

Emma Span Lowest Bid Is $439,899 Contract Awarding Seen Within Week; Pike Bids Received

The village of Emma will soon see the beginning of a modern highway-type bridge to take the place of the 45-year-old "swinging bridge" which spans the Big Sandy there to connect the town with US 23.

Bids on the project were opened last Thursday at Frankfort. The low bidder was the Edwards & Webb Construction Co., Danville, Ky., which asked $439,899 for the work. The contract is expected to be awarded within the next few days.

The drive for a bridge at Emma began in 1971. A public hearing was held at the Methodist Church there at the insistence of Miss Flo Weddington (now Mrs. Flo Adams). B. E. King, highway commissioner during the administration of Gov. Louie B. Nunn, promised action. But Democratic Governor Wendell Ford was in office before planning for the span had reached the point that bids could be asked.

The present suspension bridge has been in use since 1927. Mrs. Adams declares it was condemned 30 years ago.

"I'm real thrilled that the battle is just about won," Mrs. Adams said this week. She added that the contractor has assured her equipment can be moved to the bridge site within three weeks after the awarding of a contract.

A groundbreaking ceremony to precede the beginning of actual work is in the planning, Mrs. Adams said.

Meanwhile, the county is having some right-of-way trouble there. In a con-

Loss of Black Teachers Poses New Problems

Floyd county's school system is having its troubles getting free of the racial disproportion charge.

First of all, it was listed among 17 districts as being in non-compliance with federal guidelines on pupil integration. The allegation that there was a substantial racial disproportion in one or more of the Floyd schools was successfully countered, however, and this issue has been dropped.

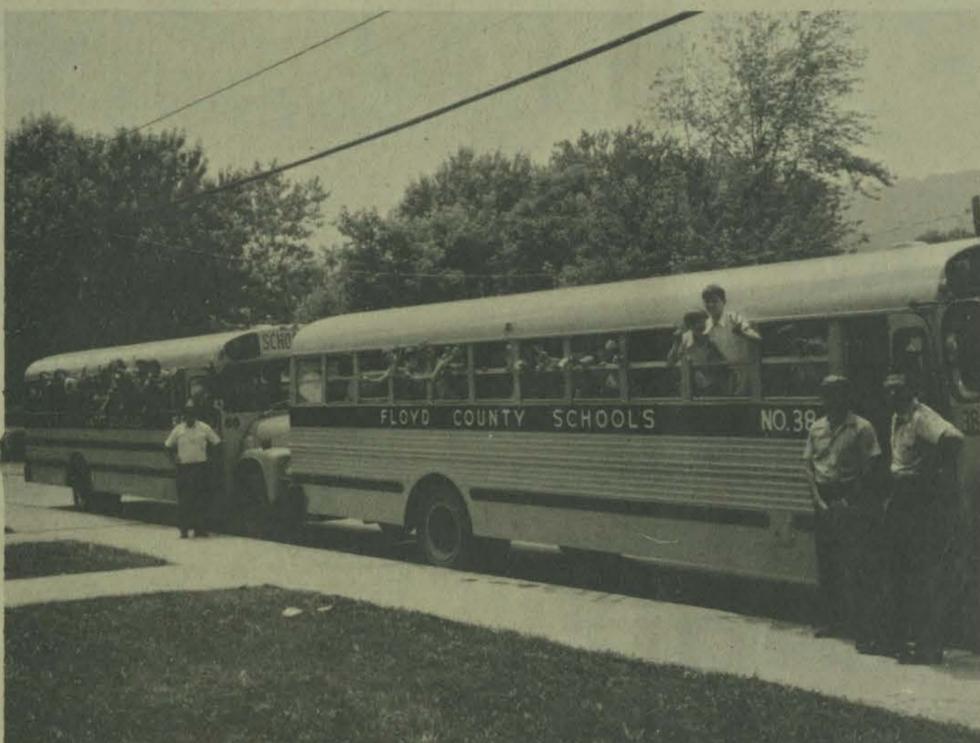

But comes now Peter E. Holmes, director of the Office for Civil Rights in the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, who last week wrote County Supt. Charles Clark, in part:

"...our review of your report forms did reveal that, since 1967, you have lost all three of your black teachers, the last such loss coming in 1972 with the closing of the Tram elementary school.

"We are therefore asking our Atlanta Regional Office to review your recruitment and employment practices and to contact you as soon as the workload permits an investigation of these matters."

Supt. Clark's defense to this is to point out that no certified black teachers have applied for teaching positions in this county.

The county system at one time had eight black teachers, but Clark said all have retired or moved elsewhere. The last retired at the end of the 1972 school year when Tram elementary was closed and merged with Betsy Layne.

Eighty-five Floyd boys occupied these buses Monday when all were ready to leave here for a week at Camp Webb on Grayson Reservoir. The youngsters are members of junior conservation clubs. Dalton Ray Conley (right foreground) one of the county's two conservation officers, accompanied the boys to camp.

Conservation Clubbers Leave for Camp

Eighty-five fifth and sixth graders from throughout the county left Monday for five days of camping, fishing, boating and other out-door activities at Camp Webb on Grayson Reservoir. The boys are members of the Junior Conservation Club, District 7, and will be accompanied to the state-operated camp by Conservation officer Dalton R. Conley. Those attending are:

This Town . . . That World

It is with considerable pride and relief that I announce my return to work after a vacation of five days, including Sunday. Now, if I can only recover from the vacation...

WHERE DID IT GO?

Always the wide-awake, observant onlooker, I managed on my trip to be impressed with the absence of junk cars and all other unsightly collections along Virginia and West Virginia highways. Right in there, thinking all the time, I had an idea of asking the governors of the two states to write Governor Ford, telling him where they put all that stuff. One of our crew scotched that when he hinted that, maybe, they had hauled it all over into Kentucky.

These mountains of ours are supremely beautiful, and, although ages old, they do not need the facelifting they're getting. They need a cleanup and protection from the clutterers. Only a crackdown, all the way from Frankfort to the lowest court around, will get the job done.

Perkins Sets Hearing In Floyd Next Week

Congressmen Carl D. Perkins announced in Washington last week that the House Education and Labor Committee which he heads will hold hearings in this county June 22 and possibly on the following day to hear the testimony of black-lung applicants who have been denied benefits by the Social Security Administration. The hearings are scheduled to be held at Langley.

The hearing will be a part of Perkins' drive for legislation extending the federal black-lung benefit program for two more years. Unless legislation of this sort is enacted, the federal program will end June 30.

"I want," the Congressman said, "to have 30 or 40 people come in (at the hearing) and tell their story. Most justified claims will never be paid unless we postpone the cutoff for at least another year. The burden is on Social Security—they've denied claims and also approved claims that are of doubtful origin."

The fight for an extension could be a losing one. Congressman Perkins admits that the controversy over lawyers' fees in black-lung cases has dimmed the prospects. But he is not giving up without a scrap.

The Courier-Journal has reported that the Kentucky compensation program, subsidized by the Social Security Administration, paid during 1972 about $6 million to attorneys handling black-lung claims. The Louisville newspaper claims 11 lawyers received $3.8 million of that total, with one, State Senator Kelsey Friend, of Pikeville, getting more than $1,000,000.

A new subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee has tentatively set hearings for September in an investigation of attorneys' fees. The fees are set by law and are legal, attorneys say.

An attorney for the National Independent Coal Operators Association told a Senate committee last week that the black-lung regulations set to take effect July 1 could sound a death knell for small mine operators.

The additional costs that will be required of operators in their private or state compensation programs could be enough to cause "hundreds" of them to quit mining coal, John L. Kilcullen told the Senate Interior Committee, which was holding coal-policy hearings.

It the extension past the June 30 deadline fails, the federal government will continue to pay already-authorized benefits but will no longer be responsible for any new claims entered by disabled coal miners, their widows and dependents.

Dr. Hall Retires As Head Of Two Health Departments

Retirement of Dr. Russell L. Hall as health officer heading both the Floyd and Martin County Health Departments became effective May 10, it was announced last week. His decision to retire followed several months of ill-health.

Currently, the Floyd health department staff is operating with the assistance of members of the Floyd County Board of Health of which Dr. George P. Archer is chairman. The department is seeking a successor to Dr. Hall but is, frankly, not optimistic about finding a replacement soon.

Dr. Hall's retirement interrupted 31 years' service in the field of medicine. He attended the Caney Creek Community Center and Caney Junior College (now Alice Lloyd College) at Pippa Passes and was one of the student-leaders there in the days when the Knott county school was headed by its founder, Mrs. Alice Geddes Lloyd. Dr. Hall later attended the University of Kentucky and received his M. D. degree from the University of Louisville's School of Medicine in 1942. From medical school and his internship at St. Mary's Hospital, Huntington, W. Va., he went into Army service and had 35 months' overseas duty with Patton's Third Army in Europe. He held the rank of captain at the time of his return to civilian life.

Dr. Hall went to Wheelwright in 1946 and practiced his profession there 14 years. He began his work as health officer here April 1, 1960 and, in addition to serving two counties in that capacity, acted as project director for the pilot Comprehensive Health Service Program

County To Sue For Easements On Stream Job

County Attorney James R. Allen said Monday he will file this week five condemnation suits against landowners outside the city limits of Martin as one step toward clearing the way for the million-dollar stream improvement project there.

These five are landowners with whom negotiations for rights of entry have broken down completely. Similar action against other owners of land along Beaver Creek, outside the city, is expected to be taken soon if negotiations fail. More than 20 of these have failed to agree with negotiators for entry rights.

Condemnation actions also will be taken—possibly within the next two weeks—against five or six landowners whose property lies within the Martin corporate limits. Although these suits also will be lodged by the county attorney, the city of Martin will pay the adjudicated cost of rights-of-way.

Allen said he hopes to acquire, by negotiation or court action, right of entry to all parcels of property along the four-mile stretch of Beaver Creek that is involved in the big channel improvement program by August. The U. S. Corps of Engineers, which planned the work and will supervise it, has warned officials of both the county and Martin that unless the project can get under way within the next fiscal year "it may be in serious jeopardy." Complete clearance of right to enter upon all lands involved is planned not later than Oct. 1.

The work will involve widening, straightening and deepening of the channel of Beaver Creek from a point near the confluence of Right and Left Beaver Creeks, a short distance above Martin, near the Sammy Clark Branch, between Martin and Allen. It is intended as a measure to afford Martin protection against the floods which in recent years have caused heavy property damage.

Note Hints Abduction Probable

The Federal Bureau of Investigation this week joined Lexington police and state officers in an investigation into the whereabouts of 26-year-old Gaylord Martin, of Eastern, installment loan collector for the First National Bank here.

Martin, who went to Lexington June 3 to attend a one-week banking school, disappeared the following day from the apartment of his cousin, Tandy Moore, at 2035 Cummins Court, Lexington, and has not since been seen.

He first took his wife, Mrs. Olive Duff Martin, a hospital technician on vacation, to Ohio to remain while he was in banking school. Returning to Lexington, he apparently decided against occupying the quarters provided for him in a UK dormitory and moved into the apartment of his cousin who was on vacation and out of town with his family.

Martin reportedly attended morning banking classes on June 4, later was said to have telephoned acquaintances attending the school that he would not be in class the following day and asked them to take notes for him.

Lexington Police Detective James Latimer said Mrs. Martin contacted him last Saturday and reported that her husband had not returned from the banking school. Police in turn conferred with Mr. Moore, who was quoted as saying he assumed Martin had returned home, since his car and clothing were no longer at the apartment.

A note was said to have been found in the apartment. One source said it read, in part:

"Get help. Call Olive."

Burl W. Spurlock, executive vice-president of The First National Bank, said Tuesday morning he has received no further report as to the employee's

Howell, Victim In Auto Wreck

A single-car accident early Sunday morning approximately 2½ miles from the intersection of KY 1428 and 1427, near Bonanza, claimed the life of the vehicle's only occupant, 22-year-old Billy Monroe Howell, of Abbott Creek.

According to Kentucky State Trooper Paul Estep, the auto which Howell was driving apparently left the road, struck a slight embankment, and capsized. The accident occurred at about 1 a.m., Estep surmised, although the wreck was not discovered until about 8:30 a.m.

A son of Davie and Irene Akers Howell, he was born in Floyd county, June 24, 1951. Mr. Howell was recently discharged from the U. S. Army.

Other survivors include three brothers, Davie and Jimmy George Howell, both of Findley, Ohio, and Gary Neal Howell, of Bonanza, and a sister, Sharon Howell, of Findlay.

Funeral services were conducted today (Wednesday) at 10 a.m. at the Free Will Baptist Church at Bonanza with the Revs. Bill Campbell and Bruce Spencer officiating. Burial was made in the Spencer Music cemetery on the Conley Fork of Abbott Creek under the direction of the Floyd Funeral Home.

Drunk Driving Laid to Deputy

Floyd Deputy Sheriff Willie Hall was jailed here Sunday by State Trooper Danny Stumbo and State Detective Gary Rose on a drunk driving charge. He was released Monday after executing appearance bond.

Others booked at the jail within the week, charges listed against each and names of arresting officers follow:

Mark Tracey Kinney, drunk driving and no operator's license, by State Trooper Dennis Williamson; Tex Leon Hall, reckless driving and no operator's license, by Deputy Sheriffs Willie Hall and D. Tackett; Wendel Dobyns, fishing without license; Eugene Tackett, reckless driving, by Troopers Bevins and Rose; Ray Johnson, drunk driving, by Deputy Sheriff Grady Skeans; Bill Maynard, drunk driving, by State Trooper Leeman Bevins; Larry Hammond, driving on revoked license, by Policemen Conley and Campbell; Burley Hall, reckless driving, by Trooper Bevins, Policemen Campbell and Woods.

Mental Health Agency Slates Education Drive

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, the Big Sandy Regional mental health agency, will inaugurate an intensive preventive education campaign June 18 in Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties.

Purpose of the campaign, according to MCCC Executive Director Dick Stai is to "recognize the inescapable fact that problems of strained family relationships, and other inter-personal relationships, mental retardation, and alcohol and drug abuse reach into almost every home in our region. Preventing these problems from arising and giving people the insight to deal with them when they do arise is one of our major assignments as a community mental health center. This thirteen week preventive education campaign is intended to reach into these same homes with help and hope."

Radio spot announcements and newspaper ads will highlight the mass media elements of the campaign. These will be supplemented by staff appearances before civic clubs, women's clubs and community development organizations as the theme, "Helping You Build a Life You Can Live With," is taken to as many Big Sandy residents as possible.

In announcing the campaign at a staff conference earlier this week, Stai said:

"Since the beginning of community mental health in this region we have had to concentrate on programs of treatment and training for those already diagnosed as having some mental health problem. Although many of our local staff have worked closely with schools and other community groups in some preventive effort we have not been able to concentrate on this vital aspect of service. Most of our staff and resources will continue to focus on treatment and training, but the time has come to direct our attention toward prevention. This campaign, including a commitment of staff and resources, is the beginning."

Commitments have been received from local newspapers and radio stations for donations of time and space to carry the preventive education message to the public.

Robert Marsh, director of public information and education for the agency, announced that any community organization wishing to procure a speaker from Mountain Comprehensive Care Center on any aspect of mental health or the preventive education program may do so by calling 1-800-422-1060, or the local county office of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

Turner Receives MSU Grant-in-Aid

Morehead, Ky.—Neil Turner, a 6-3 guard from McDowell, has accepted a basketball grant-in-aid at Morehead State University.

MSU Head Coach Bill Harrell described his seventh recruit of the year as "a dedicated young man with definite potential."

Turner averaged 21 points a game last season and led McDowell to the State Tournament. He was named the most valuable player on Coach Pete Grigsby's squad.

The younger brother of MSU's Glenn Turner, the new signee won all-conference, all-district and all-region honors.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Turner, of McDowell.

'Pot Farm' Operator In Johnson County Draw Convictions

U. S. District Attorney Eugene E. Siler, Jr. announced Monday the conviction of Gary Michael Summers and Gergetta Badescu Summers for growing a large quantity of marihuana in Johnson county and of possessing a quantity of marihuana with the intention to distribute marihuana in violation of federal narcotic laws. Summers, 26, and his wife, 25 were also convicted of failing to appear for trial last November.

John Compton, assistant U. S. Attorney, said the Kentucky State Police Detective B. J. Music and Federal Agent Hassell Caudill with other officers made a search of a farm owned by Summers near Stambaugh, Johnson county, August 17, 1971. The search revealed several patties of marihuana in a cultivated field along with a quantity of fertilizer and soil-testing kits. No other crops were under cultivation on the farm.

The defendants were married after jumping bond and went to Canada where they lived from November, 1972 until May, 1973 when they were arrested after crossing the border from Canada into Michigan.

Summers advised Judge H. David Hermansdorfer that he had completed college at Kent State in Ohio and had a degree in history and political science, and Mrs. Summers had finished her third year of college at Kent State. Citing the serious aspects of marihuana to the total drug and crime problems in the United States, Judge Hermansdorfer imposed upon Gary Michael Summers a sentence of two years for growing the marihuana and five years for possessing with intent to distribute. The sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation for five years after his release from confinement. Mrs. Summers received a sentence of nine months for growing the marihuana, two years suspended and supervised probation for three years after release for possessing with intent to distribute marihuana.

On the bond jumping charge, Mrs. Summers was sentenced to six months consecutive to the nine months imposed on the marihuana charge. Gary Summers received a sentence to two years on the bond jumping charge to be served consecutively to the sentence imposed for growing marihuana.

Pollution Monitoring System To Include Louisa Plant

Kentucky Power Company's Big Sandy Plant near Louisa, Ky., will be one of twelve initial American Electric Power System plants to be included in plans announced last Wednesday for installation of a sophisticated, minute-by-minute monitoring system to measure air pollution levels around AEP's major generating areas in Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana.

In some areas, the system's existing monitoring facilities will be expanded and strengthened by installation of new, supplemental equipment. This will be the case with Kentucky Power's Big Sandy Plant. In other areas, totally new monitoring sub-networks will be installed.

All of the new monitoring stations to be built and all of the new instrumentation to be installed will be leased from Environmental Research & Technology, Inc., of Lexington, Mass., which also will maintain both the new and existing monitoring facilities. AEP will continue to own the existing monitoring facilities, as well as the system-wide microwave communications network over which all of the air-quality data will be transmitted.

Air-quality measurements will be continuously telemetered to ERT's computer center in Chicago, which in turn will transmit hourly average data back to both the AEP System Power Production & Control Center in Canton, Ohio, and AEP's 12 generating plants.

The project's cost over the next five years, including charges for the leasing of the new facilities and ERT's services, is estimated at over $8 million.

Work on the new and expanded facilities, scheduled to be in full operation by January 1, is now under way.

Principal aim of the system will be to confirm that ambient-air standards in the areas of the power plants are being met. A second purpose will be to permit AEP to take part in alleviating local conditions if public authorities should declare an air-pollution emergency in a given area.

The announcement, made by AEP Chairman Donald C. Cook, emphasized that electronic instruments would constantly measure air quality at ground level. "This will help assure that any sulfur-dioxide emissions from our tall stacks, which are designed to disperse gases in the upper atmosphere, will not create concentrations at ground level—which is the only place where they would be harmful to man, animal or plant life," he explained.

In the initial system, 61 monitoring stations will be located in nine sub-networks around the 12 plants. Each station will be housed in an air-conditioned building (8' x 10' x 8'). Sensing instruments will measure not only sulfur-dioxide and nitrogen-oxide concentrations in the ambient air, but also suspended particulate matter, wind direction and velocity, and ambient-air temperature, and, in some areas, fog density, humidity and rainfall.

Each station will be tied to the other stations in its own sub-network by telephone line, and each sub-network will be tied to the AEP System's basic microwave communications network for real-time data transmission from the plants to Chicago and for the hourly reports back to Canton and the power plants.

Bass-Snatcher Gets Them

Lloyd Daniels, of Prestonsburg, displays five bass—the largest, a five-pounder—caught last Wednesday at Dewey Lake by buzzing a Bass-Snatcher.

The National School Public Relations Association has released a new report entitled, "Informal Education," which examines open or informal education and advises caution. The report notes that in Britain the open education movement took 40 years to evolve. By contrast, in the U. S. it has spread "like a revolution" with the consequence of some failures as well as many successes. Nevertheless, open education, if properly approached, can be, "the salvation of the schools," the report concludes. (NSPRA, 1801 N. Moore St., Arlington, Va. 22209, $4).

To The Voters of District 2:

I want to thank all the people who supported and elected me Constable. I will serve you to the best of my ability for the next four years. Thank you.

The Arkansas Attorney General has filed suit in federal District Court contesting the Federal Government's impoundment of $612,603 appropriated for public elementary and/or secondary schools under Title III of the National Defense Education Act. The suit alleges the 50 million dollar congressional appropriation for the program requires the defendants to allot Arkansas a proportional share of the funds. The suit further alleges that the defendants have unlawfully refused to allot the state its full share. Named as defendants are Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of health, education, and welfare, and John R. Ottina, acting commissioner of education.

Future Of APPALRED Bright In E. Ky.

The Kentucky division of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund apparently is on its way to winning OEO refunding, but the future of its West Virginia counterpart is less certain.

The program, known as APPALRED, has its Kentucky offices in Prestonsburg and Lexington. John Rosenberg, of Prestonsburg, directing attorney for the Kentucky program, told The Times Tuesday that although all problems have not been resolved he is optimistic.

"If anything, we would look forward to an expansion of the program," Mr. Rosenberg said.

APPALRED has been under fire from coal interests and others as its services have represented causes in opposition to strip-mining, the legality of the "broad form" deed, the handling of poverty programs and the like.

"We, naturally, step on some toes but are meeting the needs of people," Mr. Rosenberg said. He said the endangered program drew sound support from the Kentucky delegation in Congress and Governor Ford.

Appalred had hung in an uncertain balance since January when OEO refused to renew its $430,000 annual grant. In April, OEO relented somewhat by approving funds for the first four months of the year, but refused to grant them for the entire year, maintaining that the four-month grant was meant to be used to close out operations.

These funds expired April 30. Appalred has had a staff of 15 full-time attorneys, seven paraprofessionals, a fluctuating group of law students and various supportive persons.

It has handled some 5,600 cases the last 2½ years, but, under OEO direction, spent much of its time on legal reform issues and class-action suits designed to combat poverty and environmental damage in Appalachia.

In Kentucky, its most controversial cases have dealt with strip-mining, health care and consumer issues. It has, for example, represented clients seeking to challenge the unlimited use of the broadform deed in strip mining; stop coal companies found guilty of repeated strip-mining violations from receiving state strip-mining permits; reform a federally supported medical health program in Floyd county, and stop South Central Bell from increasing its telephone rates.

After Appalred attorneys blocked continued funding for a Floyd county health program on the ground that it wasn't serving the poor, Congressman Carl Perkins, called for a government audit of the agency's activities.

A report by the General Accounting Office, however, gave Appalred a clean bill of health. It said the program had "furthered the cause of justice among the poor by providing free legal related services to a number of persons to whom such services otherwise might not have been available and advocated institutional reform of laws and practices which adversely affected the poor."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wanted—a Road

Recently I wrote a letter to the Courier-Journal in which I cited the deplorable conditions of the Frasure's Creek road. Needless to say, not one thing has been done to the road. In this week's Floyd County Times I noticed a list of bids for road improvements and, just as I had expected, Frasure's Creek was not mentioned.

Let's assume that the deciding factor in priorities for road improvements is the number of people served. Roads with fewer people have a much better road than we do.

I am sure that you remember the episode last fall when parents kept their children from school in protest of the roads.

Perhaps through your paper, we, the people of Frasure's Creek, could get an explanation for our lack of a decent road.

I challenge any official who would deny that our road is deplorable to let me ride with him in his personal automobile to the head of Frasure's Creek and see if his outlook doesn't change somewhat.

I guess I really don't want an explanation. We have had explanations, excuses and promises long enough. What we really want is—A ROAD.
WILLIE H. ELLIOTT

Two years ago the state of Pennsylvania passed legislation legalizing teachers strikes. Since then, the state has had more school strikes than the rest of the nation combined.

The Paintsville Board of Education has moved to "enrich" the high school curriculum. The courses to be added were submitted by the Paintsville High School principal and approved by a vote of teachers. The courses include modern world affairs, world history, international relations, reading in junior high, programmed English, continuation of elementary art and possibly seventh grade literature. The principal proposed that all but one study hall be eliminated to free nine teachers to teach other subjects, hopefully the new courses.

Frank Hatfield, superintendent of the Bullitt County schools, has assumed the presidency of the Kentucky Association of School Administrators (KASA). Other officers of the 1,792 member organization include Clyde Caudill, director of federal programs in the Jefferson County schools, president elect; Henry Resch, principal of Warren Central High School, vice president; and Mike Speck, director of pupil personnel in the Hardin County schools, outgoing president.

The National Association of Secondary School Principals has released a legal memorandum advising pregnancy, whether a girl is married or unmarried, does not appear to be sufficient grounds for exclusion from the regular academic curriculum and probably even extracurricular activities. The report concludes that a pregnant student can be excluded from regular school attendance or extracurricular activities only if it can be proved that she is immoral, disruptive, or presents a clear and present danger to other students.

BAPTIST WOMEN MEET

The Baptist Women met Monday evening, June 4, at the home of Mrs. Mary May. The meeting was opened by the president, Sarah Laven, as she read a poem, "Does Your Pastor Know." Mrs. Berniece Porter led the group in prayer time as she analyzed the "Lord's Prayer." After the business session Mrs. Dorothy Harris presented a program entitled, "Relying On the Holy Spirit." All the women present were involved in the presentation of the program. Mrs. May, assisted by her husband, Cecil, served refreshments to Mesdames Myrna Whittaker, Judy Short, Norma Davis, Mary Jo Waugh, Pearl Watts, Irene Campbell, Mary Ann Hall, Marie Hall, Dorothy Harris, Goldia Westfall, Gertrude Clay, Berniece Porter and Sarah Laven.

THE AMERICAN WAY

By BETTY ELLISON

Some say it's the Kentucky way, some say it's because you're in the South. Visitors to the Bluegrass State constantly report that things move easier, breezes are softer, people are friendlier, there is a contagious feeling of leisure in the air. And, it's generally found, Kentucky's state-operated vacation parks give this happy infection to all.

Travelers, who came to Kentucky 37 million strong last year, agree that the system of 43 state-operated resorts, parks and shrines are the finest in the United States. From one-acre Constitution Square State Shrine in Danville—where the Commonwealth's first constitution was written—to the sprawling 3,600-acre Lake Barkley State Resort Park near Cadiz, there is hospitality, recreation, leisure, history, plus the time and space to move at your own pace. Nearly 40,000 acres of Kentucky's land contain state parks.

Fifteen state resort parks show off superlative scenery made up of mountains, bluegrass, rivers, and lakes, and, in addition, offer the traveler air-conditioned lodges with 746 comfortably furnished rooms ranging in rates from $9 for a single to $20 for a double. Off-season rates are at a reduced price. It is easy to make reservations in a state park, just dial, toll-free, in Kentucky 1-800-372-2961, and in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia dial 1-800-626-2911.

Fine Kentucky foods are served in 16 park dining rooms that have a seating capacity of over 4,100. Meeting and recreation rooms offer an additional seating of 4,300 in 14 of the resort parks. Five resort parks feature coffee shops as well as dining rooms.

There are 316 cottages in Kentucky's state parks ranging from compact efficiencies to three-bedroom deluxe models. Everything is there for vacation housekeeping; all that is required is food and a happy tenant.

For total enjoyment of Kentucky's great outdoors, there are over 2,100 state park camping sites, with 32 central service buildings providing rest rooms, showers, and dump stations (for trailers). In those parks with primitive areas there is almost endless space for campers.

Recreation in state parks does not just happen, it is carefully planned for the guests' enjoyment. What you can do in a state park constitutes a long list, but some of the recreation includes sailing, golf, tennis, fishing, boating, horseback riding, swimming in pools or from sandy beaches, hiking, nature studies, and special programs for children, leaving their parents time to engage in their own recreation.

Nine historical shrines that are part of the parks system trace the development of the Commonwealth from the first cabin, built at Barboursville by pioneer explorer Dr. Thomas Walker, to My Old Kentucky Home at Bardstovon, representing plantation life at its finest hour.

Aside from 43 state parks and shrines, Kentucky has four national parks. Mammoth Cave National Park contains the world's longest connecting cavern corridors, plus 51,000 acres above ground. Cumberland Gap National Historical Park marks the spot in the mountains where the first settlers came into Kentucky in the 1700's. Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site protects the log cabin where the Civil War president was born, with a granite and marble monument. Land Between the Lakes, in Western Kentucky, has 170,000 acres devoted to recreation, conservation and environmental studies.

Still another park, Breaks Interstate, run jointly by Kentucky and Virginia, offers complete vacation facilities with lodge, dining room, cottages, recreation and a commanding view of the deepest river canyon east of the Mississippi River.

All together there are 48 state and national parks in Kentucky, waiting to share the Kentucky way of having a good time with what is expected to be a new record number of visitors this year.

Miss Jeanie Frasure, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Frasure, became the bride of Mr. Rodney Hicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hicks, June 1 at the Maytown Baptist Chapel in the first wedding ceremony performed at the Chapel.

The Rev. Glen Noe performed the double-ring ceremony in a setting for ferns, ivy, huckleberry and baskets of mountain laurel, pink roses, peonies and carnations. Music was furnished by Miss Reva Duff and the soloist was Mrs. Alicia Mayo, who sang three songs, including, "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a long white, long-sleeved gown of silk organza over taffeta with a short chapel train. Her long veil was held in place by a headpiece encrusted with seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Teresa Lea Prater was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Belinda Jones and Miss Mary Sue Martin who wore identical long gowns of hot pink polyester crepe with headpieces to match. They carried nosegays of kalmia latifolia. Little Miss Melissa Bentley, the flower girl, was dressed in pale pink. Ringbearer was Master Michael Flanery.

Keith Hicks served his brother as best man. Ushers were Keith Frasure, brother of the bride, and Bobby Hicks.

The mother of the bride was attired in a long, two-piece pink gown of double-knit and wore an orchid corsage. The mother of the groom wore an aqua double knit dress and a corsage of carnations.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held at the Maytown luncheon room. Assisting were Mrs. Roland Burchett, Mrs. Phil Hamilton, Mrs. Theodore Martin and Mrs. Charles Bradley. Miss Robyn Frasure, sister of the bride, presided at the guest register. Mr. Hicks is employed at American Standard and Mrs. Hicks graduated from Allen Central high school in May and plans to attend Mayo Vocational School.

Kentucky Receives $599,263 For WIN

Kentucky has received an additional $599,263 in federal funds to continue its program to provide placement and (or) job training for people now receiving Aid to Families of Dependent Children (AFDC) payments.

The U. S. Department of Labor's Regional Manpower Administrator William U. Norwood, Atlanta, said the project is known as the Work Incentive Program (WIN) and offers training opportunities, job placement, and intensive follow-up and supportive services to areas having high concentrations of welfare recipients. The project serves the state of Kentucky.

Authorized in early 1968, and administered by the Department of Labor's Manpower Administration, much of the effectiveness of the program comes from its locally oriented programs which are designed to meet the specific needs of area participants.

WIN training opportunities, as do training opportunities in many other federal job training programs, often serve more than one person. As the participants, through training or direct placement, move into regular fulltime employment, the opportunities are made available to new participants.

The broad spectrum of services is made available, including personal and vocational counseling, child care, orientation, work experience training, on-the-job training, job development and placement, and follow-through to insure that once the participant has a job, he stays on it.

Local WIN programs are often developed to serve welfare recipients from multi-counties, although the WIN team is in a central location. Priority is given to welfare recipients presently enrolled in work-training programs to avoid unnecessary gaps and delays in training.

Eligible for the WIN program are members of households receiving aid to families with dependent children, who are over the age of 16 and are not in school full-time. Exceptions are: the sick, the incapacitated and the elderly; those who live too far away from a WIN center to make participation practical; and persons whose continuous presence in the home is required because of illness or incapacity of another member of the household.

To Vie For Miss Kentucky Title Recreation in the Mountains

The excitement is mounting for 40 girls across the Commonwealth as the annual Miss Kentucky Pageant draws nearer. The pageant will take place July 12-14 in Louisville's Macauley Theatre.

Miki Jane Little, of Melvin will represent Floyd county in the pageant. She is the 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Little and a graduate of Wheelwright high school. She is a tele-communications major at the University of Kentucky and will be playing a piano medley of composer Burt Bacharach's songs.

Miss Little enjoys showing horses and horseback riding. At the university she served her dormitory as secretary, and was a member of Block and Bridle and the Blue Marlin's swim club.

A total of $2,000 in scholarships will be awarded during the pageant, with the new Miss Kentucky receiving a $1,000 scholarship plus a $500 cash award.

Cancer Crusade Chairmen Thank Workers, Contributors

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Carter, co-chairmen of the 1973 Floyd County Cancer Crusade, this week expressed their thanks to all the volunteer workers throughout the county and all who gave to this cause for making it a success.

Mr. Carter said that because of the generosity of time and effort given by both groups this year's fund-raising is expected to surpass that of last year.

Any contributions not yet turned in may be mailed to Jim Carter, Prestonsburg.

Reffett added all Social Security business can be handled by telephone. Persons wanting to file Social Security or Black Lung benefit claims should telephone 886-8525 for an appointment.

Perkins Sees New Legislation As Vitally Important to Area

Congress has completed working on a bill authorizing $430 million to be spent helping communities build the facilities they need for beneficial industrial development, Representative Carl D. Perkins, a major sponsor of the legislation, reported this week.

Congressman Perkins said that "This bill to fund the programs under the Public Works and Economic Development Act, is vitally important to Eastern Kentucky. It carries $200 million for public facility grants, $55 million for public works and business development loans, and $35 million for technical assistance.

"Eastern Kentucky has been making progress because the Public Works and Economic Development Act has helped our counties and communities build the facilities they need to attract good industry," Perkins said.

"If the President will sign this bill, and not veto it, it will help us maintain our progress," he added.

Perkins was an original sponsor of the legislation setting up the Public Works and Economic Development Act when it passed in 1965.

He said that in addition to the money for public facility grants, public works and business development loans, and technical assistance, it also contains $45 million for growth centers and economic development districts, and $95 million for Regional Economic Development Commission programs, such as the Appalachian Commission.

"Besides helping the people in our area of Kentucky get some of the public facilities other areas have, these kinds of programs pay for themselves, because they generate jobs and industry," Perkins said.

By CONNIE SARGENT
From "Mountain Memories," newsletter of The Appalachian Oral History Project at Alice Lloyd College. The customs, music, recollections of early Appalachia are being preserved on tape through student interviews of older residents.

In the early days, there were very few forms of public recreation—no radios to listen to, no televisions to watch, no cars to travel in. Therefore, the people of Appalachia had to create their own forms of recreation and did very well. They were content to get together after a hard week's work to enjoy one another's company by working and talking together. There were many kinds of recreation; some of the more popular ones were the quilting bee, corn shucking, bean stringing, pea shelling, wool picking, house raising, log rolling, bee hunting, and square dancing. Three of the most enjoyable recreational pastimes were the quilting bee, corn shucking and bean stringing.

One of the major pastimes of the mountain women was the quilting bee. Exclusive only to women, they could talk about their daily lives while making many beautiful and useful quilts. One mountain historian, Mrs. Dexter Ratliff of Ashcamp, Ky., talks about the quilting bee.

"For recreation, the women would work making quilt tops and then they'd have white bottoms that they would make sometimes; they'd weave their cloth to the bottom for the lining of their quilts and they made their own cotton for the padding and they'd have quilting bees. So the women would all come and they'd put the quilt up, six or eight or ten women that lived for miles around, and they'd talk and that would be their entertainment. They'd be telling each other all the things they'd done and they'd sit there and they'd quilt. Maybe three or four quilts out in a day.

Another mountain resident, Mrs. Sally Gayheart, of Price, Ky., who was interviewed by Patti Rose, also recalls the quilting bees.

Another popular form of recreation was the corn shucking. By mixing work with pleasure, the usually tedious job of shucking corn became an enjoyable experience. Mrs. Dexter Ratliff vividly remembers the corn shuckings:

"In the fall of the year, they would have a corn shuckin' bee and they would shuck corn and then everytime that a boy found a red ear, he'd get to kiss the girl that he liked, and they'd have a big laugh. And shuckin, they'd throw the shucks over in one place and the corn over in another one."

Mrs. Flora Rife remembers the corn shuckings and how much the people enjoyed having them.

"...when they'd shuck the corn, everytime that they'd find a red ear, whoever found that red ear got to kiss the prettiest girl there. I got a many of kisses like that."

Mrs. Sally Gayheart also recalls the corn shuckings!

"They'd have corn huskin's for the men and they'd put a big gallon under the corn pile and they had to shuck all that corn pile, husk it you know, before they got to the whiskey."

Another mountain historian, Mrs. Zeeola Yates, of Honaker, Ky., remembers the corn shuckings:

"They'd have corn shuckings and right down in the bottom, they'd say, 'Now, quicker you get down in the bottom, that's when the whiskey comes out.' Yeah, they had bottles of stuff."

A third very popular form of recreation in early Appalachia was the bean stringing. Because people had a large garden and an abundance of beans, it was almost a necessity for neighbors to get together and help each other string their beans. Because of the good will of these mountain people, helping each other became a fun experience.

Another resident historian interviewed by the Appalachian Oral History Program, Flora Rife, recalls the bean stringings:

"After mommy and poppy moved back to the farm, we raised big crops and all us children'd go home an they'd have a gathering there an they'd pick all the beans an clear out the parlor an pour all the beans down in the floor. An they'd gather up neighbors an friends an they'd clean them beans an quick as the last beans was clean, would maybe be two days of bean cleaning and corn shuckin and they'd clean them beans as when the last beans was cleaned up, they'd have a hoe-down dance. They'd sweep up the floor and everybody would start pickin the banjer and singin songs an uh, have a hoe-down dance We had a good time, danced till daylight in the morning. Square dance, that's what we had. And everybody enjoyed it an then they was a big jug of corn liquor buried right down in the bottom of them beans for the men to taste."

Because of the isolation of the mountain people, the people made do by converting work experiences into fulfilled recreational activities. However, after the advent of the radio, televisions, and cars for travel, the quilting bee, corn shucking, and bean stringing, formerly a way of life, began to fade. However, the fond memories of these simple forms of recreation still live in the hearts of many mountain resident historians.

East Kentuckians In Dayton, O. Form Ky. Mountain Club

Some Eastern Kentuckians are re-establishing their links home.

Our Common Heritage, Kentucky Mountain Club, Inc., was formed last year by former Kentuckians living in Dayton, Ohio. The non-profit club now has more than 500 members and has sponsored several well-attended public events featuring Kentucky folk entertainment.

The club's objectives include:
—Enhancing a positive image of Eastern Kentucky's culture and accomplishments;
—Encouraging former Eastern Kentuckians to return to visit the state to observe its progress and opportunities for future progress;

—Supporting educational programs that create awareness of Eastern Kentucky's history, traditions and folklore.
—Advocating more responsive help from private and government agencies dealing with the problems of people migrating from Eastern Kentucky.

Last year Our Common Heritage sponsored a Kentucky Mountain Day program at the Xenia, Ohio, Fairgrounds, attracting between 6,000 to 9,000 people, according to press estimates. Another Kentucky Mountain Day program is scheduled for July 14 at the Xenia Fairgrounds.

The club also has sponsored a Christmas party, square dances, benevolent projects and fund-raising ball games.
All officers and trustees are former Eastern Kentuckians.

Environmentally Speaking

by THOMAS O. HARRIS
COMMISSIONER
Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection

I cannot repeat too many times how proud I am of the manual on surface mine reclamation which our Division of Reclamation recently completed. I believe this book is the most comprehensive manual on strip mining ever written by any organization in any state.

This manual certainly will not solve all the problems of the strip mining industry, but it represents a large step in the right direction. We realize that before an operator can comply with our requirements, he has to know what those requirements are and he had to know how he can comply.

This manual represents a storehouse of information that will aid the coal industry in developing and implementing acceptable reclamation plans.

Within this manual are about 300 pages of information which I believe will prove very helpful to the strip mining industry in fulfilling the requirements of our current reclamation law. The manual not only contains the law and regulations pertaining to strip mining, but also includes procedures and policies of the Division of Reclamation. It has handbooks on revegetation and sediment control which give the operators information on how to comply with the law.

This manual, the result of many hundreds of hours of research, will in turn save us many hours of backtracking, of explaining policies over and over again. It will save us hours of finding and correcting violations caused by operators who didn't understand our requirements or didn't know how to comply with them.

We're mailing a manual to each of Kentucky's 500 or so active strip mine operations. Additional copies can be obtained at $10 each by writing to the Division of Reclamation, Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Miss Jagers Receives Western Regents' Grant

Bowling Green, Ky.—One high school senior from Floyd county is among 150 Kentucky high school students who are recipients of Regents' Scholarships from Western Kentucky University for the 1973-74 academic year.

The Floyd recipient is Susan Jett Jagers, who was graduated June 1 from Prestonsburg high school.

The scholarships are awarded each year to students from Kentucky high schools on the basis of scores on the ACT exam, grade point average in high school, rank in class, and the recommendation of their high school faculty.

Lewis To Serve In Tenn. Tech Project

Cookeville, Tenn.—Al Lewis, a Tennessee Tech student from Wheelwright, is participating in the 34th American Legion Boys State in progress on Tennessee Tech's campus as a special student counselor.

Lewis, who received his B. S. degree at the university's commencement exercises on June 9, serves as a counselor to Boys State delegates in the mythical Lewis City.

Boys State is a practical experience in self-government for more than 500 elite high school youngsters from across the state. When they arrive on Tech's campus they create and operate a mythical 51st state, Lewis City, for which by coincidence Lewis is a counselor, is one of 12 cities that make up the four counties in Boys State.

Lewis has been a student counselor two years. He was also a Boys Stater in Kentucky in 1967. He played varsity basketball at Tennessee Tech, making first team All-Ohio Valley Conference. He set Tech free throw records and was regarded as the best defensive player on the team.

You and the Draft

By Colonel Taylor L. Davidson

Kentuckians who have been late in registering for the "draft" have received a letter from our office. It informs them that this tardiness has been made a matter of record in their Selective Service file.

Normally we do not receive an acknowledgment from a letter of this type. However, one young man did take the time to explain why he was late registering for the "draft": he thought it had ended.

Nationwide, young men reaching draft age have misinterpreted the statement by the Secretary of Defense which brought the induction authority to an end.

His statement did not end that part of the law requiring each male citizen to register for the "draft." Young men must still register at age 18 (any time during the period of 30 days before or after the 18th birthday).

Failure to register at the correct time can result in Federal prosecution. Fines and imprisonment are provided by law for failure to register.

"Draft" boards in some Kentucky counties have been closed, but volunteer registrars have been appointed in counties where the system cannot afford to maintain an office. Posters have been placed in Government offices, schools and other locations listing where and when young men may register.

The registration processing has been streamlined in locations having volunteer registrars. Normally the time required to complete the registration card is five minutes. It takes longer to register in our area offices because regulations permit the executive secretary to administratively classify the young man I-H (a holding classification) and issue the status card (a form showing the classification action).

Volunteer registrars are not authorized to administratively classify, therefore the status card must be issued by the board of jurisdiction. If a young man furnishes complete information at the time of registration, he may expect to receive his status card within a short time. If the status card is not received within a reasonable time, we would suggest that an inquiry be made. Hopefully, we have made it clear that young men still must register on time.

Campbell Receives Air Force Medal

KEY WEST, Fla.—Technical Sgt. Burnis Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Campbell, Allen, Ky., has received the U. S. Air Force Commendation Medal at Key West Naval Air Station, Fla.

Sergeant Campbell was decorated for meritorious service as an aircraft control and warning technician at Udorn Royal Thai AFB, Thailand. He is now at Key West Naval Air Station with a unit of the Aerospace Defense Command which protects the U. S. against hostile aircraft and missiles.

The sergeant is a 1953 graduate of Martin (Ky.) high school. His wife, Sandra, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Watkins, of Marietta, Ga.

At the university she is active in Phi Upsilon Omicron fraternity and the American Home Economics Association. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millard Gibson, of Betsy Layne.

Survey To Provide Future Growth Data

Which way is the U. S. birth rate going? Will it continue its recent downward course or will it reverse the trend?

Joseph R. Norwood, director of the Bureau of the Census Data Collection Center in Charlotte, announced this week that a survey in this area will help to answer the question. Information on birth expectations will be collected here the week of June 18-22 from a sample of households.

Census Bureau interviewers will ask wives how many children they expect to have within the next five years. The responses will indicate the future growth and composition of the Nation's population, data vital to planners both in government and private business.

Householders in the sample will also be asked about benefits from various government and private programs. Answers to these questions will be used to evaluate the effect of such income on the economy of the country.

The questions are in addition to the usual ones asked in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the Census Bureau for the U. S. Department of Labor.

All information about individuals and families provided the Census Bureau is held confidential by law and can be published only as statistical totals.

The interviewer who will visit households in this area is Mrs. Ella R. Daniel, Thelma, Kentucky.

Sports Afield

By Ted Kesting

There is no doubt that ducks—especially puddle ducks like the mallard—have been dying of lead poisoning. The poisoning comes from swallowing lead shot picked up with natural feed. It has been reliably estimated that the duck mortality from this cause is two to three percent of the flight of about 100 million ducks coming out of the north in the fall.

Because of this duck mortality, much study, research and shooting of iron shot has been carried out by the industry, government agencies and others. Pete Brown, Shooting Editor of Sports Afield, reports that significant results have been produced and more information is being built up as development of a lead-shot replacement proceeds. This is especially true in the case of iron shot.

However, judging from tests made on free-flying birds and controlled tests, there is evidence that iron shot—because of its light weight—is going to cripple more birds than has been the experience with lead shot. If this is true, the big question is: Will iron shot increase the crippling rate beyond the loss being experienced by lead poisoning? If we increase the crippling loss by say four percent to offset a lead-poisoning loss of three percent, we have the wrong answer to our problem.

Now someone is sure to conclude that hunters don't have to shoot ducks with anything. Just remind this "someone" that over the past several years the duck hunters' interests and the ducks' interests have been much the same. It has been largely the sportsman's concern and money which is responsible for the salvation of the ducks.

If it weren't for organizations like Ducks Unlimited which has, among other things, purchased thousands of acres of wetlands in the north where ducks nest, those 100 million ducks would not exist today.

The guns and ammunition industry has long been studying the lead-poisoning problem—the seriousness of it and possible solutions. The Western Cartridge Company, back in 1949, in cooperation with the Illinois Natural History Survey, made tests with a variety of materials with the aim of replacing lead shot.

Included in the tests were gold, silver, copper, iron and zinc. Gold, of course, is the best possible replacement for lead. But who wants to shoot gold shot? Iron came to the surface as the most practical substitute, but iron shot has several drawbacks. It eroded shotgun barrels, distorted chokes and because of its low density, the ballistics were inferior.

In the mid-1960s, some members of the industry, together with the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, contracted with the Illinois Institute of Technology Research to find a practical substitute for lead shot. In 1969, the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute (SAAMI) announced that the research project had again concluded that the soft iron shot showed the most promise. The industry has attacked the problem of making iron shot safe for use in all shotguns presently suitable for use of lead shot.

NO WELCOME SIGN

During this safari we got down to "where it all started." Jamestown. And would you believe it?—when we arrived, a few minutes after 5 p.m., they had a barrier across the road and a sign reading, "Do Not Enter." Wonder what Capt. John Smith would have done, had he run into such a situation, back there in 1607? Maybe the country would have been better off if Capt. John and I could have swapped places—in which case, it all would have been left to the Indians.

AN APPRECIATED ADDITION

In front of me is one of Russell May's beautiful paintings which he brought to this office, the other morning, in a commendable effort to brighten up these premises. I know as much about art as Rembrandt knew about distinguishing between a smallmouth and a largemouth bass. But that deters me not a whit from proclaiming this painting "absolutely beautiful." Russell May amazes me.

BARREN?

Mr. L. S. Jagers, of Elizabethtown, Ky., turns me and his son, the Rev. W. D. Jagers, a bilious sort of green with his story of a fishing trip, a few days back, at Barren Reservoir. Told us, he did, of landing a seven-pound bass on his first cast, then casting right back to come in with a six-pounder.

Refuse to identify the speaker, but one of us, hearing the story and wanting to express skepticism, remarked, "This man needs your prayers."

I believe Mr. Jagers. He's a top fisherman and knows where they hang out. But I want him to explain to me where they got that name, "Barren." Barren of what?

TO READ THE SYMPTOMS

Ever since I read somewhere that the bite of a pregnant tick may prove fatal, I've been trying to figure out how this delicate condition might be discovered in the critter. The solution came during a learned discussion of the matter, the other night, when it was suggested: "Why, just watch the tick, and see if it gets sick in the morning."

Resources Protection Leader In 'Pep Talk' Here to Coal Men

In a speech at Prestonsburg Community College last Thursday night in which the word "environment" was conspicuously absent, Thomas O. Harris, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, told a large group of strip-mine operators from Eastern Kentucky and West Virginia that cooperation between the coal industry and his department was essential for the continued prosperity of the industry.

Harris emphasized throughout the talk that the purpose of his visit to the area was not to tell strip operators what to do but to promote unity within the coal industry and between coal and reclamation officials. He stressed the point, "We're not there to put you out of business—we're there to work with you."

He said that coal production in the future must actually be increased, quoting predictions that America's fuel needs will double in the next 12-15 years.

Failure to keep up with these ever-increasing requirements would relegate the U. S. to the position of a "second rate" nation, he added. "I can't believe," said Harris, "that the country's leaders would let the U. S. become a second rate nation depending on other countries for fuel." The answer to these needs, he told the group, is in coal production.

In what seemed in many ways a sort of coal "pep talk," Harris added that western states such as Montana are increasing their coal production and establishing themselves as serious competitors with the eastern coal fields. He challenged the coal representatives in light of this fact, to "build the future of the coal business in Kentucky the way it should be built."

A new "Manual On Kentucky Reclamation" was distributed to each of the operators at the meeting. Prepared by the Kentucky Division of Reclamation, the manual outlines all the latest regulations and procedures pertaining to surface mining. Harris said he was distributing the manual to give operators "something to chew on," and stressed that he and his department were receptive to suggested revisions or criticisms that those in the coal business might have.

"I want your input," he told the group.

STRESS LITERATURE INTEREST

According to a study by the National Council of Teachers of English, 99 percent of 17-year-olds look upon the study of literature as an "important" part of the high school curriculum and believe it to be a "positive experience." The study, which included more than 70,000 public and private school students and non-students, also found the youngsters see literature as having a practical value by improving their speech and grammar, thus enabling them to find better jobs. Almost one-third of the youths felt that study of novels and poetry helped them achieve self-understanding and tolerance of new ideas. Another finding—98 percent of the nation's 13-year-olds read books on their own at home.

Alcohol-Drug Workshop Set Here June 22

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, the community mental health agency in the Big Sandy Region, will sponsor a workshop June 22 on the new alcohol and drug abuse rehabilitation law which goes into effect in Kentucky July 1. The workshop is designed to inform the community of the provisions of the new law and its impact on alcohol and drug treatment programs.

The workshop will be held at Prestonsburg Community College from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. Howell Brady, Jr., counsel to the Kentucky Department of Mental Health will discuss the alcohol abuse portions of the law. Mrs. Maria Fitzpatrick, community legal resource specialist for the Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, will explain the drug provisions. The law's impact on treatment and rehabilitation programs, present and future, will be discussed by James Klein, regional alcohol and drug coordinator, and Richard Stai, executive director of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

More than five hundred persons from Pike, Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin counties have been invited to the workshop. They represent the legal, judicial, law enforcement, medical, educational, business and civic communities as well as mental health support groups such as county mental health associations. O. T. Dorton, president of the Region 11 Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, will serve as moderator of the workshop, James Klein, workshop coordinator, said.

P'burg, Lackey Get Funds In Municipal Aid Program

Governor Wendell H. Ford and Transportation Secretary Elijah M. Hogge last week announced the 1973-'74 Municipal Aid Program for the city of Prestonsburg. The program for Prestonsburg is based on an allotment of $15,481.19 for the coming fiscal year.

Commissioner James E. Gray, head of the newly established Bureau of Highways, explained that the Municipal Aid Program here provides for drainage, blacktop resurfacing and construction of sidewalks on certain streets.

The activities authorized will be accomplished by the city, with the Bureau of Highways financing all or a portion of the work in accordance with the Municipal Aid Agreement.

While campaigning Governor Ford stated repeatedly his concern about the money problems of Kentucky's cities and towns and his intention of finding some manner of helping local officials meet them. The Municipal Aid Program, which becomes effective July 1, 1973, is the product of his concern and commitment.

Ford and Hogge also announced the 1973-'74 Municipal Aid Program for the city of Lackey will be based on an allotment of $1,330.07 for the coming fiscal year.

Commissioner Gray explained that the Municipal Aid Program provides for stone on Collins Street and School Road in Lackey.

The appropriation for the fiscal year beginning July 1 is $9,330,000. This sum is distributed among the incorporated and unincorporated areas, according to the terms of a formula chosen by the General Assembly in 1972.

The program is selected annually after consultation with the city or urban place. A formal agreement has been signed by officials acting for each party.

Stringent Water Proposals Offered

—Most speakers at a recent public hearing praised Thomas O. Harris, Commissioner of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, for calling for the most stringent classification possible for Kentucky's intra-state streams.

The hearing in Frankfort was held to obtain comments on Harris' proposal to classify for all-uses the state's intra-state and inter-state surface waters not previously classified.

The proposal, the second step in the stream classification system, would classify all waters shown on the 1973 "Streams of Kentucky" map, prepared by the Kentucky Department of Commerce, for all uses (the most stringent classification possible.) A few streams and portions of streams otherwise designated by law, such as free-flowing wild rivers, would be excluded.

The first step of the classification system, that for inter-state streams, has already been completed and approved by EPA. According to Harris, underground waters will be classified next.

Although most persons praised the stringent classifications, a few coal representatives objected, saying the state should not make its regulations more stringent than the federal government requires because of the expense of extra controls. Earlier, an EPA spokesman commended Harris for the strictness of the classification.

To The Voters

Of Floyd County:

I want to thank all the people who voted for and supported me and made it possible for me to win the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Floyd county. To those who opposed me I have no ill feeling and, if elected in November, you can be assured that you will never be treated unfairly. My only intention is to make Floyd county a better safer place in which to live. Your vote and support will be appreciated in November.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of my father, Silas Colley:

Dad, I can't put in words what's in my heart—

Oh, I miss you so very much!

Since God took you away

Part of me went with you

The moment we had to part.

No one can fill the emptiness
Or give me comfort as you did,
Except the Blessed Lord above;
So my trust, I put in Him.

May we meet some day in heaven
Where we shall never part again.
Up there will be no more pain or suffering.

And all our troubles will be at an end.

I prayed many a prayer
In the wee hours of the night,
That if it be God's blessed will
He'd give me the strength and courage
To care for you the rest of your life.

You loved your home so dearly
And wanted your children near.
They all did what they could for you,
Dad, while you were here.

May the home you've gone to, Dad,
Have streets that are paved with gold.
May you see the face of our dear saviour

And dwell with Him forevermore.
It.

Historical Figures To Highlight Music Theatre Opening, June 20

History—exciting and comically irreverent history set to music—will take over the stage of the amphitheatre at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park next Wednesday (June 20) to continue through July 8th (Wednesday through Sunday nights) when the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre presents "1776," the award-winning Broadway hit that chronicles the squabbles and conflicts leading up to the Declaration of Independence.

Written by Peter Stone—winner of an Oscar for his screenplay for "Father Goose," and winner of an Emmy for his TV series, "The Defenders"—with songs by Sherman Edwards, "1776" drew capacity audiences for three years in New York, and was crowned with both a Tony Award and a New York Drama Critics Circle Award as the best musical of its first season.

The unusual aspect of "1776" is that it humanizes the personal and sectional conflicts that erupted in the Continental Congress as it dawdled up to the momentous decision to cut the American colonies loose from England and thus to form a new nation.

In the history books the members of that Congress are usually painted in heroic poses as bands of foresighted, patriotic and selfless statesmen, but "1776" depicts them somewhat differently—as flesh-and-blood men with a variety of strengths, problems and weaknesses. The show has fun with their bumbblings, timidities, quirks of character and spiky argumentativeness before they managed to agree on and sign the document that gave birth to our country.

It has fun with the likes of John Adams—to be played by Gary Marachek—pushy and insistent on Independence and shouted down by his colleagues as "obnoxious and disliked;" fun with Benjamin Franklin, to be portrayed by Michael Edwards as a foxy, old gaffer with a bawdy bent on mind and a taste for witty epigrams; fun with Thomas Jefferson, to be played by Pete

Franklin as an ardent young husband so homesick for his wife that he can't concentrate on drafting the Declaration until she is brought to Philadelphia to join him.

The cast of the show abounds in other famous Founding Fathers, engaged in passionate wrangles, poisonous insults and even physical blows. Kevin Dearingier will be seen as Rutledge, the South Carolinian who threatens to block the Declaration unless an anti-slavery clause is removed—and supports his position with one of the show's most rousing songs, "Molasses to Rum," charging the northern colonists with hypocrisy, since their ship-owners had grown rich in the slave trade.

Steve Wilmot will portray Dickinson, the Pennsylvanian who held out for reconciliation with England and Peter Heuchling will portray Richard Henry Lee the buoyantly proud Lee of Virginia.

Two women make an incursion into this otherwise no-Eve debating and decision-making maelstrom. Kay Enoch will appear as Tom Jefferson's bride, to sing to Franklin and Adams her paean to her husband's charms, and Kathryn Paris (Abigail Adams) materializes from time to time to sing duets with her husband John Adams in "certain reaches of his mind."

Richard Bryant as the Courier has one of the two fictional, non-historical roles, that of a courier who turns up a number of times with dispatches to the Congress from an ever-more-desperately pressed George Washington—a minor role with which every actor who has played it in

Gary Marachek as John Adams and Kathryn Ann Paris as Abigail Adams, who will enact leading roles in "1776" at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre.

New York, in other large cities of America and in London, has nearly stolen the show. Weary and dusty from his long rides on horseback, this ragged courier has always won great laughs as he lurches across the stage to deliver his dispatches, with spurs clanking and little respect for the "statesmen" he is interrupting, and he always brings down the house with a tear-producing song about a dying soldier, "Momma, Look Sharp."

Fourteen songs in all carry the action forward, such as Adams's disgusted comment on the way the Congress indulges in "Piddle, Twiddle and Resolve," the chorus sung by the entire Congress as they shut up the irritating Adams, "Sit Down, John," and the rousingly comic song-and-dance in which Franklin and Adams maneuver Lee of Virginia. And, of course, there are the romantic ballads involving the wives of Jefferson and Adams.

The theatre is now open daily. Tickets may be purchased at the box office from 9 to 5 daily and also on the nights of performance up until show time. Call 886-6647 or write P. O. Box 22; Prestonsburg, for information.

MAYTOWN NEWS

MAYTOWN BAPTIST CHAPEL TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

On Sunday, June 17, at 4 p.m., the first anniversary of the Maytown Baptist Chapel will be observed with a combined fellowship and social hour. Among guests will be the Missions Committee of the First Baptist Church of Allen, Kentucky, whose pastor, Rev. Earl Waugh, will participate in the brief program preceding refreshments. Chapel Director, Howard Ramey, appointed Libby Ree Flanery as general chairman of the occasion. Various committees are preparing for the event. Other speakers will include chapel pastor, Rev. Glen Noe, of Mousie, and Dr. Ralph Allen, layman, of Pikeville.

Chapel growth has been phenomenal from the beginning. Its first Bible School was concluded Sunday with the commencement program.

YOUR HUNT IS OVER.

A Fox is quick (0 to 50 in 10 seconds). It's surefooted (front-wheel drive). This sly, cunning sedan can take the sharpest turns nimbly (sports car type steering and suspension). It can stop straight in its tracks (special braking—steering systems). And it doesn't eat much (23 miles per gallon). Best of all, for a reasonable price you can catch the Fox.

 Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, through its Division of Fisheries, has created a "new look" in the farm pond stocking program.
 Charles Bowers, director of the division, pointed out that the county conservation officer is still the key man to contact in this new procedure and that all applications must be processed through the officer.
 Farm pond applications must be completed and turned in by October 1, 1973. Then in November, for land-owners with new ponds or ponds that have been chemically treated, bluegill fry and two-inch channel catfish fingerlings (50 per surface acre of water) will be stocked. In May of 1974, black bass fry will be added.

Bowers pointed out that, as usual, farm ponds are stocked by the department free of charge. The agency has stocked some 60,000 farm ponds throughout the Commonwealth.
 Farm ponds can provide outstanding fishing, especially where ideal conditions exist. Examples of just how big largemouth bass and bluegill may grow under ideal conditions are documented in Fish and Wildlife's Frankfort office.
 The state record bluegill was harvested by William S. Wolley, from a farm pond in Taylor County; it tipped the scales at 3 pounds and six ounces.
 A largemouth bass, taken from a farm pond in Anderson County, weighed in at 13 pounds and 4 ounces (this fish was just 4 ounces off the state record of 13 pounds and 8 ounces.) This trophy bass was taken by W. L. Carter, Jr.

Kidney Foundation Names Mrs. Spradlin Chairman

Mrs. David Bruce Spradlin, of Prestonsburg, has been appointed County Chairman by the Kidney Foundation of Central Kentucky. As County Chairman, Mrs. Spradlin will conduct the programs of the Kidney Foundation in Floyd county.
 Kidney Foundation activities support research in prevention and better treatment of kidney disease and also make today's therapies, artificial kidney machine and transplant, available to more victims.
 Kidney machines save lives but their operation is expensive. Hospital treatments cost $20,000 to $25,000 per year. Operation of a kidney machine at home costs about $12,000 to $18,000 the first year and $5,000 to $10,000 each year thereafter. These high costs and the acute shortage of trained personnel contribute to the death of more than 8,000 kidney disease victims each year.
 More than 1,000 transplants were done last year, yet nearly 10,000 people in need of a transplant did not receive one because needed facilities, skills and organs were not available.
 The Kidney Foundation programs help to reduce these death rates and also provide funds for research which may someday eliminate kidney disease.
 The chief source of funds for the Kidney Foundation is the annual sale of trick-or-treat candy.

Burning of Coal Underground May Be One Answer to Crisis

An underground coal seam burning 400 feet below Hanna, Wyo., may provide one of the answers to the nation's energy crisis.

The fire, set off March 28 by the Bureau of Mines, is intended to demonstrate that low-level synthetic gas can be produced for conversion into electricity by power plants.

Even though results of this test may be months away, bureau officials are planning to touch off a second underground coal fire in one of the Appalachian states. Bureau Director Elbert F. Osborn said the Appalachia experiment is needed because the type of coal and geological conditions in that part of the country are different.

"We're checking what's going on down there (at Hanna)—trying to find out how much of the coal is burning," a bureau official said.

To determine the size of the underground fire, new holes are being bored into the ground around the seam. The official said the bureau is also contemplating pumping oxygen into the seam to intensify the fire.

If all goes well, the burning 20-to-30-foot-thick seam of coal will produce a synthetic gas with a range of 150 to 350 British thermal units per 1,000 cubic feet, a good quality for a power plant. Natural gas has about 1,000 BTU rating.

The method offers several advantages over strip-mining or deep-mining low sulfur coal for use in power plants.

"If we can do this commercially," a bureau official said, "we'd eliminate the mining costs, we'd eliminate the safety hazards of deep mining and eliminate strip-mining costs—we wouldn't have to restore the land after mining."

In addition, by burning the coal underground, most of the sulfur that creates air pollution problems is removed before it reaches the surface, and the remainder is easy to remove, the official said. Thus seams of high-sulfur coal could be used.

Huecker Says Cut Would Have Hardest Impact In East Ky.

FRANKFORT, KY.—The Department of Economic Security announced last week that some unemployed parents will lose entitlement to Medicaid effective July 1. Economic Security Commissioner Gail S. Huecker said "the policy change was necessitated by a threatened discontinuance of federal funding for payments made to adults not meeting the restrictive federal unemployment definition."

The department is presently providing medical assistance to 7,634 families based on unemployment of the father. These cases include 15,244 adults and 21,539 children.

Under the policy change both children and parents will continue to receive medical assistance if the natural or adoptive father is employed less than 100 hours per month or is totally unemployed but has worked at least six calendar quarters during the five year period ending June 1, 1973.

Only children under 21 will be eligible in families in which the father is employed more than 100 hours, but less than 130 hours per month, the father is receiving unemployment compensation, attending a training course below the college level or has less than the required work history.

All families must be needy and every father must be registered for and actively seeking employment. Entitlement for the entire family ceases if the father refuses a bonafide offer of work or training.

According to Commissioner Huecker, no estimate of the number of adults to be removed from the program can be made at this time. During June, each case will be reevaluated and work history gathered to determine status under the federally imposed restrictions. "It is anticipated," she said, "that the impact will be greatest in Eastern Kentucky where there is a concentration of unemployed parent cases and limited work opportunities."

"It is regrettable," the Commissioner continued, "that assistance must now be denied those, who without the benefit of medical care may have even less opportunity to become self-supporting. However, the department was able at least to obtain HEW approval to continue assisting children in these needy families."

W. J. "Bill" Reynolds Thanks Floyd Voters

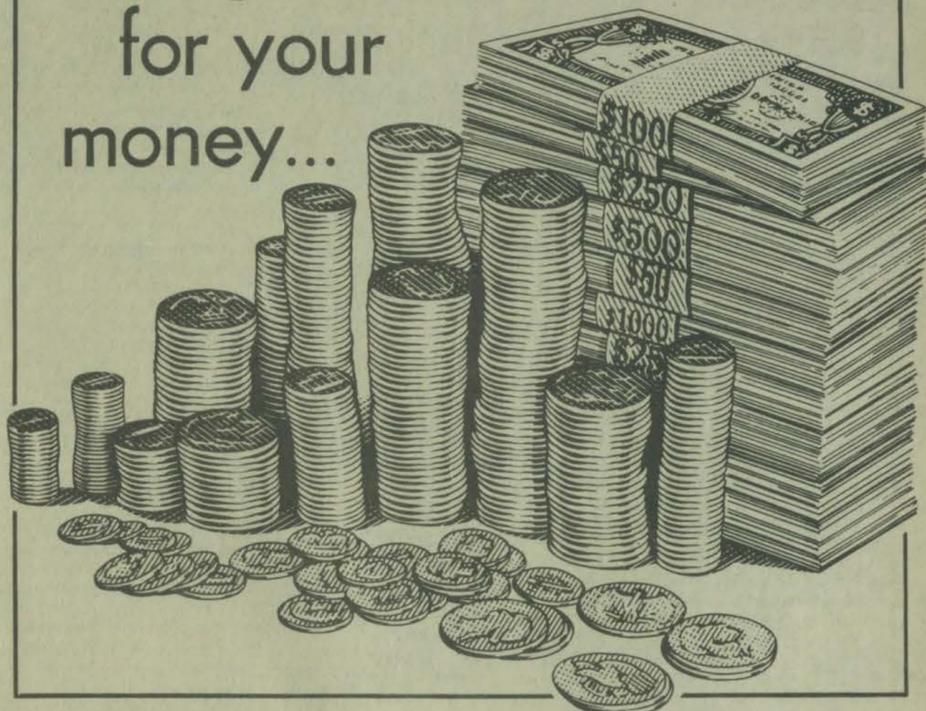

I wish to thank the voters of Floyd county for their confidence and support in the recent primary election. I shall continue to work in the interest of all Floyd county and its people, trying to help solve the many problems facing our area.

I ask all civic organizations and elected officials to join with us in our efforts. One Representative in Frankfort cannot do the job without the help of all interested citizens and leaders. As you know, the Legislature is composed of 138 members, and public opinion and help are needed for the accomplishment of our goals.

Again, I humbly thank you.

Burchett Defends Earnings In Compensation Actions

Woodrow W. Burchett, Prestonsburg attorney who is one of the lawyers whose incomes from handling so-called black lung cases have been under fire from The Courier-Journal and others, is far from ashamed of his record of success in workmen's compensation cases but is critical of claims that he and others are making too much money.

"I earn every dime I get, and I work for it, too," he said in a discussion of his income from such cases. "The problem is, there are those who don't want to see anybody in Eastern Kentucky make money. If you're going to compare lawyers' incomes, show the box score for us all—who did the most work, how many cases they handled, how much they got, and don't list just a few. There are lawyers in Louisville, for instance, who make more on one bond issue, doing a fraction of the work we do, than we'll make on 50 compensation cases."

Mr. Burchett earned $192,591 last year in fees from workmen's compensation cases, about 90 percent of which involved black-lung benefit claims. He explained that the term, "black-lung," is a generalization.

"They accuse us of making all this money from black-lung, but it comes from the state's Workmen's Compensation Board. Our average pay on a black-lung case is $300-$400, some as low as $50, some as high as $600. And even $600 isn't too much, I maintain, for a man getting $10,000."

The cases are taken, he said, on a contingency basis, and the Workmen's Compensation Board fixes the fee at 20 percent.

Discussing his income last year, Mr. Burchett pointed out that he handled 102 cases—and won 100 of them—for an average of less than $2,000 per case won.

The attorney has been practicing law here almost 40 years, and he pointed out that he made only $800 the first year. "It's not dishonorable to work, you know," he said. "This is coal-mining country, and compensation cases are, naturally, frequent. When miners first began coming to me, they would say they 'believed' they could recover under this law, but they didn't have the $100 for a doctor's examination, many times didn't have enough to hire a taxi. I loaned them money, took their cases on the chance we would win, and I've done all right. I've done nothing that is dishonorable, and I do not apologize for hard work and success at it."

Burchett defended the fees black-lung lawyers receive, citing the time-consuming and technical aspects of the cases.

A black-lung case may take from eight months to a year to settle, he said, and then many decisions are appealed. In addition, the involved procedures of the cases make them the most difficult to win, he said.

Burchett said much of his time is spent traveling in Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia to procure medical depositions for his clients.

About 10 depositions are needed to support a black-lung claim compared with only two for a personal-injury suit, Burchett said. Yet, the fees received by the attorney handling the case are computed on the same 20 per cent basis even though there's about five times more work involved, he said.

65 on Dean's List At College Here

Robert R. Allen, academic dean of Prestonsburg Community College, announced last week that 65 students have been named to the Dean's List for the 1973 spring semester. Southern States Co-op's Membership Meeting

(Delayed from Last Week)

The local Southern States Cooperative annual membership meeting for the Prestonsburg area will be held Friday, July 6. This decision was made by local farmer-members at a recent annual meeting conference held by Prestonsburg Farm & Home Store.

Among the features of this year's session will be the reports on Southern States Cooperative and the local agency operations for the fiscal year which ends on June 30.

In addition there will be elections and other business matters. Members will elect two new board members and two new farm home advisory committee members.

Attending the conference were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Meade, manager of Prestonsburg Farm & Home Store, and L. L. McClure, a member of Southern States Cooperative's regional headquarters staff, at Huntington, West Virginia.

Also at the session were the following members of the local Board and the Farm Home Advisory Committee: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hicks, Ernest Prater, Mr. and Mrs. Mortie Shepherd, Mr. and Mrs. John Wallen, Mrs. Edward Hatfield, Mrs. Charlie Lafferty. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Setser, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Wallen and Nan Baldrige.

Fraley-Prater

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fraley, of Drift, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Donna Gay Fraley, to Mr. Donnie Dwayne Prater, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Prater, of McDowell.

Miss Fraley is a 1973 graduate of McDowell high school. Mr. Prater is a 1970 graduate of McDowell high school and is now employed by the McDowell Trucking Company.

The open church wedding will be performed June 23 by the Rev. Ted Shannon at the Pentecostal Church of Christ at Drift. All friends and relatives are invited to attend.

Big Labor Pool, Workers' Ability 'Plus Factors' for Industry Here

A labor pool far in excess of actual industrial needs and the performance of area workers were listed as the two factors most conducive to industrial growth and development in the area by representatives of two local factories.

Milford Jett, plant manager at U. S. Shoe Company here, said, "We have more people than we have jobs for," and added that, "At present, we've got enough applications to supply another factory." Jett said that he had found that "Kentuckians just won't stay away," referring to the large number of local people who have moved to other states and have applied to U. S. Shoe for employment, hoping to come back to their native state. He said an added advantage of this sizeable out-of-state labor pool was that in most cases, these people have had some experience in factory work.

Jett also commended the degree of skill and productivity displayed by Eastern Kentucky workers saying they are "far above average in learning and capabilities."

Clyde Hall, manager of industrial relations at American Standard plant in Johnson county, supported Jett's statement concerning area workers by saying, "We have been extremely pleased with over-all performance." A large percent of Standard's laborers is made up of Floyd residents.

Hall also stressed the great advantage that area industry enjoys due to the large labor pool. He commented that presently, an excess of 14,000 applications are on file and that some 4,000 of these were submitted from out of state.

U. S. Shoe is presently in its sixth year of production here and American Standard began production in 1970.

Young Lawyers Elect Kazez, Powers Officers

The Young Lawyers Section of the Kentucky Bar Association elected Edward Glasscock, of Louisville, president for the 1973-74 year at the annual convention of the Association held in Louisville, May 23-25.

Among those elected to serve with Glasscock for the coming year were Michael M. Powers, second vice-president, of Pikeville; and D. B. Kazez, treasurer of Prestonsburg.

To the Voters Of Floyd County

I take this means to congratulate my primary opponent for a clean, open, above-board campaign, and welcome his pledge of support for this fall. I attribute my narrow victory to the fact that I just campaigned harder and I am looking forward to Nov. 6 and four years as Sheriff of all the people.

Incidence of Rabies High in State

Rabies is a cruel disease—to contract it and continue without proper treatment means almost certain death—a trauma of convulsion and paralysis.

But, partly due to efforts by the Kentucky Department of Health, there have not been any human rabies fatalities in Kentucky for more than 11 years—despite the fact that incidents of animal infestation have reached epidemic proportions in recent years.

As of the week ending May 27, Kentucky reported a total of 148 confirmed cases of rabies, during 1973, the highest number in the U. S., according to a Morbidity and Mortality Report issued by the National Communicable Disease Center, in Atlanta, Georgia.

Recent figures revealed that there were 174 confirmed cases of rabies as of June 5, according to Bob Clark, supervisor of the Kentucky Department of Health Rabies and Fluorescent Antibodies Laboratory. Of those confirmed cases, 89 were foxes, 32 cattle, 32 skunks, 13 dogs, three horses, three cats, one pig and one bat.

Clark indicated that the rabies diagnostic lab has been receiving about 200 test heads each month. He said that normally the number of specimens fluctuates through the year as the seasons change. But he warned that at this present level, "there is good indication that this will be a serious year for rabies in Kentucky."

"But also, we must consider that the increase in confirmed cases of rabies is partly due to the fact that during this time there has been a dramatic increase in the number of specimens for examination," Clark pointed out. He attributed the increase in the number of test heads to increased cooperation between the county and state health agencies in the past few years.

In addition to actually testing suspected animal specimens for rabies in the lab, the Frankfort based diagnostic team plots the distribution of rabies occurrence by county and animal species involved.

Mrs. Margurite Shauntee and Mr. George Thornton round out the diagnostic team. Mrs. Shauntee prepares many of the slide samples for analysis and Thornton is in charge of the animal room, where he inoculates test mice and removes brain samples from animals suspected of being rabid.

Rabies is caused by a virus. Entering through a wound, the virus attacks the nervous system and finds its way to the brain. There, it goes into an incubation period that usually lasts several weeks, according to Clark. He says however, that "if the bite is in the head or upper regions of the body, there is danger of a shorter incubation period."

At the end of the incubation period, the symptoms begin to manifest themselves. In scientific circles, it is generally recognized that the final trauma of rabies is a two stage process. First comes the "furious" stage, when the animal is nervous, jittery and will frequently bite. This is followed by the "dumb" stage when the paralysis begins to set in and weaken the animal. As the jaws become immovable, the animal can no longer breathe or swallow normally. Often the animal will drool or "foam at the mouth." Eventually, paralysis takes over the whole body. Convulsions and death follow.

There are three tests that can be run at the Department of Health facilities in Frankfort to determine if an animal was infected with rabies. The preliminary and most successful one is the Seller's Test. It gives same-day results. Selective portions of the brain are smeared on slides and stained. If the virus for rabies is present the slides will show it.

According to Clark, 95 percent of the positive rabies tests are confirmed with the Seller's Test, although the Fluorescent Antibody Test for Rabies and inoculations on test mice are frequently used to detect rabies.

Clark says that 15 to 20 percent of the test heads received and tested at the lab are positive. Of those confirmed cases of rabies, he added, "about 70 percent of them are human exposures. We call out the results to the victims, by phone, as soon as they are available. This is so treatment may begin immediately.

If outbreaks of rabies in Kentucky are to be controlled, or prevented in the future, the public must recognize the symptoms of rabies in animals and report such activity when they see it. Secondly, there must be a conscious effort to support and encourage the vaccination of all domestic animals. "There is a strong hint of evidence that vaccination will be effective in preventing the disease, in most cases," Clark added.

LOSING HAIR?

EBB'S HAIR SPECIALISTS

E. T. MILLER
WILL EXPLAIN HAIR PROBLEMS FREE
AT LANDMARK MOTEL, SUNDAY
JUNE 17 HOURS: 1 P.M. TO 8:30 P.M.

K. Fryer Shows He Regrew Hair He Did Not Have Male Pattern Baldness.

E. T. Miller will be back in Pikeville again Sunday, June 17. Now is the time to act on this great opportunity. Every man and woman now losing hair should take advantage of this FREE CONSULTATION.

GUARANTEED

You will be given a written guarantee on a pro-rated basis from the beginning to the end.

CAN'T HELP

Male pattern baldness is the cause of a great majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, for which no method is effective. Ebb Hair Specialists cannot help those who are slick bald after years of gradual hair loss.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss?

Many conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead you are beyond help. So, if you still have hair on top of your head, and would like to stop hair loss and grow more hair... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

FREE CONSULTATION

Just take a few minutes of your time on Sunday, June 17, and go to the Landmark Motel, Pikeville, Ky. between 1 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. and ask the Desk Clerk for E. T. Miller room number.

Don't Put It Off

There is no charge or obligation... all consultations are private, you will not be embarrassed in any way.
