Highlands Folk Fest Set Friday

Arts, Crafts, Music In Varied Program Of Ninth Festival

For the ninth consecutive year fiddlers, banjo pickers, dancers, poets, artists and artisans from the Kentucky mountains and elsewhere will converge this week-end on the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre for three days of demonstrating in their own way that traditional mountain folk culture is very much alive and flourishing.

The ninth annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival will this year be host to a greater and more varied number of performers than ever before with local "back porch" pickers performing on the same stage with nationally known folk artists and groups.

Under the direction of its founder, Mrs. Edith F. James, of Prestonsburg, this year's festival will begin at 7 p.m. Friday evening at the amphitheatre with a full night of traditional, mainly secular, music and dancing. Saturday's activities will begin with an arts and crafts exhibit at 11 a.m. at May Lodge and will include works by Russell May, Marvin Meade, Mrs. Josephine Robinson, Mrs. Vivian Hale, Mrs. Rhoda Brickley, Mrs. Winnie F. Johns, Mrs. Margaret Alley and Mrs. Richard Spurlock. Homer Ledford, of Winchester, and Dave Sizemore, of Prestonsburg, will also exhibit examples of handcrafted musical instruments.

At 2 p.m. a "poets' corner" will be held of May Lodge featuring original works and readings by Quentin Howard, Mrs. Lillie Chaffin, Paul Salyers, Mrs. Katherine McClure Amyx, Mrs. Elsie H. Lacy, Dr. Leonard Roberts, Mrs. Edna Morris, Mrs. Elizabeth Leete Stephens, Mrs. Esta Mae Tackett, Robert Rennick and Mrs. Rhoda Brickley.

Tackett Jailed In Hall Death After Shooting

Carlos James (Dicky) Hall, 37-year-old Grethel miner, died last Wednesday at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville, of a revolver bullet wound suffered Sunday night at his home, and two days later his brother-in-law, Greenbury Tackett, was named in a murder warrant.

The warrant for Tackett's arrest was issued following a court of inquiry conducted here Friday by County Judge Henry Stumbo. He was held in jail in default of $10,000 bond set by Judge

Mary Ireton, of Pocatello, Idaho, who said she is the common law wife of Tackett, also was held on $1000 appearance bond pending the convening next Tuesday of the grand jury which will investigate the slaying.

Both Tackett and his sister, Mrs. Ruthie Tackett Hall, widow of the slain man, denied knowledge of the shooting. Miss Ireton said she owned a handgun which she kept in the glove compartment of her car but Tackett denied ever

A 12-year-old boy testified at the hearing, however, that he saw Tackett remove such a weapon from the Ireton car and that he heard Tackett and Hall trying to trade guns.

550 Enrollment Seen for Year By Dr. Campbell

Prestonsburg Community College 'celebrated' its 10th birthday today (Wednesday) by opening for another year of work.

At the same time the only director the college has ever had since its opening in September, 1964-Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr.-will mark the beginning of a second decade on the job.

Although registration will not be completed till late today, Dr. Campbell expects a student enrollment this year of at least 550. That is 20 better than the enrollment projected in the Five-Year Plan adopted for the college.

It's 100 better than the enrollment figure projected by Ohio State researchers who did for the University of Kentucky a study of the Community College System. The college begins the year's work with 24 fulltime faculty members (it had 11 and a librarian when it began). Only Dr. Campbell, Robert Wallace, librarian, and Walter Frasure, faculty member, remain as "charter members of the club." PCC and Elizabethtown Community College were the first of the colleges to be opened in 1964 after the creation by the General Assembly of the Community College System. Now there are 12.

The college here has been developed along lines which give meaning to the term, "community college." Besides the formal college curriculum, it has 30 or more adult evening classes covering a broad spectrum of training people to work and enjoy life, crafts, arts and various skills. Last year, the college added nurse-training, and this year a cooperative educational program has been added.

Steamboat in River Bottom?— Story Evokes Interest Here

There is a mystery boat lying deep in the sand of the Big Sandy River here, and it was indicated this week that there is some local interest in an attempt at salvaging it.

backed by statements of Donald L. (Dootney) Horn and Jack Hyden, both of Prestonsburg, that they as boys in 1939 recovered its whistle and anchor and sold the two pieces to Tom Goodman, also of Prestonsburg, for $3.

Horn says that during sand-pumping operations in the river here by Junior Merritt the smokestack was located and he and Hyden walked along what they are convinced was the deck of the craft.

One business man here has indicated he will invest $100 in a salvage effort. He has an idea that if the old boat can be raised and restored at-say. Archer Park-it would be a showpiece that would claim wide attention.

There is no written record of a steamboat's sinking here. Such an incident is not even mentioned by oldtimers as they spin tales of the past. The name of the boat, its captain, its cargo, The claim that it is a steamboat is destination, time of sinking-all are unknown. Those who are convinced it lies awaiting removal from its burial place suggest it may have been a river victim in Civil War days. At that time, and for years after, steamboats plied the Big Sandy in time of high water, all the way from Catlettsburg to Pikeville.

Mr. Horn today pinpoints the location of the boat. It lies, perhaps under 10 to 12 feet of sand, he says, directly "behind" the riverfront home built here by the late McKinley Sparks.

At Jenny Wiley the Summer Music Theatre closed its season last Sunday night. The Skylift there, the stables and other attractions are expected to remain in operation for some weeks yet.

Sometime this fall, another type of activity will feature the Jenny Wiley program. This will be work on the $750,000 marina improvement at the Jenny Wiley boat dock area.

This work, however, may not begin till October, Denny Satterly, assistant park manager, said Tuesday. Mr. Satterly emphasized the point that no definite date for the work has been set but added that dredging of the harbor will be delayed until a geological study is completed.

This study is being made to determine the depth to which that arm of the lake can be dredged. After that, the entire harbor must be cleared for dredging to Dock improvements and other work

Mr. Satterly said Jenny Wiley State Park has had "a real good year." The early-season fuel shortage had no adverse effect on the number of park visitors. During this month May Lodge occupancy has been 98 per cent, and the cottage have been 96 per cent full.

Mrs. Stepp Sues For $978,000

A suit asking $978,000 in damages has been filed in U. S. district court at Catlettsburg against three police officers in the fatal shooting last month of Victor Stepp, former Floyd county man.

Mrs. Nola Stepp filed the action in the death of her husband, Victor, 56, at his home in Wurtland.

Defendants are Detective Douglas E. Asher and Trooper Thomas Reynolds of the Kentucky State Police post at Ashland and Wurtland Patrolman Ray Salmons.

Stepp was killed on his porch after he allegedly opened fire on officers attempting to serve a warrant charging disorderly conduct. The suit contends the shooting was without probable cause and adds that Stepp was not engaged in an offense at the time.

It asks damages for Stepp's death, loss of earning power, funeral expenses and punitive damages.

Take Care To Be Shocked

The greatest sin of this generation may not lie in what it has done but in what it has permitted to be done to it.

Within a relatively brief period the minds of people have been conditioned to accept the premise that realism in art and literature is to be found only in the dirty, tawdry and indecent. Every media of communication—spoken word, printed word, the cinema, television, radio—has had a part in the job. Some call it "brainwashing."

And now, dulling the public consciousness, comes the steady pounding of arguments for euthanasia (mercy killing) and abortion (the killing of the unborn in the name of population control and personal convenience).

There was a time when mention of either left most Americans in shock. Today, as a consequence of the onslaught waged through every means of communication upon the conscience and consciousness of the people, those who a few years ago recoiled at such sights and sounds now draw only an inch or so farther back in the shell of isolation and complacency, and accept it all as the norm of our mores.

Christianity Today, a religious publication which is in no sense extremist or sensational, in a recent editorial drew a shocking parallel between abortion and euthanasia, those two topics you are going to be hearing more and more about till they seep into your being and find resting place. The Supreme Court, it points out, has in effect legalized abortion on demand. And now, says Dr. Joseph Fletcher, a leading advocate of situation ethics: "To speak of living and dying encompasses the abortion issue along with the euthanasia issue. They are ethically inseparable."

While zero population growth—even a decline in the population—is being urged, abortion almost as desired is legalized. Meanwhile, the media gives more and more favorable treatment to euthanasia.

Both are means of ridding the earth of unwanted life. And that is the goal, isn't it?

If the United States of America becomes insensitive to such issues and permits the opinion-molders to anesthetize the public conscience to the extent some would have the nation go, who will say that "life" will continue to have its place in our basic law, along with the cherished "liberty and the pursuit of happiness"? If life for the unborn and for the old and sick-all helpless human creations—is to depend upon governmental decree or on people vested with authority, will it eventually become necessary to have a license to live? And to whom shall the subject go for this great and elemental favor? Ahead could lie a Hitlerian regimentation of life and death.

We turn again to the Christianity Today editorial to point to the danger. A Martha Willing is co-director of Population Dynamics, Inc., of Seattle, Wash., and this outspoken advocate of population controls was a featured speaker at the 1971 National Conference of Population Education which was held in the nation's capital. This is her "doctrine," as it appears in her book, "Beyond

Conception: Our Children's Children':

"After the third child is born, both mother and father will have to present themselves at the hospital to undergo sterilization procedures. If the couple does not appear, or if only one appears, there will be no birth certificate issued to the third child, but instead a third child paper. The mother can be tattooed or marked to signify a third birth to any subsequent doctor. Instead of the missing parent, the child can be sterilized on the spot, insuring that this undue share of the gene pool will not be carried forward."

Another speaker at the same conference, one Norman Podhoretz, saw "no reason why anyone who accepted abortion should balk at infanticide."

Another made this chilling statement:

"... no newborn infant should be declared human until it has passed certain tests regarding its genetic endowment; if it fails these tests, it forfeits its right to live."

Shocked? Be careful, as time passes and these views are voiced and promoted, over and over again, that you do not lose that vestige of sensitivity.

Letters to the Editor

About Senior Citizens

Editor, The Times:

Mrs. Jemima Shumate and I have been rather "put out" that our efforts to promote Senior Citizens has been to no avail. We've even been accused of "apathy."

Wonder if anybody can call in on Jemima Shumate, Hazel Crisp or me, any time during the evening the day before we are scheduled to go to Senior Citizens at Archer Park? I'll tell you. "No". And why? We're recruiting to fill the bus from Left Beaver.

Charles Harmon has cooperated and been extremely patient with us old "Biddies": driving in such a way my blood pressure doesn't go up and stepping forward to help when heads swim or legs don't seem steady. Mrs. "Dee" Burchett greets us with a welcoming smile while our director, Glenda Hall, counts noses and makes sure everyone signs the register at Archer Park, we've taken our lunch, sat around and been sent home. Makes me feel like an old cow being herded into a truck (Maybe tis my size). We sing all the way home. Kittie Rowland and Lora McKnight leads us and riding home is a happy time.

But how much are we getting out of our day? Lack of organization, say I. That's the bugaboo! Who has authority to organize? Not I! Mrs. Shumate says, "What is the organization for? Tell me that." She's been to Frankfort to Senior Citizens. She talks about their Newsletter, birthday celebrations, fishing trips, free meals and their concern for shut-ins. Mrs. Hazel Crisp is acquainted with Leslie county, I believe. She wonders what's wrong with us.

We need to survey our members as to needs. Have "home visitation teams," like churches do.

We don't need to go outside our group for volunteers to teach. We've talentwho knows our talents? Some have been so busy with everyday living they haven't had a chance until now to follow a hobby. Ethel Osborne, she does a beautiful job painting in oils. Old mills, covered bridges are her specialty. I'd like to point out others like Ermine Hall who made bird houses.-cute, red ones which look like miniature red barns. Mrs. Lucy Kitchen is a student of the Bible and tells me she'd like to teach a class or lead a discussion. As a little girl she read the Bible and Shakespeare. Visiting clergy could help us all. The denomination is of no consequence, as I see it. The comfort is the same, whoever is the interpreter.

Miss Alice Harris or Mrs. Trilby May could help us divide into committees and have some good groups for work, entertainment, help to Mountain Manor and

From Floyd County Times it appears the Retired Teachers have organized those same folks are candidates for our Senior Citizens group. But, how do we interest new folks and keep our "regulars"? When I ask someone to "go", they say, "Well, I can't spare the time if you're not doing anything."

Apathy? No.

Perhaps the answer is, do something in our own community so we'll have something to brag about when we do go to the county seat. If you city folk (Prestonsburg) want some of our fresh garden stuff, we'll share if you still want us at Archer Park. We feel sorta close to some of the Prestonsburg group because once they were our neighbors. Let's not let them drift away. Next time we have a bushel of beans to dry, let's gather around a table, reminisce, tell tall tales and get our beans "broke up to dry."

More about the Center

A short time back, a letter appeared in this column, stating all so-called activities, etc. at the Archer Park Senior Citizens Center, and asking for people to get behind their center. Sorry to say, there's no room behind it. Until this center is straightened out and shaped up, there will continue to be a severe lack of attendance.

These senior citizens are adults, not kindergarten, to be pushed and shoved. These people have all lived full, useful and hardworking lives. Now they feel they have time to do all the things they enjoy and have wanted to do and learn in past years. If they feel like sitting down to rest, sew, watch T.V. or nap they should be allowed to do it. If they would like to do something other than make dolls from bread dough or corn shucks, or flowers from egg cartons and make a suggestion to the director she should listen to them and consider it.

This center must have organization, cooperation and better understanding; informed, loving peole at the top if it gets out of this present stagnating pool. MARIE L. HARMON

Add Love of State With Weekend Travel

By HELEN PRICE STACY

The school year is just beginning and summer has almost ended. But as the poet said, "... the best is yet to be ... Families who made long vacation trips to western parks, eastern seashores and northern forests, now can enjoy weekend visits within Kentucky. To plan one- and two-day excursions to historic and entertaining places in the state, a "Guide to Kentucky Historical Markers" would be helpful. Copies of this guide are available from various sources including Kentucky state resort park gift shops, and they provide the week-end traveler a wealth of historical names, places and events. Did you know that Union County coal fields supplied fuel to power the steamboat Robert E. Lee in winning its historical Mississippi River race against the Natchez in 1870? A highway marker on US 27 in Mc-Creary County tells about Robbers' Roost Cave, bandit hideout of 1819-22. A Cherokee chief, Little Jake, son of Big Jake and Princess Cornblossom, rescued here a young girl who had been kidnaped by bandits.

Walter E. Scott was a native of Cynthiana. The marker explains that he was the famed Death Valley Scotty, a prospector who fooled investors with legends of lost gold mines in California. A $3 million castle in the desert was part of

"Elenores" in Washington County was the home of novelist-poet, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, best known for "time of Man," 1926, and "Great Meadow," 1930. She is buried in Springfield Cemetry. A marker in Paducah might tempt families to find out if a statement made by Irvin S. Cobb is still true. "Here, I claim, more chickens are fried, more hot biscuits are eaten, more corn pone is consumed, and more genuine hospitality/ is offered than in any town of like size in the Commonwealth.'

In Floyd County a marker at the junction of US 23 and Mare Creek Road tells how and why an "island in Pike County" is known as "Little Floyd." The game of golf was introduced to the mountains in 1889 by English developers who built a golf course at Middlesboro. A financial crash took them back to England 10 years later-but the game stayed.

The state boasts more than 1,000 markers, so what you can't include in your schedule this year can be saved for future tours following regular vacation

> Williamsburg. The annual festival at the restored 19th-century village near Harrodsburg, in Kentucky's Bluegrass Region, is a celebration honoring the Shakers, who lived at Pleasant Hill from 1805 to 1923.

> The United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing, given the name "Shakers" from the trembling that occurred during their devotional dancing, believed in celibacy, confession of sins, separation from the world and common ownership of property. They were creative and practical people, making lasting contributions in agricultural and mechanical fields.

> Early crafts are a traditional feature of the September Festival. This year's demonstrations will include pottery making, toleworking, leatherworking, vegetable dyeing, basket weaving, cottage cheese making, an apple butter stir, soapmaking, candlemaking and

> On Saturdays and Sundays during the festival, the Edgar Hume family of Frankfort will demonstrate leatherworking, using 18th-century methods and tools. On Tuesdays, Pleasant Hill's costumed artisans will be making "sweetmeats," delicious candied grapefruit and orange peels.

> Other special events will be a Candlelight Curator's Tour, a walk through the sleeping village by candlelight followed by hospitality "in the Shaker manner," and lectures on "The Art of Flower Decoration' by Sheila Mac-Queen of Bath, England.

A Shaker Ballet performed by the Louisville Ballet Company, September 14 and 15, involves the frenzied, whirling dances and traditional Shaker tunes that were part of the sect's religious lifestyle.

Advance reservations are required for many of the events. A complete festival schedule, and information on lodging and dining at Pleasant Hill, are available from September Festival, Shakertown at Pleasant Hill, Route 4, Harrodsburg, Kentucky 40330.

HORSE PARK TO CLOSE

The Kentucky State Horse Park at Lexington will be closed to visitors by Oct. 1, Park Superintendent Don Wathen says, as renovation and construction projects will soon get underway.

Although a definite closing date has not been set, Wathen says the park will not accept group reservations on the picnic grounds after Sept. 15, and the other facilities, including the gift shop and riding trails, will close shortly thereafter.

Previously scheduled events at the park, which stands north of Lexington on the Iron Works Pike, will be held throughout the construction period, he added. These include the High Hope Steeplechase and Margaret Hall Horse Show next spring and the American Kennel Club dog shows in the spring and Construction plans call for the renovation of 17 existing structures and the building of 34 new ones. On completion, the 963-acre park, formerly the Walnut Hall Stud Farm, will contain a model horse farm, visitors center, museum and theater, multi-purpose center, equestrian events area, picnic, recreation and camping areas and facilities for the Kentucky Equine Educational Program, which teaches the care and training of horses.

Alice Lloyd Plans Enviroment Center

Pippa Passes, Ky.—An Environmental Education Center to be located in Knott County is being planned by Alice Lloyd College officials. William Weinberg, director of the College's Appalachian Learning Laboratory, is working with several area residents seeking a suitable location for the center.

"The Center will be located off campus," in or close to the head of a hollow. We have looked at one privately owned site and have two other possible alternatives that are owned by, or available to, the College," said Weinberg.

Purpose of the center will be to provide an environmental learning experience for area elementary, high school and college students; and to provide area residents a means by which they can learn to solve some of their own environmental problems while increasing their incomes.

Weinberg said he conceives of the center as dealing with these isues:

How the residents of Knott County and the surrounding area can derive greater productivity and income from their landholdings.

How the traditional self-sufficiency of mountain people can be maintained and nurtured.

How environmental attitudes can be modified or affected so as to promote a greater sense of harmony between the land and the people.

"The Center will be run jointly by the College and the community," Weinberg said. "There will be a community advisory board that will help decide who directs the Center and what major activities will be undertaken. A community environmental specialist will be hired to keep the community closely informed about the Center's activities, to stimulate and facilitate community interest and involvement in the Center and to serve as a liaison between the community and the Center Director.'

The Center would include a community farm, an orchard, and a water reservoir. The Center would use wind, water, and possibly solar energy, according to Weinberg, to generate its own electricity. Also included would be "an environmentally acceptable system for solid waste disposal," he said.

Other possible components of the center, said Weinberg, would be a greenhouse, a fish farm, a nursery and vineyard.

"Other alternatives will undoubtedly arise once the Center is underway. The most important thing about most of these activites is that they make use of a relatively small-scale, inexpensive technology, thereby increasing the possibility of their being used by community people," said Weinberg.

For the seventh consecutive year a Floyd county boy won at the recent State Fair the state poultry judging cham-

Fifteen-year-old Mark McGuire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde McGuire, of Langley, is the new titleholder.

Besides that, three of the four Kentucky 4-H boys who recorded top judging scores in the senior division and thus won their way to the national judging competition in Chicago, next Thanksgiving week-end, are from this county. In addition to young McGuire, they are Steve Green, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Green, of Hueysville, who was second in the state contest, and Dale Conn, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hershell Conn, of Dana, who was fourth.

McGuire edged Green for the state championship by a single point. Of a possible 1100 points, the winner scored 1012 to 1011 for young Green. These two are members of the Allen Central 4-H Club. Conn is a member of the Betsy Layne club.

Anthony Moore, of Garrett, placed fifth in the senior division, and Deanie Daniels, 16, of Betsy Layne, was eighth.

In the junior division poultry judging competition at the State Fair Floyd boys won the first three top spots. Phillip Gibson, 13, of Langley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Gibson, was the top scorer with 920 points of a possible 1000; John Flanery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flanery, of Langley, was second with 913 points, and Dwayne Moore, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Budge Moore, of Garrett, won the third spot with 900 points. All three are members of the Maytown 4-H Club.

Teddy Meadows, 12, of Langley, placed fifth in the junior division. Other team members were Mark Westfall, of Ivel, and Bill Flanery, Todd Halbert and Melvin May, all of Langley.

Strip Miners Granted Continuance of Appeal In Permit Denial

A Morgan County coal company has been granted a continuation on its appeal of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection's denial of a permit to strip mine coal in the Red River watershed.

A 30-day delay was approved during a hearing on the appeal at the request of attorneys for Frederick-Kelly Inc. of White Oak, as the department's first witness completed testimony concerning problems that would be encountered if strip mining were allowed at the proposed site.

The company's application to mine approximately 97 acres on the headwaters of Lacey and Gilmore Creeks, both of which drain into Red River, was denied by the department's Division of Reclamation because the "proposed mining operation will adversely effect the Red River, a wild river ..."

Patrick Angel, former laboratory director of the Reclamation Division's Hazard field office, testified that soil samples taken from another proposed strip mine one-fourth of a mile from the Frederick-Kelly site showed that "any disturbance would result in revegetation difficulties." He said the acidity and high level of aluminum found in the coal seam and surrounding earth also would harm aquatic life.

Angel said the samples were collected on this site after E. Nickell Coal Co. applied for a strip mining permit. As a result of the tests that permit was also

He then asked for additional school as soon as all finishing touches on the building are completed. Clark urges time to allow company engineers to test all Floyd county school patrons and samples from the site.

Since Jack M. Friar, 4-H extension specialist, began coaching Floyd poultry judging teams in 1966, the county has almost monopolized state championships, producing the state champion every year except in 1967 when the county did not have a team because Mr. Friar was in graduate school. The champions whose names have by now almost filled the engraving space on the huge trophy are:

1966, David Gibson; 1968, James Hackworth; 1969, Clyde Tackett, Jr.; 1970, Charles Conn; 1971, Jeff Jones; 1972, Jeffery Martin; 1973, Carl E. Steele-and now Mark McGuire.

Asked the secret of his teams' success, Mr. Friar spoke of "a lot of hard work," and of talent. "And, besides talent, there's the fine character of the boys who are not only able to learn but willing to stick to the job, hour after hour."

The Mingo Oak was the most magnificent tree of its kind, and perhaps the largest one ever known. It has the distinct honor of being listed in the Hall of Fame of the American Forestry Association; its leaves are preserved in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. Pieces of its wood are kept in many museums and public places.

In its long life span, the big oak reached a height of some 200 feet and had a circumference at the base of 30 feet and some few inches. From the ground level to the first immense forks, it measured the sun. They turned golden yellow in the 145 feet. The branches formed a spreading crown of about 130 feet. Foresters estimated its huge trunk would produce 20,000 feet of lumber.

The Mingo Oak inspired the hearts of those who came to view its magnificent form. In many persons it kindled a new zeal for conservation of our forests. During the latter years of its life, the tree became a shrine; rustic benches were placed beneath its shade and during summer religious services were conducted there.

The Mingo Oak sprouted from a tiny acorn, the size of a marble and first looked up at the sun in the year 1361. It grew on a small flat of a hillside near the headwaters of Trace Creek, which empties into Pigeon Creek at Belo. (incidentally, the many "Pigeon Creeks" of the Tri-State region owe their name to the great flocks of passenger pigeons that often settled down to feast on the abundant oak mast before men slaughtered them to extinction.)

The Mingo Oak stood some 10 miles west of Logan, county seat town. It grew within a few hundred yards of the Logan-Mingo line at the Trace Creek Gap. The old buffalo trail or trace which once passed through the gap gave the creek the name of Trace.

The big oak died in 1938 at the age of 577 years. Its long life spanned the discovery of America, the birth of our great nation and the growth of the 13 original colonies into one of the mightiest nations on earth. The oak was 131 years old when Christopher Columbus discovered the New World. It was 259 years old when the

FLOYD COUNTY FISH & GAME CLUB

Mr. or Mrs. Anonymous, this exposure to the truth you seek is the very hardest thing to accomplish in this County. In early May 1974 the first issue of a Martin PTA paper "The Informer", dedicated to the truth, was distributed in the Martin school area. Later in the month of May, at the regular PTA meeting, we enrolled 51 new members, including teachers and our school principal, who for the first time in several years had even attended a PTA meeting. In this meeting, with this new majority, new officers were elected. The motion was made by the school principal to dispense with "The Informer," thus setting in motion the death of "The Informer." Our principal said in that meeting, "The people are already

Answer to Anonymous Letter

Regarding August 22 Martin

Thank you for your expression of confidence in me. Ordinarily anonymous letters are disregarded, but I am moved by this one because

You ask me to expose those you call "rascals" because of what you saw in the August 22 Martin PTA, and you ask me to "tell the truth in the Floyd County Times about a "deal" involving certain Martin people believed by some to be influential and a state official and his subordinate.

I read your letter with thanks to God that He has made me one of the unafraid and that He has given me the courage to speak out against the tyranny that exists in the Floyd County school system. I am motivated by will have gained the courage to run the school system FOR THE CHILDREN through elected representatives who ARE NOT POWER

the hope that the time will come in Floyd County when THE PEOPLE

The only way I could call names in the Floyd County Times to expose a "deal" would be if I had been present when the deal was made. The questions, however, can be asked in a few more weeks. Think of the "deal" in this way - if you knew about it and I knew about it, then the others that attended last Thursday's Martin PTA meeting must also know, or at least understand what is happening. Last Thursday's meeting was a demonstration in dictatorship, a PTA dominated by School Board employees and their families, a sprinkling of state employees families, and even a PTA state representative who was willing to form opinions and give advice, without being thoroughly informed.

We Americans know that the President of our Country can be impeached, yet we were told last Thursday night that we cannot remove a local PTA president from membership (as we had done), once he had been elected. This is tyranny on the local level, and is sad but not fearful, because this is America. More and more people are learning that once the curtain closes behind them on the voting booth, they need fear no one. During Hitler's reign our country plunged into open war to oppose that tyranny, but without the underground resistance in Europe, who knows how it would have ended. I am encouraged by your anonymous letter. Don't drop the ball. Hang in there with us and hopefully our effort will spread until we or our children may see Floyd County Kentucky's educational system freed from political quagmire. It cannot be merely a dream as long as there are those of us who raise our children to both love and fear God and to believe that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance.

I will not endorse my school board candidate in this answer, because I believe it would not be in keeping with the non-partisan policy of PTA. Our PTA can be a moving force for good once democratic process has been restored. I will say this, however, My candidate for school board District 2 has promised to work for a BIG CHANGE in school board policy. He WILL stay with us after he is elected, because he is the people's candidate. He is against Charles Clark and all his policies that are enforced through fear.

I invite everyone in school board District 2, who reads this letter, to question why your candidate is running. Ask him to put his answers in the Floyd County Times for all to see. Don't be deceived in this very important issue. The truth shall make our children free through equal and increased educational opportunities.

HOPE Industries Hire Mrs. Bell

HOPE Industries announced this week the appointment of Mrs. Linda Bell as vocational training coordinator. Mrs. Bell will be located at the general offices of HOPE at Allen. For the last five months, HOPE Industries, a community service of the District 11 Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, has been developing strategies for the employment of physically and emotionally handicapped persons in Floyd, Magoffin, Pike, Martin and Johnson counties. This process had led to the initiation of various programs such as lawn maintenance, reforestation and the collection of paper for recycling. Future plans call for other enterprises calculated to serve both the needs of the community and its handicapped citizens.

To accomplish this, HOPE has been recruiting a number of highly qualified professionals. Mrs. Bell is one of these.

John Bland, HOPE Industries general operation manager, said, "Mrs.Bell's educational and work background in vocational rehabilitation will give us the special expertise that is so important. People with her qualifications are rare and we feel most fortunate to have her joining our staff."

Part of Mrs. Bell's work will focus on increasing the skills of HOPE Industries' employees. Since existing levels of competence as well as the speed at which proficiency is likely to be attained, vary widely, close monitoring of the process is imperative. "It will be necessary for Mrs. Bell to devise training plans for each individual while taking into account their special needs and potentials." Mr. Bland commented.

Mrs. Bell, a native of Johnson county, received her master's degree in vocational rehabilitation from the University of Kentucky. She has extensive work experience with the Welfare Department in Johnson County, the Green River Child Development Center in Owensboro, the Bureau of Rehabilitation Services and Western State Hospital, before joining Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

The other evening, after having found refuge in a suburban restaurant, I found the music too loud for my sensitive ears. Uncle Crit for the Defense

By GEO. L. MOORE

Deep in the head of a hollow on Clay Fork of Singing Creek in Elliott county stands the old Crit Johnson Place. The two-story log house was constructed of white oak logs in 1887. Somewhere along the way, the logs were covered over with weatherboard siding. Remarkably well preserved, it stands today as a tribute to the man who built it. The log barn, built in the same period, is in the last stages of decay.

The full name of the man who lived here for many years was John J. Crittenden Johnson. He was affectionately known to all of his neighbors as Uncle Crit. He was a farmer, a school teacher and a lawyer. As time passed he devoted more and moe of his time to the legal profession. He probably reached the peak of his practice around 1912. He studied law with the late Bill Young of Morehead. He was a past master in pleading his case before a jury. He could exhaust Webster's supply of adjectives to induce a feeling of sadness and sympathy for his client in the eyes of the jury.

Uncle Crit enjoyed a wide practice in the circuit courts at West Liberty, Sandy Hook, Grayson and Morehead. He sometimes practiced in federal court at Catlettsburg. He had a brother, Sam, who was also a lawyer. When the two met on opposite sides, people would come from miles around to hear them engage in verbal combat.

Uncle Crit traveled mainly by horseback. When his trip was a whole day's journey, he carried provender for himself and his horse in his saddlebags. He was best known for his old-time mountain oratory. He had a deep, resounding voice that could be heard far beyond the confines of the courtroom. Around the turn of the century, there were few social activities for the young people in these parts. At certain seasons of the year they did have cane strippins, bean stringins, and apple cuttins'. Each of these activities was concluded by a square dance or some other type of merry-making. At one such apple cuttin', the festivities were just getting under way when the neighborhood drunk appeared on the scene. He immediately began to wreck the place. He turned over a table loaded with dishes, smashed two window panes, and began to break up the furniture. Finally, he was overpowered and subdued by the male guests.

brought to trial in circuit court. Uncle Crit was the attorney for the defense. The commonwealth attorney showed clearly the devastation that had been wrought by the intoxicated intruder. The two lawyers argued the case.

Uncle Crit arose and in his most courtly manner addressed the jury. He said, "Gentlemen of the jury I am completely dismayed; yes, I am surprised and shocked, that any grandjury in this Commonwealth would indict a man on such a frivolous charge. Gentlemen of this jury, my client stands before you an innocent man; he has committed no crime; he has violated no law. All in the world he was doing was introducing an apple cuttin'. Now let the prosecution show, if it can, where there is anything in the Kentucky statute that makes it a crime to introduce an apple cuttin'.'

Uncle Crit won the case.

Federal Agency Leaders in Tiff At Park Parley

Those who attended last Tuesday's hearing held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, by the Interior Secretary's Advisory Committee on Coal Mine Safety left the meeting with the feeling that not all is moonlight and roses between the two agencies which have most to do with coal-mine safety.

Thomas V. Falkie, director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, and James M. Day, acting administrator of the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA), clashed after MESA representatives had on more than one occasion claimed that few Bureau of Mines research projects lead to new MESA rules.

(The Bureau of Mines supplies the personnel and funds for research on mine health and safety. MESA, which until last year was connected with the Bureau, inspects mines and trains personnel to enforce the federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act.)

MESA officials complained that bureau research projects are carried out slowly.

During a presentation by MESA's assistant administrator, Don Schlich, Falkie interrupted to say that 84 per cent of the research proposals from MESA are being carried out in 1975. He added that the bureau's research arm vetoes only two per cent of MESA's ideas.

The bureau head said he took exception to 'the implication that the bureau does not have mining expertise," and termed the implication a "gross insult" to the bureau's research staff.

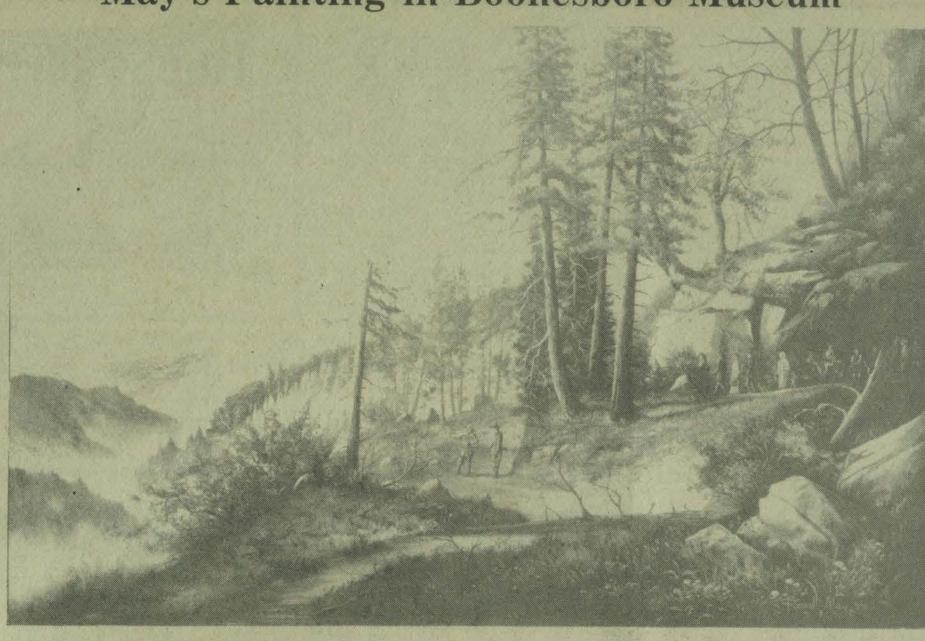

"I don't know how successful their programs are," Day said, "but I haven't seen a heck of a lot out of the research program in four years that is now being utilized underground."

Falkie challenged MESA to list unfulfilled research projects.

"And if those projects are valid, and we will have independent assessments of those, we will do them," Falkie said. Day said after the meeting that MESA will supply such a list.

May's Painting in Boonesboro Museum

Kentucky By Hope Carleton

Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

By JOHN WILSON Guest Writer

Kentucky's farm pond owners who wish to participate in the Department of Fish and Wildlife's stocking program should act now, according to Pete Pfeiffer, assistant director of the Division of Fisheries.

All applications for this year's stocking must be received by October 1. The pond owner's first step should be to get in touch with his local conservation officer, who will inspect the pond and furnish all the proper forms.

The pond owner will then be notified when and where to pick up his fish, which are packaged in waterproof boxes containing instructions for the proper method of placing the fish in the pond.

Bluegill and channel catfish will be stocked this fall and largemouth bass next spring. Applications received before October 1 will qualify pond owners for both the fall and spring stockings, but no new applications will be accepted in the spring. The easiest ponds to stock are either new ponds or those with no existing fish population. Ponds with aquatic weed problems or with an over-population of bluegill need special treatment before stocking. Again, the conservation officer is the man to see. He will either recommend treatment or if necessary call in a trained biologist for advice.

Owners of ponds which need treatment for over-population should act as soon as possible, since the first week in September is usually the best time for such

Once the fish are stocked, the pond should not be fished for at least two years. When fishing begins, the ratio between the number of bass and bluegill taken from the pond should be carefully watched. Unless five to seven pound bluegill are removed for each pound of bass caught, the pond may well become over-populated with bluegill.

The pond owner's only obligation under this program is that he pick up his fish (usually at the county seat or some other central location in each county).

He retains the right to limit public access to his pond, or to place more restrictive limits on the number or size of the fish taken from it than apply on public waters. However, if chemical treatment is needed, the owner is responsible for purchasing and applying the chemicals.

If the pond owner does not know the local conservation officer, he can get his name from the sheriff's office or from the county judge or county attorney

Casper W. Weinberger, secretary of the U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare, has announced the award of $18 million by the Office of Education to initiate and expand state programs of financial assistance for post-secondary students. The Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority will receive $221,496 to be used for an estimated 886 students.

Miners Return To Work After Week's Shutdown

The nation's coal fields got back to normal Monday after a week-long shutdown that saw production cut by about 70 per cent, according to industry spokesmen.

Work shifts were reported up to normal Monday, after poor turnouts at most mines on Saturday, the official end of the work stoppage that the United Mine Workers union described as a memorial to miners killed on the job or by black

Coal industry spokesman have said, however, that the shutdown also served to show the union's power for nationwide contract negotiations, which are to begin in November.

Some 115,000 coal miners were idled by the shutdown, which closed an estimated 1,200 mines. It cost the nation about nine million tons of coal, according to estimates by the Bituminous Coal Operator's Association

A spokesman for the nation's second largest coal company, Consolidated Coal Co., said only about two-thirds of the miners showed up Saturday, but he added that "everything's back to normal today.'

the Appalachian Adult Education Center at Morehead State University from the U. S. Office of Education. Similar projects were conducted in Birmingham. Ala.; Columbia, S. C.; and Wayne, Cabell and Putnam counties in West Virginia.

The local project developed new services for Floyd countians which will continue after the federal funding has stopped and the special project staff has

The bookmobile now serves adult education centers all over the county. The library mails materials to any point in the county upon request, and Floyd countians can call the library to find out where to go if they need the services of any local agency.

In addition, the project provided some $9,800 in materials for the Floyd County Library. Many of the materials are easily read books and pamphlets with information for adults on subjects like health, child care, housing, and money management. The collection also includes fiction, records and instructional materials for adults studying for the high school equivalency examination.

The success of the project in its first year resulted in other special projects in the county. The project was funded to continue for a second year to assist other libraries in Kentucky in adopting similar services in their communities. Morehead State University's Johnson Canden Library received a grant to furnish special materials for the Floyd library, and the Kentucky Department of Library and Archives contributed funds for the bookmobile to continue its evening runs to communities in the county and to adult basic education classes.

Another result has been the addition of two adult education instructors who teach adults at home, using project materials. The home instruction project is funded by a grant to Morehead State University's Appalachian Adult Education Center from the national "Right to Read" office.

As project director, Jones worked with librarians and adult education teachers to coordinate and improve the services of the adult education program of the Floyd county Board of Education and the regional library here.

Others who contributed to the project's success, according to Jones, were Floyd Supt. Charles Clark; Harlan Stubbs, regional ABE director; the late James Salisbury, former county director of ABE: Homer Lee Hall, regional librarian; Alice Hackworth Sipple, Floyd county librarian, and Betty Davis, bookmobile librarian.

In addition to coordinating the continuing project, Jones traveled to eight other Kentucky counties to assist libraries

Extension Service News

Lawn Care

By JOHN SPARKS (County Extension Agent) If you fertilize your lawn two times each year, it is now time for that last application before winter. The application can be extended into September. We should not apply more than two pounds of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet at one time. A good complete analysis recommendation would be 10 to 15 pounds of 10-10-10, 12-12-12- or similar high nitrogen fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn space. The analysis can be read on the bag of 10-10-10fertilizer this way: the first number represents 10 percent nitrogen, the second 10 percent phosphorus, and the third 10 percent is potassium.

In situations where only one application of fertilizer is applied per year, three pounds of nitrogen is permissible. However, this should be done in September. To get the three pounds of nitrogen from a bag of 10-10-10, 30 pounds should be distributed evenly over 1,000 square feet. The recommendations are for lawns that have had no soil test made and the exact needs may not be met. This is the reason that a soil test should be taken to determine the PH and exact needs for phosphorus and potassium.

If it is necessary to reseed bare spots in your lawn, remember these following steps: (1) Prepare the seedbed by tearing up the topsoil with a toothed rake; (2) Apply a small amount of fertilizer and work it into the soil; (3) Sow seed of the same mixture of grass as present in your lawn; (4) Rake lightly, just covering the seed; (5) Firm the soil by stepping on it and applying a straw mulch so that 50 percent of the soil can be seen; (6) Keep it watered. Reseeding can be done from August 15 to September 30.

Advise Veterans Check Timetable On Benefits

Veterans recently separated from military service should check the timetable on certain veteran benefits, the Veterans Administration advises.

Military separations have slowed from a peak of 95,000 monthly to a current rate of 50,000, but the timetable remains important to the individual veteran.

If a veteran wants his job back, for example, he must apply to his former employer within 90 days of his separation

Other items on the veterans' timetable:

1. 120 days to convert, without physical examination, Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) to Veterans Group Life Insurance. He has up to one year to convert, if he is totally disabled at separation and the condition does not

2. One year from date of receipt of service connection for his disability to apply to VA for Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance.

3. One year to apply to VA for dental care, and one year to request unemployment compensation from the local state employment office.

4. Has 10 years to apply for and use VA educational assistance benefits, which expire after that deadline.

Gov. Ford Proclaims Hunting, Fishing Day For September 28

Frankfort, Ky. August 20-Governor Wendell Ford, citing the efforts and achievements in conservation of the Commonwealth's hunters and fishermen, has proclaimed September 28 as National Hunting and Fishing Day in Kentucky.

The Governor signed the proclamation on the "Kentucky Afield" television program in opening day ceremonies at the Kentucky State Fair. Also on the program with Governor Ford were Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Arnold Mitchell and Roy Haddix, Lexington, President of the League of Kentucky Sportsmen.

National Hunting and Fishing Day, designed to increase public awareness of the role sportsmen play in conservation, has been observed nationally and in Kentucky since 1972. In proclaiming the annual observance in Kentucky, Governor Ford noted that "America's hunters and fishermen deserve special recognition for their outstanding contributions to recreation and conservation." The Governor added that sportsmen have long been leaders in major conservation programs.

Commissioner Mitchell said that the Department of Fish and Wildlife would observe the day by holding open house at several department facilities. including the new Minor Clark Hatchery near Morehead, the Ballard County Wildlife Management Area and the Game Farm in Frankfort.

Q. Recently I obtained employment as a waitress. After working for several weeks I was approached by my employer and asked to submit a report of tips I received. Is a report required and if so, why?

A. All tips you receive are subject to Federal income tax. Cash tips that you receive amounting to $20.00 or more in a month while working for any one employer are subject to withholding of income tax and social security tax. You must report tips of $20.00 or more received in a month to your employer on or before the 10th day of the following month. Your report to your employer may not cover a period longer than one calendar month However, your employer may require more frequent reports to coincide with the payroll period he uses. In this case, your report may be made on the dates set by your employer. He then deducts the witholding for income and social security taxes from your regular wages. Your form W-2, Wage The veteran has no deadline and Tax Statement, issued to you after the close of the year will reflect your tip income and taxes withheld.

for business purposes. A personal casualty or theft loss may be deductible to the extent that it exceeds $100. This deduction is allowed to the person who owns the property. However, a lessee may be entitled to the deduction if he

By JOHN WILSON Guest Writer

It's not a pleasant subject, but let's talk about hunting accidents. Unfortunately, they do occur, but not in the numbers or with the frequency that a lot of people think they do.

The Conservation Education Division of the Department of Fish and Wildlife, which runs Kentucky's hunter safety program, keeps a file on hunting accidents in the state, and their compilation shows that during 1973 there were seven reported accidents, four of them fatal, involving guns and hunters. This is a little below the average of the last five years, which is nine.

Since over 295,000 people bought licenses to hunt last year, this means that the accident rate was only .0027 per cent, or one accident per 42,100 hunters. That's a pretty good safety record, one which Kentucky hunters could be proud of if it were not exactly seven more accidents than there should have been.

The goal of those who teach hunter safety, and of all hunters, is an accident rate of zero. This should not be an impossible goal, for it is hard to imagine a hunting accident that could not have been avoided by the application of a little common sense, a little forethought, and an awareness of some of the techniques of safe gun handling.

For example, one of last year's reports tells of a man who lost a big toe when his rifle, the muzzle of which was resting against his foot, accidently discharged. It shouldn't take a course in hunter safety to tell someone that it's not a good idea to point a loaded gun at any part of his, or anyone else's anatomy, but this type of careless accident, which could easily be avoided, shows up all too often.

Two of the seven accidents reported for last year were caused by defective guns. One blew up and the other discharged when the action was closed. Both were shotguns, and both were old. Had these guns been checked by a competent gunsmith, as all firearms should periodically be, these accidents would not have happened.

Another accident occurred when the victim stumbled and fell, discharging his gun. One of the first commandments of gun safety is always to have the firearm under control, so the muzzle will not point in a dangerous direction even if the hunter should stumble.

The fifth accident was caused by one hunter being in the line of fire of another. In this case, the victim was stooped in front of another man, and stood up just as the second fired. Knowing where your hunting companions are at all times and establishing safe zones of fire is another important precept of safe hunting.

The other two accidents were selfinflicted, and it isn't certain exactly how they happened. Chances are, though, that they were also in the "stumbled and fell" category. To help prevent this type of accident, guns should be unloaded when climbing fences or into tree stands, when jumping ditches or whenever and wherever footing is tricky, such as on ice or slick mud.

With the hunting season already here, let's all take a few minutes to think about safety, to examine our habits and attitudes, and to resolve to make 1974 an accident free year in Kentucky.

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK Attorney General of Kentucky The Purchase of a Mobile Home

To many older citizens on a limited budget, newlyweds searching for their first home, and other consumers desiring convenient, economical living quarters with a minimum of worry, a mobile home may sound like a dream come true. But for some Kentucky consumers in recent years, the purchase of a mobile home has become a nightmare.

"In regard to the trailer I'm having trouble with . . . it has rotten door facings, it still leaks, and when it rains, the rain comes in around the doors and windows," reads one recent letter from a consumer. His complaint is similar to many received in our office.

In making such a major purchase the consumer should never let himself be rushed into making a decision before he has considered all the facts, and should keep several points in mind:

-Be sure you are doing business with a reputable dealer who is known to stand behind his manufacturer's warranty and who will still be in business if repairs are

-Check your mobile home insurance policy thoroughly to be aware of exclusions such as damage in the event of collision with other vehicles, and theft of personal property from the mobile home.

-Have an expert check the wiring and the appliances to be sure they are in proper working order, be sure that the exterior walls are not buckled or dented. the roof has no leaks, and the doors and windows fit tightly, and last, check the interior for any discolorations, waterspots or defects behind furnishings or

-Have a written understanding with the seller that the mobile home will be in the same condition when delivered as it was when viewed on the dealer's lot, and that any damage which occurs in transit will be repaired by the dealer.

-Be aware that the manufacturer's warranty for "Factory defects" is often nullified by moving the home from the original site.

Problems of Drought Face State Farmers

Frankfort, Ky.-The summer-long drought that has seared the Midwest with crop-killing heat is posing a dilemma for Kentucky farmers, according to state agriculture official Bill Padon.

"The drought and its resultant effects on feed prices will force some Kentucky farmers out of the industry, drive herd prices down, and will also result in Kentucky cattlemen holding 600-pound feeder calves on hay and pasture grass, which doesn't make for good quality meat for the consumer," explained the administrative assistant to state Agriculture Commissioner Wendell P. Butler.

While Kentucky farmers are no worse off than other Midwestern crop and livestock producers, they are now losing $75 to $100 a head on cattle ready to go to market.

The one bright spot in an otherwise dismal picture is that this year's wheat crop will produce a record yield, a key factor now that wheat is becoming an important substitute for corn as livestock food. But corn, which has taken a beating from the weather, goes twice as far as wheat in a feedlot

Corn prices won't peak until April or May of next year when corn will probably sell for $4 a bushel, double the price during a normal year. Also meat, regardless of quality, will be in short supply in what Padon predicts to be 18 months to two years.

Can the federal government lessen the impact of the drought by reducing exports? Padon answered no and added "the 'free economy' policy applied to agriculture by the federal government has to be changed.

"It would be tremendous if farmers could grow as much as they wanted, but it is unrealistic to tell them to do so when production costs keep climbng."

Padon said that he felt it would take agriculture two or three years to recover from the current drought crisis and added a word of caution.

"We're listening closely to the weather experts who say this year's drought could be the beginning of a three-year drought such as the one that produced the 'dust bowl' during the thirties. We can't ignore these fellows because of the advances with satellites and other means of weather prediction, plus these three-year droughts follow a 20-year cycle and we, unfortunately, are due."

Ginger Stresses School Problems

to read and write and spell. The biggest problem in this nation and in the world today is: how do we live with, work with and get along with people? What do we do to help boys and girls adjust and react in the proper way?" Ginger asked.

Regarding sex discrimination, Ginger said that federal guidelines will encompass much more than Kentucky's girls baksetball bill.

"Believe me, the same people that pushed so hard with the federal courts to make sure that schools were integrated, are pushing just as hard, and perhaps a The Floyd County Board of Education little harder at the moment, to be sure will accept sealed bids until 12 Noon that every girl has the same opportunity as the boys.

> "This is going to mean, in the next few years, some real changes in your operation of your programs, and I think the sooner you tool up for it the better." Two changes he mentioned were opening all vocational courses to women and possibly building a girls' gymnasium at each school.

Outlining ways that some of the surplus 8-14-3t. $8 million allocated to education by Gov. Wendell H. Ford will be spent, Ginger said that $5 million will cover over-runs in the cost of constructing and expanding vocational schools; $90,000 will be used to set up a central computer for schools throughout the state to use for a variety of tasks including attendance records Materials and Equipment for the 1974-75 and schedules; and $855,000 will pay for increases inthe cost of textbooks.

State Board To Consider Girls' Basketball Exemptions

By JENNIFER KAYE ROBINSON The State Board of Education is scheduled to meet Sept. 10-11 to establish guidelines for reviewing requests from school systems for temporary exemption from complying with the girls basketball

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, state superintendent of Public Instruction, outlined some of the difficulties that Kentucky schools will face in complying with the law: expense of extra coaches, equipment and transportation and arranging for practice time and facilities.

He estimates it will cost "roughly $5 million to phase into basketball, just to purchase equipment and so on. That doesn't include building extra gymnasiums and extra physical education practice plants."

He pointed out that federal laws regarding sex discrimination require schools to treat boys and girls equally in all phases of their programs. Failure to comply will mean withdrawal of federal

At its last meeting, the board was asked to settle two cases involving differences between local school superintendents and local boards of education.

The board directed the Oldham County Board of Education to retain William Michael Price as art teacher and disagreed with the Henderson county board's allegation that Mrs. Virginia Atkins was morally unfit to be principal. But the state board supported the local board's rejection of the local superintendent's recommendation that she be retained as principal of the Spottsville Elementary School. Instead, they directed the local board to reassign her to another school in the county without prejudice and without decrease in salary.

The board distributed $250,000 allotments from a $1 million revolving loan fund to Mason and McCracken counties to replace schools destroyed by fire and to Daviess county to replace rusted

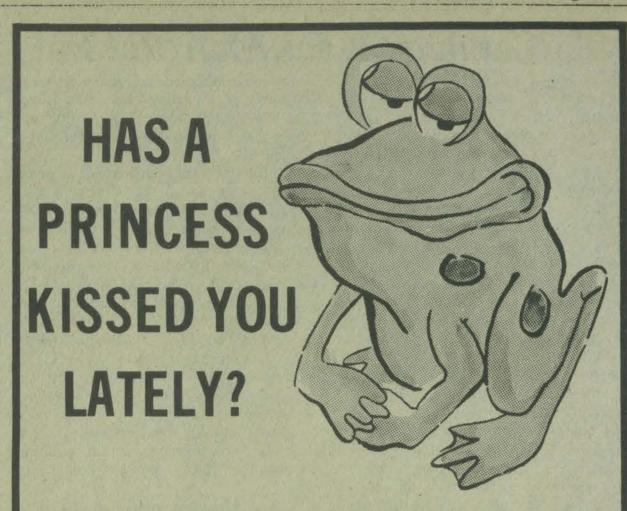

The board directed the Department of Education to research and report at its December meeting on tornado warning systems used by schools in other states.

In 1972, 937,000 firms used the Federal-State public Employment Service, submitting 6.7 million nonfarm job orders, according to the 1974 Manpower Report of the President.

No? Well, we're sorry, but if that's your problem I'm afraid we can't be of much real help. It's just that princess kisses are a little out of our line. But, if your dilemma happens to be more in the way of a family bus, rather than the buss royal, that is, then hold on a second, give a listen! Here at Brown's we maintain a select stock of late-model used cars, all clean, attractive and in top mechanical condition . . . And, you'll find that because we are a smaller dealer, with less overhead, we are able to price our cars substantially lower than our competition. This, plus our top trade-in allowance on your present car, means much more money in your pocket. So why hop all over the countryside, from dealer to dealer, in search of that just-right car buy? 10 speak out, clearly and fairly

Not only is it a constitutional right...it is a moral duty.

We believe that the inalienable right to free speech carries with it many obligations, among which is the duty to speak clearly and fairly of impending danger.

We believe that to remain silent, especially when knowledge and experience in depth cry to be aired, is a moral dereliction of that duty.

We believe that to many our national energy crisis began and ended with the oil embargo-an unfortunate misconception. That was an oil crisis, mislabeled an energy crisis.

We believe that the danger of a real, a severe and lasting energy crisis wherein great sections of our nation will be faced with part time electrical usage, is too close. That belief is shared in essence by the Federal Power Commission.

We believe we must reassess our natural fuel resources-recognize that we and the world have a limited supply of oil and gas-that we cannot depend upon foreign imports—that we have a super abundance of coal - that we as a nation must make a commitment to coal.

We believe there is a need for environmental controls to protect the land, the air, the water.

We endorse the mandate of the Clean Air Act to protect public health and we endorse the goals of rational environmentalists.

We believe, regrettably, that a limited number of fanatical environmentalists have succeeded in misleading the public and many of our elected representatives about environmental needs. All too often they have plumped for standards that result in environmental overkill - that have little if any scientific proof of demonstrable need.

We believe that too little is being done too slowlythat too many have no real understanding of the time lag between approval to act and full operational capacity. Mines can't be opened overnight, equipment can't be procured overnight.

We believe it is folly to pressure for the purchase and installation of pollution control equipment that has been proven time and time again unreliable for major utility use.

We believe that a great contribution to solving our energy problems and eliminating air pollution would result from the release of the vast reserves of Government-owned clean fuel - the low sulfur coal in the West.

We believe we must conserve energy at every level. To waste energy is as wrong as inaction on the vital energy needs of our country.

We believe we must express our sincere beliefs about our energy problems and the solutions to those problems. To do less would allow expertise to go unused, misconceptions to go unchallenged and, possibly, economic chaos to strike our country.

It was approved April 4, according to Dr. Stanley Hammons, commissioner of the Bureau for Health Services, DHR.
