Price, confiscating 14 cases of beer, 19 cans of beer and 36 half-pints of whiskey.

A Sunday raid on the premises of Irvin Hamilton on Mud Creek netted 131 cans of beer and nine half-pints of whiskey Deputy Sheriff Bill Hall and two ABC agents made this raid.

The unused moonshine still was found on Honey Camp Branch of Jack's Creek. The mash was found near Hi Hat by Deputy Sheriff's Bill Hall, Otto Fannin, Victor Tackett and Grady Skeans.

Nine persons were arrested by Conservation Officers Conley, Prater and Cantrell in the county last week on charges of fishing without license. Defendants were listed as Thomas G. Haas, Carl G. Hunter, Gary L. Berry, Marvin L. Stockdale, Peggy Steele, Gary Bartoe, Roger L. Southers, James Steele and David E. Lohss.

Others booked at the county jail, charges against each, and names of arresting officers follow:

Pike Grand Jury Indicts Bailey In Jones Death

One of three murder indictments reported Monday by the Pike circuit court grand jury named Henry D. Bailey for the April 15 slaying on Island Creek, Pike county of former Floyd countian Bill Jones, 30. His bond was set at $5,000.

Jones, a mine foreman, was shot as he left his home for work. The two men were brothers-in-law. The victim was a son of the Rev. and Mrs. Charlie Jones, of Bevinville.

Date of Bailey's trial had not been set Monday.

2nd Fire House Work Nearing, Archer Says

Mayor George P. Archer said an effort is being made to get plans prepared for the fire station to be built at Lancer.

The station, equipped and manned, he said, will mean a sizeable saving in fire insurance premiums. The saving to Highland Heights, the rent-supplement housing complex built in the Goble-Roberts Addition by the Prestonsburg Ministerial Association, would, for example, be around $5,000 a year. Property in the Goble-Roberts Addition will be insured under seventh-class classification, once the new fire station is completed, instead of the present 10th class.

Dr. Archer said city employees may do a portion of the construction work, with the remainder negotiated with a contractor. The building will be of steel construction with brick front.

PCC Gets $15,521 To Fund Program For Orientation

Prestonsburg Community College has been awarded a Career Orientation Program grant of $15,521.40 from the State Department of Education, Vocational Education Division, for this summer. It is one of five community colleges to have a program funded for the summer of 1970.

The primary purpose of the Career Orientation Program, which will be held June 15 to August 15, is to orient students to academic programs at the two-year college or vocational school levels in preparation for a particular profession. Through this program, students will be taught basic skills which will enable them to have more job opportunities and improve job security.

The program is set up for approximately 75 students to benefit who will graduate from the high schools in the area served by the college, students of 18 years of age who did not graduate from high school who come under the Winn Program, etc., but might benefit from this program, or other students who could be considered for special admission.

"Hopefully, we would prepare these people to enter a college technical program or a vocational education program during (See Story No. 5, Page 14)

The best remedy science has yet been able to come up with for a painful conscience is a liberal application of what was once known as shiplasters.

S-P-T-SCAT!

These women are a cattish breed, somebody other than this recorder of events has observed. Only the other day I stood by while a woman was telling how she proposed at some future date—namely, the first opportunity—to tell off but thoroughly another of her sex. When her descriptive powers failed her she concluded: "Oh, just let me get in spittin' distance of her!"

THE PULL OF ADVERTISING

Speaking of cats, we use the following to put in a plug for the power of Floyd County Times advertising. Last week, our Jimmy Goble inserted a small ad, offering a passel of kittens for the asking. The paper "hit the street," as Charles Clark once unfortunately remarked, Wednesday afternoon. By Thursday afternoon calls had come from Estill, Garrett, Martin, Allen, some wanting as many as two kittens. One woman didn't call—just drove in for her kitten.

Wish somebody who turned out into a cold, unfriendly world a little puppy I saw on a back-country road, in Johnson county, the other day, had cared enough to try to find it a home.

DOUBLE-BARRELED COMPLAINT

Bill Gibson, South-Central Bell manager, has his troubles, too, I learned this week at the end of my own personal jeremiad. It was I who griped last week about these calls my phone takes when somebody from Prestonsburg tries direct dialing to Paintsville. Others call him to report all kinds of situations. This one drew a smile from the man and drawn countenance:

This woman called to report that another woman had reported to her boy-friend's wife, who lived in another state, his extramarital shenanigans.

"But, lady, there isn't anything I can do about this, is there?" Mr. Gibson remonstrated.

"Oh, yes, there is," the irate caller shot back. "This tattler charged that call to my phone!"

CHANGING TIMES

Jack Branham sends the following along to us for the wider circulation it deserves. ONCE UPON A TIME . . .

If a husband and wife seemed to need only each other, we described them as a "devoted couple." Now, they are referred to as "loners."

Summer Music Theatre Cast Opens Rehearsals Sunday of "Hello, Dolly"

Managing Director Mitch Douglas opened the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre rehearsals Sunday afternoon by informing the entire company (some 40-strong stage aspirants) that this is expected to be the company's best season ever.

Said Douglas:

"We are competing with our own record, and our past attendance and response clearly indicates that the citizenry of this community respond warmly and enthusiastically to good theatre.

"And if one can judge the calibre of the company's performances-to-come by the evening read-thru of "Hello, Dolly", Floyd

Blast Ruins Lake Boat, Burns Two

An explosion on Dewey Lake Saturday at dusk wrecked this $7,000 houseboat and sent its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Perkins, of West Van Lear, to the Prestonsburg General Hospital with second degree burns.

The blast occurred while the boat was at its mooring in the cove at the Jenny Wiley boat dock. Mrs. Perkins was burned about her legs, arms and face, and Mr. Perkins' burns were on his arms and face. Their young son, who was fishing off the bow of the boat, was uninjured.

Perkins said the explosion came as he was attempting to light a Coleman lantern. Although cause of the larger blast, which caved in the sides and roof of the craft and ruined its interior, is not definitely known, the belief was expressed that bottled gas which had accumulated in the hull of the boat may have been ignited.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins are recovering, it was said Tuesday at the hospital.

Motorcade To Join Supporters of Combs

Former Governor Bert T. Combs has announced that he will hold a press conference in the Flag Room of the Kentucky Hotel, Louisville, at 2 p.m. Saturday, when he will announce his candidacy for governor—and Floyd county expects to have a large delegation on hand at that time.

Marvin Music, of Prestonsburg, said Monday that all friends of Judge Combs are being invited to join a motorcade to Louisville which will leave here at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. A chartered Greyhound bus as well as private cars will form the motorcade, which will make stops at Salyersville, Campton, Winchester and Lexington to join other Combs supporters.

Combs' resignation from the U. S. Sixth circuit Court of Appeals bench became effective last Friday. Announcing the press conference after that date had passed, he said he will "discuss briefly the compelling reasons for my decision to seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1971."

Lt. Gov. Wendell H. Ford, of Owensboro, already is a candidate for the office. So is Ex-Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler. Julian Carroll, speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives, has announced for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, as Combs' running-mate, and this week Attorney General John B. Breckinridge announced he will be a candidate for that office. He emphasized he would not be allied with any candidate for governor.

East Kentucky CEP To Do Job Survey Over 22 Counties

The Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (CEP) announced this week that it is planning to conduct during the month of June a complete job market survey in the 22 Eastern Kentucky counties covered by the program.

The survey is for the purpose of deciding what type of job training is needed to meet the immediate and long-range manpower needs of the area employers.

Cooperation from the business community will be of necessity, so that the survey will have an effective impact on the job market needs of this area.

County Board Hires Full Teaching Corps

The Floyd County Board of Education last Saturday employed a full teaching corps for the coming school year and at the same time hired other personnel. (Teacher assignments will appear in next week's edition of The Times.)

Superintendent of Schools Charles Clark said the applications of approximately 50 new teachers are on file but that there are no openings available, barring resignations of some of those employed. "We would like to have these teachers in the school system, but there simply aren't any openings," Mr. Clark said. He added that the average daily attendance, a governing factor in the number of teachers, is still dropping.

Except for the board's ability through Title I funds to add one remedial reading teacher at each of five larger high schools and 15 remedial reading teachers in the elementary schools, 20 teachers would have been without places, it was said.

Title I declined to continue its support of four area consultant positions filled for the last two years on an experimental basis. "We were disappointed," Supt. Clark said, "because we felt they were doing an ex-

Blasts Fired Into Car Kill Floyd Miner

Hall Jailed Here After One Slain, Woman Wounded

Shotgun blasts fired into a moving automobile on Jack's Creek Saturday night claimed the life of a Floyd county man and wounded a woman.

Guy Bates, 45, died instantly when a slug tore into the back of his head. Mrs. Nannie B. Bryant, about 30, was hit in her shoulder by smaller shotgun pellets, but was released from the McDowell Regional Hospital after treatment of her wound. Her husband, James Bryant, driver of the car in which the three were riding, escaped unhurt. All three occupied the same seat of the auto.

Jailed here early Sunday was Whirley Hall, 27, a neighbor of Bates, who lived on the Honey Camp Branch of Jack's Creek. Hall was found by State Police at the home on Dry Creek of his sister, Mrs. Lawrence Cole, across the mountain from the shooting scene. In the arresting party were Capt. Lykins, Sgt. Flora, Troopers Leeman Bevins and Gary Rose, Detective Chester D. Potter and Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo.

Preliminary hearing for Hall has been set for 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Officers said at least three shots were apparently fired from outside of the auto. Lighter shot sprinkled the body and tires of the auto on the driver's side, but a rifle slug, apparently fired from a shotgun through the rear window was the cause of Bates' death, it was said.

The shooting took place around 10 p.m. Bryant told officers he ducked when the firing began and kept driving to his home on Honey Camp Branch, then notified authorities what had happened.

Commonwealth's Attorney Stumbo said Hall admitted firing but said another man fired the shot which killed Bates. Curt Hall was with Whirley Hall at the time, but both he and Whirley Hall are in jail here as they had no part in the shooting.

Officers said Hall and Bates had a disagreement over a road which Hall wanted across his neighbor's land.

The accused man claimed he fired because shots were being fired at him from the auto. Officers said no weapon was found in the car.

The auto in which Bates was killed was ordered towed here Monday from Jack's Creek. Hall was first booked on a murder warrant. A second warrant was issued Monday, charging him with shooting and wounding Mrs. Bryant.

The victim, a miner, was a son of the late Delzie and Sarah Hall Bates. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Verna Bates Hall, of Bevinville, a brother, Dallas Bates, and four grandchildren.

Funeral rites were conducted at 10 a.m. Wednesday from Joppa Regular Baptist Church, and burial in the Jack's Creek cemetery at Bevinville was directed by the Merion Funeral Chapel.

The Court Decides for the People

Willingly or unwillingly, Knott county's fiscal court last Saturday did much for that county and its people when it outlawed strip-mining.

The court's order may not stand attack in the higher courts, but as of this date it is there—a challenge. The courts of a land wherein much is being said, these days, about the ecology and the sure deterioration of the only environment in which human life can be sustained, will be required to determine if the contamination of water, even underground waters, and the destruction of timber and land affect the opportunity of American citizens to "the pursuit of happiness" and a reasonable chance of survival.

If the order is voided, the Knott county decision will still serve to polarize thinking and chide men about their moral obligation to be good stewards of the gift they have received in the form of the beauty of these hills and the onetime purity of their streams.

Somewhere along the line, too, the federal government will be reminded of the part it has played in creating the mess we are in. And the state government will learn that the ordinary man knows of its ardent failure to do its duty.

The coal industry, prosperous as it is, has suffered a severe blow in the Mine Safety Act which requires the non-gaseous as well as the gassiest mine to make costly installations. The federal government, first of all, invited strip-mining by going after the cheapest coal available to stoke its steam power-producing plants for TVA. And now, with this safety legislation that lumps all mines into the same category, it has driven operators away from deep mining to the stripping that is affected little or not at all by safety laws.

The coal industry is vital to the country. But so are the land and the people. Strip-mining does not belong in a terrain such as this. And economic benefits should not be the determining factor when its part in the life of Eastern Kentucky is considered.

There was a time when slavery was considered by many to be an absolute necessity to the progress and prosperity of the West Indies and its sugar cane industry, to the South and its cotton plantations. But when the commercial values of slavery were lost moral values gained. England had no use for the unlettered blacks, and its colonies were not paying off. So the voices of Wilberforce and others were heard, and the time came when they were no longer called wild-eyed reformers. The North in our own country could not use the Negro at the New England looms, and the anti-slavery sentiment arose there.

And so it goes: As the economic value of any cause decreases, the consciences of men grow more sensitive.

Strip-mining does have an economic value—but for whom? And who will be the loser, in the long run? Our consciences may not awaken in time.

We have no desire to see any man lose the money he has invested in a business. But strip-mining holds no future for Eastern Kentucky.

What is worse than a mountain without a top, unless it is a stream so poisonous that heaven's rain, undefiled, cannot drop into it without its becoming a deadly liquid in which life cannot continue?

Letters to the Editor:

FLOYD COUNTY REVISITED... PROGRESS PLEASES BUT LITTER APPALS

As a former Floyd countian, I along with my family revisited the place of my childhood over the Memorial week-end. The changes that have taken place in my home town in the period of 13 years was good to see. I was truly pleased to see the new highways, homes, factories that were, and the ones under construction, and above all the new grade schools that took the place of the one-room school, and the college. These things I pointed to with bubbly pride to my husband and children. It was truly a good feeling to come back and see these marvelous things happen to a place you love.

But something marked this good feeling, something that could only make me bow my head in shame, and that was the mass littering that met our eyes everywhere we looked. The creeks, branches and hollows where I had spent many precious hours of happy childhood fun were so changed! Ugly cars, trucks stripped of all useful parts lay like so many dead corpses in the creeks and along the banks; discarded washers, refrigerators, stoves, cans and trash not only littered the rural roadways, but even in the hollows they lay, and the mountainsides that I had remembered as having lovely wild flowers and beguiling pathways now was the resting place for a graveyard of junk. Even the sacred place of our beloved dead had not escaped the litter.

Cistern Rock, I had told my children and husband about them, and they were very anxious to see them. So on Saturday afternoon, my husband, two oldest sons, age 11 and 8, and a friend and I took the long hike, carrying our tents and sleeping bags to the rocks, and we camped out right below them.

The rocks were just as I had remembered them from days of childhood, huge like a large gray battleship, with trees and wild flowers growing on part of them. My children were awed by them, but we were all awed by the litter that had found its way to the very mountaintop. Nor could I give an satisfactory answer when my eldest son wondered out loud who could throw trash and garbage on such lovely scenery, and mar the beauty that God had given so freely in Floyd county.

My entire family loves Floyd county as much as I do, but it made me sick at heart to have my children denied the right to run and play where not too many years ago I did. They were denied the privilege of splashing in the branches, turning rocks up and watching the crawfish scurrying swiftly away backward.

The hillsides were once an Eden for the young—how often my brothers and friends and I played there. But no more can a child play on the hillsides and in the hollows that we visited, for they, too, are the great resting place of honored junk.

Floyd countians have the right to be proud of the advancement made in the county. They have the right to want to make it even better, but they also have a duty, and that is the duty not only to advance and keep up with the times, but also to clean up their hillsides, creeks, branches, and back roads of all the litter that is lying there.

Floyd countians should be urged to cleanup and bring back all the great natural beauty that was bestowed on the whole county. Make former Floyd countians proud to bring our families back and let us be able to point with pride at how much you, the people, care about your county. Urge the people to use litterbags and dispose of their junk the proper way. Let our children have the same right to run and play in the same places that we did as children, without fear of being hurt on a rusty can or bitten by a snake curled up in an old car or other piece of junk.

Floyd countians have a lot to be proud of, for nowhere have I see the advancement that equals Floyd county's. That pride should extend to every little spot of the county. So as a former Floyd countian I desperately urge the people of Floyd to rise up and clean up before every hollow, creek and rural roadway becomes a mass graveyard of junk.

RHUBARB—FOR PIES OR BEAUTY

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
Staff Writer, UK College of Agriculture

As a gardener, Dr. John Gerard set great store by rhubarb stalks as a sauce and a filler for pies. As a physician, he was equally impressed with its roots as a medicine and an aid to feminine beauty.

Writing in his famous 16th century Herbal, he stated that if, along with a few other herbs, rhubarb roots were steeped for "three daies" in strong ale and used as a table drink for three weeks, it would "purify the blood and make young wenches faire and cherry-like."

Most gardeners, both past and present, have agreed with Old Gerard that rhubarb does indeed make wonderful, tangy pies and appetizing sauces. But not being doctors as he was, they were not, and have not been, too much concerned with producing it as a medicine.

As to its genesis, rhubarb, which most Americans call "pieplant," supposedly originated in the cold tundras of ancient Siberia. The earliest records of its use dates back to about 2700 B. C. in China where its roots were used as a drug. When its stalks were first used as a food, no one knows for sure, but plant detectives state that it was introduced into Europe around 1600 and first grown for food in Italy. By 1800, it was a common plant in home gardens of the New England States where it was grown for tarts and pies. In 1828, it was being listed for sale in American seed catalogs.

Rhubarb is a perennial and is not adapted to hot climates. It grows well, however, in Kentucky and in times past no home garden was considered complete without a clump of this fine plant. One of the first things a young girl used to do after standing up before a preacher and agreeing to share the weal and woe of some equally young rustic, was to secure some rhubarb roots for her garden.

She knew that one of the best ways of keeping a farmer-husband happy was to always have pie on the table, especially in early spring. She also knew that rhubarb was the first plant of spring to produce the filler for pies.

While rhubarb lends itself to the preparation of several delightful dishes which a nutritionist or home demonstration agent can tell about, the plant, paradoxically enough, can also be dangerous. The leaves contain a poisonous substance in sufficient amounts, if eaten, to cause serious illness or even death.

But nobody is likely to eat enough rhubarb leaves to cause serious harm. Like the stalks which raw and unsweetened, have a tooth-sharpening, throat-cutting sharpness, the leaves are likewise tart. Only a person or animal unalterably determined to commit suicide could possibly ingest enough rhubarb leaves to put him out of business permanently.

Rhubarb, like many other horticultural plants, does not come true to seed. As a consequence, horticulturists do not advise attempts to propagate the plant in this manner. Instead they suggest, like the young bride, to propagate it vegetatively by dividing the clumps of plants and replanting the roots.

A rhubarb root with some of the underground stem structures or buds from which the leaves arise will do the job, but since it is a somewhat slow-growing plant, it may take about three years for it to reach productive stage.

This Siberian plant makes wonderful cobbler pies and is an asset to any vegetable garden. As did quaint Old Gerard, modern horticulturists concerned with everybody having a varied diet of vegetables, highly recommend it. Among our common vegetables, it is a most unusual plant.

So You Want To Go To College?

For a Hillbilly boy, raised during the depression at the head of Spurlock, college was out of the question. He was lucky if he could learn to read and write.

Probably because of this, more than anything else, I've always held higher education in high esteem. In fact, until recently I've believed it nearly impossible to get far without it. Read on, and you'll see why I've changed this thinking. In fact, it's rapidly getting to be a handicap to have a college education. People in industry are beginning to have second thoughts about it. They're afraid of what the college man may bring from the campus and no business can afford to have it. In fact, he can't afford to have his business near these great universities while he's still in college. The man he might have hired a few years back just might be the man that would now put him out of business with a fire bomb.

The newspapers reported that Kent State University students were involved in the trouble at the University of Kentucky and played an important part in closing that school. Perhaps you'd be interested in what they left behind after they had closed Kent State, their school, and were ordered off the campus. Bear in mind, they did not leave in haste. Also note, one of their leaders was a 14-year-old girl from Opa-locka, Florida, a child who repeatedly has run away from home since she was ten, meaning her education stopped at that age. To see a college man follow such a leader into battle certainly doesn't say much for the college man's brain power.

Displayed over the fierce objections of 10 Kent State professors were knives, machetes, a shotgun, chains, lead pipes, fire axes, kerosene, turpentine cans, brass knuckles, clubs, sling-shots, burned out stubs of highway flares, rocks wrapped in cloth, pornographic pictures, hallucinogenic drugs, opiates, barbiturates, antihistamine, stimulants, five marijuana plants in milk cartons and vitamin pills. But it was the vitamins that baffled police.

My neighbor's two sons, Dr. Robert Hackne, an interne at Blue Cross Hospital in Akron, and his younger brother, Terry Hackne, a medical student at Ohio State University, toured Kent state during the height of the trouble and viewed many young people in action.

The important thing to remember about these two men is, they're still young enough to be accepted as students and yet educated enough to recognize the symptoms of drug abuse. They said they were certain that the vast majority of those who were violent were under strong influence of drugs. Doctor Bob said the look he saw on many faces was that of a madman. Sane or mad, they made the decision and the University was closed for the quarter. Twenty thousand students will most likely lose their credits for time paid for and spent. An estimated 200 people did it, and there's no doubts anywhere, they were not all students at Kent State.

Articles in The Floyd County Times recently have caused me to think a few college presidents and faculty members are of the belief their schools are safe from this cancer that's spreading throughout this nation. Only the ostrich can get away with burying his head in the sand, if he can. Your college is safe only because they have larger schools to close first. They'll close every school in this nation and they'll keep them closed unless something is done.

You may think as Prime Minister Nevil Chamberlain of Great Britain thought in Munich in 1939 when he gave Hitler so much if Hitler would promise not to invade and take any more countries. Chamberlain, on his return to England, made his famous speech, "Peace in our time." For the answer to that, take a look at history—or, better still, take a look at Ohio State University. Three days ago their president met with the people who had closed that school and granted their every demand, including the release and promise not to press charges against the 123 who were jailed on a number of counts, including, inciting to riot, destruction of private property. Before he was back to his office they were at it again, and again the National Guard had to be called out to put out the fire. Hitler had considerable more respect for Chamberlain, he at least waited until he was back in England before he attacked Poland. The results were similar in nature. This school of 45,000 was closed by an estimated 500. Again the taxpayers of Ohio, as were the taxpayers of Kentucky, hit with a bill of nearly a million dollars. This is to say nothing of the business men who lost everything to the mobs.

Hitler took over Germany with an estimated two percent of the people. The so-called student movement has already more strength than Hitler had when he took over. Twenty-six million people died to correct the mistake made by the German people of thinking Hitler would talk himself to death. Will history repeat itself? What is the solution, and is there an answer? Of course there is, just as there was in Germany.

It should be a three-prong movement. The state must accept its responsibility and increase the state police enough to handle it. Make the campuses air-tight against intrusion. Place a policeman at every door and check every man or woman that goes in or comes out, and arrest any and all violators. Put some starch in the law to keep them in jail for time enough to insure their staying away. It might be a good way to build some more beautiful highways at reduced cost. National Guardsmen are not well enough trained. This was proven at Kent State. Three of the four killed were not involved in anything more than being there. It's my opinion the cost of this would, in the end, be far less than calling up the National Guard repeatedly. Surely much more efficient. It shouldn't make any difference whether they're students or not. If they violate the law, the punishment should be rendered equally. Freedom simply means, freedom for everybody, personal freedom and complete freedom so long as it doesn't take away from anybody else. When anybody, and I do mean anybody, willfully takes away or interferes with the freedom of another, he certainly should lose his own. By his own, I mean just as completely as can be administered under the law. That is the basic fundamental of freedom. It seems to be another of the lost rights of many.

The second prong would be up to the student who goes to college for an education. Nobody has a right to take that away from him. If the hallway is blocked by a sit-in, a building is burned, a street is blocked, that is taking this right to education away, any such student should be able and willing to use whatever means necessary until the arrival of police to remove, open up or defend this right. Just as a property-owner has a right to remove a trespasser from his property. These people who close our schools have no respect or consideration for anything or anybody. They should be treated as they try to treat others.

Third: The school faculty and people who run it should provide a system of testing and it should be part of the entrance examination, to test the afflicant's equality of rights and consideration for others. Something like a security check, and if the afflicant don't add up, he should never under any conditions be accepted. Anybody already in the school who violates these basic human rights should not only be expelled, his credits should all be cancelled.

As a last and final act, and only after everything else has failed, I would recommend the federal government take them all over and run them like any army camp. I don't think anybody would care for that, but it would be better than seeing them all go up in smoke.

Rescue Squad Honors Mrs. Stephens

The fourth WPRT Radio Auction ended recently, and a grateful Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad, beneficiary of the annual event, presented Mrs. D. C. Stephens, of the radio station, a plaque and honorary membership award in recognition of her outstanding service to the Squad.

The radio auction was initiated in 1967 by Mrs. Stephens, and the four auctions held to date have gained for the Emergency and Rescue Squad approximately $16,400. The auction recently concluded realized $3,400.

The 1970 auction enabled the Squad to pay off the $2000 note it made to finance the long and vain search of the Big Sandy for the body of five-year-old Tammy Akers, who with her mother and sister were drowned in a car wreck at Emma last year. The search cost the Squad approximately $3500, Capt. Burchett said. Other auction funds were used in the purchase of two trucks and radio equipment and to pay the cost of repairs of the Squad's building here.

Organized after the 1958 Floyd county school bus tragedy, the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad was the first to be formed in Kentucky. Since that time 45 others have been organized, and the Floyd group was instrumental in the founding of many of these. When a community makes inquiry of state officials at Frankfort about organization methods, referral is almost invariably made to the Floyd county squad. Only recently, a call came from Texas for assistance in organizing a rescue squad.

Squad members say it has been a constant struggle to keep their collective head above the water, but the radio auctions of the last four years, contributions made during "roadblock" solicitations, the work of members to save money at every turn, help from church and civic groups—all have enabled the squad to survive.

"Among our 44 members," Capt. Burchett said, "we have skills for just about any job that comes up. We have ministers, electricians, plumbers, mechanics, lawyers, judges—and, whatever they are, they are ready to do their share."

The ground floor of the Squad building between Highland and College Lane is occupied by vehicles, boats, other equipment, a new office, and the repair shop. On the second floor are the dining room and kitchen, the meeting-room, a large recreation room, an office and a beautiful, little chapel named for the Squad's original chaplain, the Rev. M. Robert Regan.

The Squad admits it owes much to many, but to no single individual as much as to Mrs. Stephens. So it was that the plaque presented her reads:

The Exemplary Elders: A Look at the Record

(From "Joe Creason's Kentucky," in The Courier-Journal)

Although I'm unalterably opposed to the handful who riot and burn and tear down without having any idea what they would rebuild, I can understand why college and even high-school students are up-tight and restless.

I can understand because I'm upset and nervous about the same things that have them protesting and marching on Washington: war, inflation, our seemingly inconsistent national policy.

And, yet, rather than lump the so-called ruling-age generation into one large group and label us all as callous materialists without compassion or concern, I think the students should be selective in their condemnation. Specifically, I suggest that even as they exercise their right of peaceful dissent, they reintroduce themselves to some remarkable people, people they actually should thank instead of scorn since they have made their dissent possible.

The students already know them because they're their parents and grandparents.

These—their parents and grandparents—are the people who in just five decades have by their good works increased life expectancy of the students' generation by 50 per cent; who, while cutting the working day by a third, have more than doubled per capita production.

These are the people who, despite grave mistakes they've made, never quit trying and as a result have given the students a better world than they found. Thus, today's students no longer have to fear epidemics of typhus, diphtheria, smallpox, scarlet fever, measles or mumps. Polio is no longer a medical menace. TB is almost unheard of.

These remarkable people survived history's worst depression. Many of them know what it is to be poor, hungry and cold. And because they knew these things, they determined that the generations that followed them would have food to eat, milk to drink, vitamins to nourish them, a warm home, better schools and a greater chance to succeed.

Because they provided them the best, the student generation is the tallest, healthiest, smartest group of Americans to inhabit this land.

Because they were materialistic, a trait some now decry, the students will work fewer hours, earn more pay, have more leisure and travel to more distant places.

These are the people who fought man's bloodiest war, who defeated the tyranny of Hitler and Tojo and Mussolini and who had the compassion to ask no reparations but instead gave billions of dollars to their former enemies to rebuild their shattered homelands. They also were the people who had the good sense to found the United Nations.

These are the people who, through the highest court in the land, attacked racial injustice and at least started a new era in civil rights. They created better schools and made college education a real possibility for millions instead of only a wealthy few.

They had failures, of course. They still haven't found an alternative to war or racial hatred. They've barely started fighting pollution and the destruction of our natural environment.

If they can make as much progress in as many areas as their parents and grandparents, then perhaps today's students will live to see a time when police aren't needed to enforce laws and armies are unnecessary to prevent some men from trespassing against others, when we have clean air and water and the scars in the earth are healed.

I sincerely hope they will.

Motorists Warned As Work on Detour Started Last Week

Improvement of KY 80 from Allen to Martin and KY 122 from Martin to Virgie as a detour route to be used during construction of US 23 between Allen and Pikeville began last week, and drivers were warned of the dangers attendant upon speed while the work is under way.

The work is being done by the Adams Construction Company as a sub-contractor. John Stumbo, superintendent, said the improvement of the detour route will include building up of "shoulders" of the two highways and application of blacktop surfacing to a thickness of an inch from Allen to Martin and 2½ inches from Martin to Virgie. Shoulders will be built up with "red dog," and guard rails will be erected at specified points.

The work is to be completed in a period of 90 days.

Parsons Is Honor Student at Western

Bowling Green, Ky.—The Dean's List for the fall semester of the 1969-70 academic year at Western Kentucky University includes James Larry Parsons, of McDowell, with a 4.0 standing. He is a son of Mrs. Margie Hamilton Parsons and the late Ted Parsons. To be named to the list, a student must achieve an academic point standing for the semester of 3.3 or higher out of a possible 4.0. Of the 1,801 Western students named to the Dean's List, only 658 head a perfect 4.0 or straight "A" average.

Former Resident of Martin Wins Woodrow Wilson Grant As He, Brother Near Ph.D's

Barry Vinson Qualls, 25, former Martin resident, is a Woodrow Wilson Dissertation Fellow as a candidate for the Ph. D. degree at Northwestern University.

Mr. Qualls was one of 231 Ph. D. candidates who have been awarded $700,000 in grants at 60 universities in the United States and Canada. The grants, which average $3,700 each, will enable the recipients to devote a full year to the writing of their dissertations.

Qualls, a son of Mrs. Jamima Dingsu Qualls, now a resident of Brandon, Fla., and the late Benton Qualls, received his B. A. degree in 1967 from Florida State University. His dissertation at Northwestern is in the field of English and its proposed title is, "Carlyle and Dickens: Their Literary Relationship."

His twin brother, Larry, is working on his dissertation in English at Columbia University. Both are working in different areas of Victorian literature.

Woodrow Wilson Dissertation Fellows are the top contenders out of 582 graduate students in the humanities and social sciences who applied for the fellowships. According to Mrs. Janet A. Mitchell, the Foundation's Dissertation Program director, the awards are made to candidates who can complete their doctoral studies in four years. She indicated that this is about half the time normally spent by graduate students in pursuit of the Ph. D. in the humanities and social sciences.

We won't sell you electric heat.

You'll sell yourself

Exactly what happens when you call us for an estimate to switch to electric heat? It's very simple. We'll set a convenient time to meet at your home. One of our men or a heating contractor will measure your house, count and measure the openings and check the amount of heat loss. He'll recommend the best type of electric heat (there are 7 types). He may give you the names of some of your neighbors who heat electrically so you can ask them their experience with it. Then, within a few days, he'll submit an estimate of installation cost and operating costs. He'll explain his recommendations and estimate and answer any questions. That's it. No "engineering" hokus-pokus. No high-pressure sales talks. Just facts and figures. Then you can decide whether the big difference in flameless-electric heating is worth the cost difference (plus or minus). That's all there is to it. ### Look what we got ourselves into.

If you need an excuse to get out of the house Saturday, come to our Grand Opening party.

And if you can't leave the kids, bring them along for the ride: a test-drive in a Volkswagen Sedan, Station Wagon, Karmann Ghia, Fastback, or Squareback. (We have VWs for any size family.)

When you get back, stop by our refreshment stand. Pick up souvenirs for you and the kids. Try for a door prize. And take a good look around.

Poke your nose into our parts department. (We have parts to fit every Volkswagen model ever built.)

Walk over to our service department and ask about the special tools you see. (We had them made just for VWs.)

Roam around our used car lot and the rest of our outdoor property. (We have five square feet of land for each square foot of building. That's growing room. We expect to be around for a long time.)

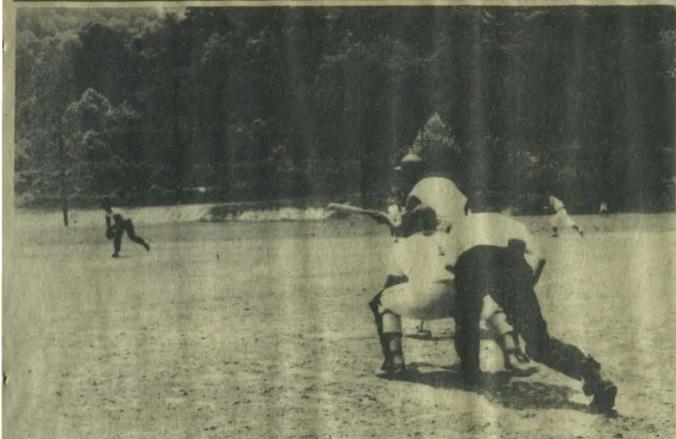

And if you miss seeing something, having a question answered, or test-driving the Volkswagen of your choice—please come again.

Next time, you'll just miss the party.

FRANKFORT, KY.—A few days ago when everyone was talking about the good crappie, white bass and black bass fishing in Kentucky's lakes, William C. Henry, of Kettering, Ohio, was going a different route.

But not of his own volition. Rockfish probably were farthest from Henry's thoughts as he cast his silver blacktail lure from Ramsey's Flat in the Beaver Creek area of Lake Cumberland.

Black bass were doing very well on that bait and when something hit it and failed to yield easily to Henry's maneuvers, he probably still did not dream it was a rockfish—especially one weighing 30 pounds.

But that's what he had on the other end of a line and for a time it was debatable whether Henry would whip the fish or if the fish would whip Henry.

After a big struggle Henry won and brought in a rockfish 36 inches long and 25 and a half inches in girth.

It was caught on April 15 and was hooked about 5 p.m. but it was a while longer before it was landed. The site is not too far from Beaver Lodge, on Beaver Creek, near Monticello.

Henry's prize catch was one of many rockfish stocked in Lake Cumberland by the Department of Fish and Wildlife in the last several years. More will be stocked in a few weeks in Cumberland and other lakes.

Henry's catch is the third largest recorded in the state. In November of 1964 a 34½ pounder was caught near Jamestown by Benny Polston, of Jamestown. Second place honors are held by G. L. Tracy, of Shepherdsville, who caught one that weighed 31½ pounds from Lake Cumberland last October.

The list does not represent all the rocks that have been caught. Only 70-odd catches have been reported, but undoubtedly hundreds have been caught and, of course, we list only the heaviest of the crop.

But the rockfish are in Cumberland, and Kentucky and Barkley Lakes, and Herrington and Dewey and Green River Reservoir. (Dewey?—Ed.)

The biggest rock so far was hoisted from Herrington Lake by a rough fish operations crew which caught one that weighed 40 pounds. They dumped him back in the lake.

The stocking program is a many-forked affair. The South Carolina Wildlife Resources Department milks the eggs from the rockfish at Santee-Cooper Reservoir and then ships them to Kentucky where they are taken care of under the watchful eyes of Charlie Bowers, assistant director of Fisheries who is in charge of the rockfish program. But Superintendent Bill Ashe, Tony Mayeaux and others follow the delicate operation. When ready the young fish will be moved by truck to the waters selected.

And then there they are—ready to be caught—usually by an unsuspecting fisherman, like Henry.

Engagement Announced

They will be married when Pvt. Shell returns from his present assignment in Viet Nam, June of next year.

Rt. Beaver's Goose Creek Supplies Inspiration for New Music Group; Gearheart, Band with Bobbie Gentry

Goose Creek, a Right Beaver Creek tributary which quarters off deeper into the hills from Northern, this county, is getting top billing around the country, these days, as a young man who hails from the Floyd county community and five other musicians form the country-rock group known as the Goose Creek Symphony, working out of Phoenix, Arizona.

After this tour ends in December the group will have its own concert dates.

The Floyd countian in the Goose Creek Symphony is known professionally as Ritchie Hart. In private life he is Charles Richard Gearheart. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Gearheart, formerly of the real Goose Creek, in the real Floyd county, Ky.

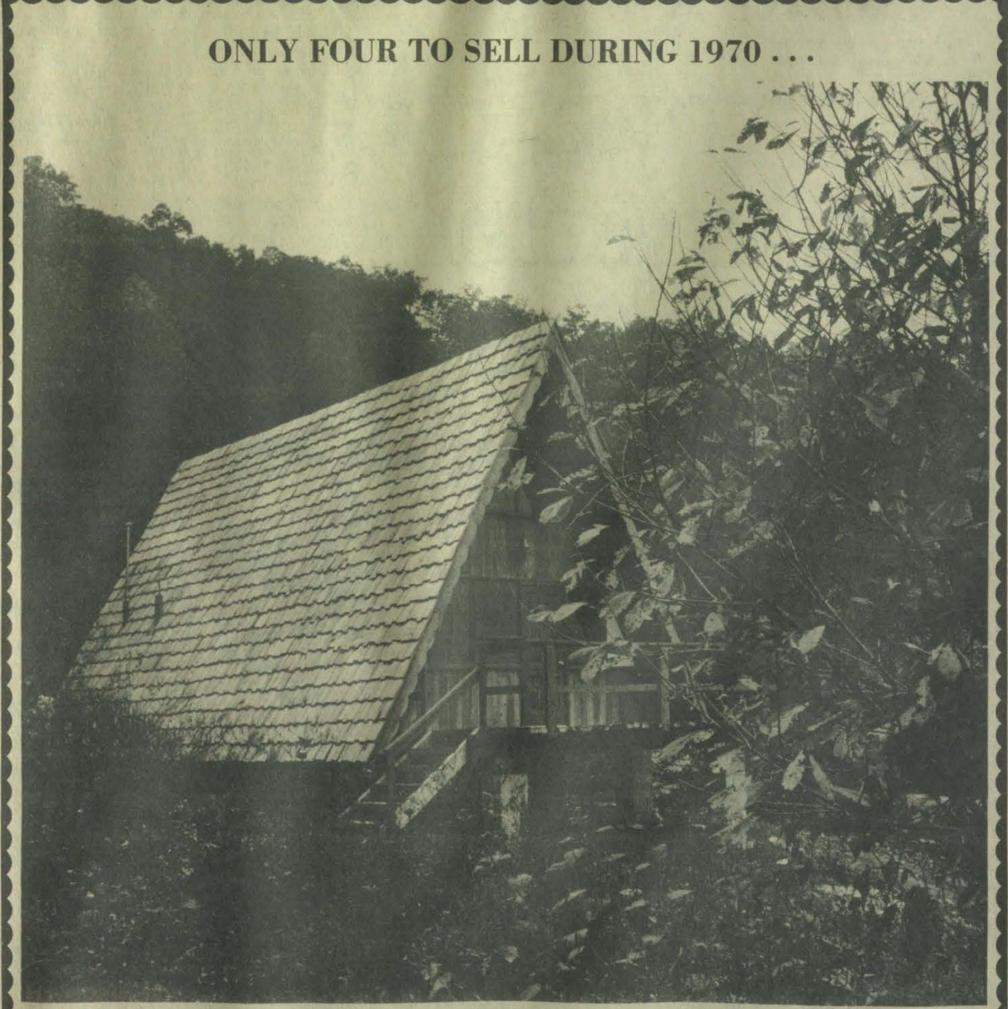

The Goose Creek Symphony was born when Gearheart moved to Phoenix and, remembering how good it was to be young, back on Goose Creek, wanted to share that feeling. He found the other five who became members of the Symphony, and they knew what he meant. They got together and began talking and writing and singing about Goose Creek.

A seventh member of the group is named Beauty. Beauty is a blue-tick hound, and even she is reminiscent of carefree boyhood on Goose Creek.

Air Pollution Control Body Updates Its List of 'Suspects'

FRANKFORT, KY.—The state Air Pollution Control Commission is updating its 1967 registration of possible sources of air pollution in the commonwealth.

The initial mailing of the new form entitled—a registration of air contaminant sources, and a letter of instructions for completing the form will be made during the next two weeks.

Completion and return of the form is a legal requirement under Regulation 1 of the commission, the registration of air contaminants and air contaminants sources, adopted in September, 1967.

Frank P. Pardee, technical director of the commission, said "A new form, less complicated than the earlier version and of the multiple choice type is being used. Results will be processed by computer and comparisons can be made to determine which forms were not returned."

The initial mailing will be to employers of more than four persons and will involve approximately 20,000 businesses. Schools, hospitals, state and governmental agencies will be registered in another mailing before July 1.

No establishments within the Air Pollution Control District of Jefferson county are included, as they are handled by the local district board.

The questionnaire will serve as a tool for issuing permits for existing equipment throughout the commonwealth, according to John W. Sullivan, chief, engineering services, whose staff is responsible for processing returns.

The Commission recently adopted a regulation requiring permits for construction, alteration and operation of many types of equipment that might cause air pollution.

Results of the updating will provide a basis for selecting priorities on which types of equipment will be issued permits first, Sullivan said.

Further information concerning the questionnaire may be had by calling John Sullivan, chief of engineering services of the Air Pollution Control Commission at his Frankfort Office, 564-3382.

Shultz has obtained a court order requiring Royal Crown Bottling Co., Inc., of Whitesburg, Kentucky, Royal Crown Bottling Company of Paintsville, Kentucky, and Bradley Bentley, individually and as an officer of both corporate defendants, to pay back wages due 39 employees in the total amount of $4841.65.

The judgment also permanently enjoins the defendants from violating the minimum wage, overtime compensation and shipping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The judgment was approved by Federal District Judge Bernard T. Moynahan, Jr., following the filing of a complaint based upon an investigation conducted under the direction of the Area Office of the United States Department of Labor's Wage-Hour Division, 118 Fuller Building, 120 West Second, Lexington, Kentucky.

Residents of foreign countries who seek to attend the University of Kentucky must meet the same academic standards set for other students. They also must demonstrate an adequate knowledge of English to be considered for admission.

Maytown Senior, Star Student; Teacher Honored for 2nd Time

STAR STUDENT

Michael Joe Halbert, 17-year-old Maytown high school senior, is the Floyd County Star Student for 1970 and one of his teachers there, Lowell Lloyd Martin, is the county's Star Teacher.

The honors were won in the Star Program sponsored by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce to afford academic recognition, honors and awards to top high school seniors and teachers at the school, county, regional and state levels.

The Star Student, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Halbert, of Martin, did all four years of his high school work at Maytown, where he was a member of the band four years, Science Club president three years and a member of the basketball team two years. He is chairman of the Floyd County Young Democratic Club. He will attend the University of Kentucky.

Nominating his teacher, Mr. Martin, for the Star Teacher award, he said, "Mr. Martin encouraged scholarship to a greater degree than the other good teachers I had at Maytown."

Mr. Martin was also named Teacher-of-the-Year at Maytown last year. He is an instructor in biological science and American history. Himself a graduate of Maytown high, he attended Alice Lloyd

STAR TEACHER

College, was graduated from the University of Kentucky and did graduate work at the University of Missouri. His first teaching was done at Morton junior high school, Lexington.

Under the Kentucky Chamber program county Star students and teachers are eligible to compete for regional honors, and if winners there to compete for state recognition. The state Star Student will receive a "Lamp of Learning" trophy and a $500 cash scholarship, and the same awards will go to the state Star Teacher.

resolution to be challenged by strip-mining interests.

The resolution read in part:
"1. That the strip mining of coal, as it is defined by Kentucky Revised Statute 350.010, is forbidden within the boundaries of Knott County, provided, however, that strip-mining operations may continue on the specific acreage under permits issued by the Kentucky Division of Reclamation prior to this date.

2. That the practice of strip mining in violation of this order shall be a separate violation for each day of operation, and that each violation shall be subject to a $500 fine.
3. That any violation of this order may be enforced by the county or any inhabitant thereof through actions of law or through equity in court having jurisdiction thereof.
4. If any portion of this order shall be declared invalid or unenforceable, such portions shall be served and all other portions shall remain in force and effect."

A Johnson county jury failed to reach a verdict last week in the trial of four coal-truck drivers charged with violating state weight-limitation laws.

Presiding Magistrate Vern Conley rescheduled the case for July 7.

The four—Scotty Castle, 21; Charles Barber, 40; Glen Butcher, and James Baldwin, all of Johnson county—were charged with exceeding weight limitations after receiving citations from state Department of Motor Transportation officers.

The officers testified that none of the four trucks weighed less than 56,000 pounds. The Kentucky weight limit is 32,000 pounds. State law allows a maximum fine of $500 for each violation upon conviction.

A Johnson county group reportedly is investigating ways to oust the county judge for "failure to enforce the law against overweight coal trucks," and the group is flagging down coal trucks on the road with an appeal to stop making overweight runs. The group also is circulating a petition to prevent the building of a new coal tippie in West Van Lear, where Consolidation Coal Co. wants to bring coal it soon will begin stripping and augering.

Tom Hummer, a spokesman for the Citizens League for Law Enforcement in Johnson county, said his group was gloomy after what he called "that sham of a trial" in which the jury disagreed.

"The people in this area have gone through a great deal in the last few weeks, to work within the law," he said. "This organization has bent over backward to do everything within the law."

At last report 11 truck drivers who had been ordered to appear before Magistrate John Holbrook in Johnson last week had not been located.

"There are no plans to stop flagging the trucks down and looking for them," said Hummer, who emphasized that a constable was with the group flagging trucks.

"The only thing people are asking for is justice," said Brady Rose, who heads the Johnson county group. He also revealed that a meeting will be held this week with lawyers who will discuss the prospects for banning strip mining entirely in Johnson County.

"I think people understand what is polluting our streams and destroying our homes," he said. "But the coal is there. So what do you do? Something has to be done. I would lean toward banning it, or having much stricter controls."

Elsewhere in Eastern Kentucky:

A Leslie county meeting was scheduled this week at which a planning and zoning commission is to be appointed. Local leadership admits privately that an attempt will be made to zone the whole county in order, among other things, to bring strip mining under control.

Perry County Judge Harve Hensley has called a mass meeting with the county's coal operators in order to discuss overweight coal trucks. A Perry county grand jury recently charged that virtually all coal trucks in the county were overweight.

If a woman stayed home and looked after her children, she was known as a "good mother." Now, other women say she shirks her community responsibilities.

If a man didn't think or talk or act just like his neighbors, we said he was an "individual," or at worst, "a character." Now, we call him an "oddball."

If a person didn't go along with the popular viewpoint, we said he was an "independent thinker." Now, such a person is labeled an "extremist"—or worse.

If a husband and father liked his own fireside better than any other place, we said he was a "family man." Now, if he shuns big parties, he is regarded as "antisocial."

A person who trusted his own judgment and once he had set a course stayed with it was called "determined." Today, he is dismissed as "bullheaded."

A man who didn't put himself out to impress others or talk when he didn't have anything to say was described as "dignified" or "reserved." Now, he "isn't able to communicate with others" or "lacks personality."

No wonder most of us try hard to conform nowadays. The words for those who are in any way different from the crowd are usually not the kind of words we would like for anyone to use in describing us.

the fall 1970," Robert R. Allen, PCC academic dean, said.

The academic areas which will be emphasized during this period will include: Communications (radio-television and journalism), programmed reading development, mathematics, physical and biological sciences (engineering and home economics), and business and office education. In addition, library services and counseling will be available to students by college personnel.

The classes will generally be scheduled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The overall program will be flexible in order to meet the needs of individual students.

In addition to the academic programs there will also be an emphasis on the physical, social, and cultural aspects.

Participating students will be taken on tours to businesses such as banks, restaurants, factories, hospitals, radio stations, etc., to actually see what goes on in the various fields in which they may be interested. Qualified personnel in all areas in which instruction will be given will come to the campus for visits.

Students who are interested in participating in the Career Orientation Program should contact Robert R. Allen, academic dean, at the college.

Ben Franklin Owners, Mr. and Mrs. Goebel, Given 25-Yr. Plaque

Mr. and Mrs. William Goebel, owners of the Ben Franklin Store here, were presented a 25-year plaque recently at a dinner held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

The plaque, in recognition of 25 years of Ben Franklin franchised operation, was presented by L. L. Raybourne, Ben Franklin zone manager.

What is now a newly remodeled and modern Ben Franklin Store was started in 1937 by D. H. Clark, an uncle of Mrs. Goebel. Mr. Goebel joined the store in 1943 as a partner and later bought the operation, at which time the store was franchised with the Ben Franklin Distributing, an operation program which is a national organization serving over 2400 Ben Franklin Stores, all of which are independently owned.

Gov. Nunn Promises Students Protection through 'Firmness'

FRANKFORT, KY.—Gov. Louie B. Nunn pledged continued confidence in the vast majority of Kentucky's young people and assured them their pursuit of "intellectual excellence" in the state's colleges and universities will be protected with "unyielding firmness."

Addressing the annual commencement exercises at Frankfort high school, the governor insisted that young people who are "concerned for the preservation of our basic institutions have rights, too." "They have the right to study, to attend class, to take examinations and to be honored at commencement without fear of arson, intimidation or interruption."

The governor's 18-year-old son, Stephen, a graduating senior, was among the audience in the packed high school gymnasium.

The address by the chief executive was broadcast on several television stations and on a special statewide radio network.

Within the past two years, the governor pointed out, Kentucky has addressed itself to the problem of campus unrest and has "set an example for the nation by effectively meeting the threat of violence while developing innovative outlets for student dissent."

He cited specifically establishment of the Governor's Student Advisory Commission 18 months ago, major positions of responsibility that young leaders hold in the present state administration and the state's unique Legislative Intern Program.

Kentucky was the first state in the nation, he said, to "welcome student leaders" to membership on the boards of all public colleges and universities.

In expanding on that theme, the governor announced that he will appoint "qualified students" to serve on both the State Air Pollution Control Commission and the State Water Pollution Control Commission. Presumably, they will fill one or more of the seats added to each commission by the 1970 legislature.

These appointments, the governor said, should "again disprove the claim that our system of government is closed."

Speaking as much to his radio and television audience as to those in the auditorium, he told the young people that "the people of Kentucky have paid unselfishly for the costly privilege of applauding you tonight. Over the years, they have shared more and more of their substance with you."

Today, he said, 68 cents of every general fund tax dollar is allocated to education in Kentucky.

"By investing millions of dollars," he reminded them, "a place has been prepared for you in a progressive system of state colleges and universities that has significantly improved Kentucky's educational image."

"It is time we remember for what and for whom these sacrifices were made."

This system of colleges and universities, he insisted "belongs not to just the professional education community and certainly not to a radical student minority."

"It belongs to all of us."

Damage to property during the recent disturbance on the University of Kentucky campus at Lexington has run well over a quarter of a million dollars, the governor said.

"If all available means are not exhausted to recover these damages from those who were responsible, it will be a slap in the face to every Kentucky taxpayer. I urge and encourage university officials to institute civil suit, if necessary, to recover full damages."

Obviously moved, the governor cautioned his young audience that they must make daily decision that will "shape their destinies" in a time of "great social turmoil" and in an atmosphere "hostile to clear thinking."

"I believe you are capable of meeting this challenge," he said. "I have confidence in your ability to choose wisely."

25 years in the making.

We'd like to thank the makers of the other new economy cars for giving us such a nice head start. It gave us time to develop an inspection system so ridiculously scrupulous that it expects every VW to pass 16,000 examinations.

It allowed us to find out (at a reasonably scientific pace) how we could double our horsepower without doubling the cost of your horsepower. (The VW still gets about 26 miles to the gallon and requests only a smidgen of oil.)

It permitted us to work on things that didn't even have to do with the actual making of the car. Medi-car, the Volkswagen Diagnosis System, for example. Electronic equipment that can spot trouble in a car before it gets to be trouble. When you buy a new VW, you get 4 free Medi-car checkups.

Of course, it took great fortitude to resist squandering our time on phony styling improvements.

The beetle looks just as good (or bad) as it did 25 years ago.
