

Stumbo May Respond To Charge With Suit

Dr. Grady Stumbo last week not only denounced the allegations of the Registry of Election Finance that he violated the election finance law during his campaign last year for governor but this week was nearing the point of legal action against his detractors.

Breaking his silence for the first time since the Registry began its probe into late-campaign financing of his vote drive, Dr. Stumbo called a Frankfort news conference at which he described the accusations made against him as a political "hit job."

His attorney, Edward F. Pritchard, was known to be preparing this week legal proceedings that could amount to a civil action against the Registry and its members. It is not known if the suit will be filed in a state court or in U.S. district court.

"I've been abused, and my name has been tarnished," said Stumbo, who vowed to clear his name and who suggested that he'll run again in the 1987 Democratic gubernatorial primary.

Stumbo, threatened a court fight over the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance's ruling that he broke two state campaign-finance laws during last year's Democratic primary.

By a 3-1 vote, the five-member registry found probable cause to believe that Stumbo and two supporters who lent him $300,000 in May 1983 had intentionally violated the law in several ways.

The registry, which also cited as illegal a corporate donation of air-transportation service to Stumbo's campaign, sent the case to Attorney General David Armstrong for possible prosecution.

Breaking a long silence on the subject, Stumbo told reporters that the registry had misinterpreted both the law and the facts of the case.

He said the registry's lengthy investigation of the $300,000 he borrowed, and its "disgusting and disgraceful" decision that the case involved willful law-breaking, were "designed to cause me the greatest political damage."

When polls in early May 1983 showed he had a chance to beat Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane and then-Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins, Stumbo said, some of his close aides formed a political-action committee to raise funds for a last-minute media blitz.

Under Kentucky law, individuals could give any amount of money to such a political-action committee, and the committee would have no limit on what it could give to Stumbo's campaign.

But Stumbo said he ordered the disbanding of the committee and the return of all money it had collected because he felt such an action would involve evading full campaign-finance disclosure through a legal loophole.

"I felt that that route, even though it might be legally correct, was morally indefensible, and I chose not to go that route," Stumbo said.

"Rather, I chose to give up the assets that I had accumulated over 10 years, that represented security to my family and me.

"And I was willing to exchange those assets into cash and to put them into the campaign, because I felt that was the right thing to do, rather than to allow my staff to proceed with PACs."

After consulting with lawyers, accountants and bankers, Stumbo said, he entered into agreements in which he borrowed $200,000 from retired Eastern (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

IT WAS HOT WORK early this week as re-roofing of the postoffice here got under way. Postmaster Don Osborne said the building had been plagued by leaks for years, a problem which will hopefully be eliminated by the present work which is being done by Arvel Nelson, of Prestonsburg.

But Legislators Claim Situation Not That Grave

Despite a recent warning by state Transportation Secretary Floyd Poore that "in two and a half years we're going to have to close down" three Kentucky toll roads, including the Mountain Parkway, neither of Floyd county's state legislators appeared ready this week to hit the panic button.

The transportation official's warning, given at the annual convention of the state's judges-executive, was distributed this week by a group called Kentuckians for Better Transportation (KBT), which includes representatives of the highway construction and trucking industries.

In a letter to this newspaper, KBT President Jack Fish, claiming that "much of the Mountain Parkway is literally disintegrating," urged that coal severance taxes, which now go into the general fund, be channelled instead into the road fund for use in maintaining the state's highways.

That was a proposal which was turned down by Gov. John Y. Brown earlier this year, on grounds that the budget could not be balanced without the severance tax receipts. A House proposal which would have added a penny a mile to the Mountain Parkway toll died

Till the Next Time...

Courthouse Is Reopened After Cleanup and Repair

The Floyd courthouse was back to normal Monday after a week disrupted by a sewer blockage allegedly caused when inmates stuffed bedding down a commode in the third-floor jail.

The planned transfer of 20 prisoners to other jails was averted when jail officials met a Health Department demand to have the plumbing back in order by Tuesday, last week.

The clean-up and repair operation will be costly for the county, however; most courthouse officers remained closed to the public all week; and some who did remain in the building to work reportedly were not happy at the situation.

County Finance Officer Delores Dings said this week it is still too early to calculate the total cost to the county of the clean-up. Among bills already at hand, however, are one for $664 from the Royal Flush Rooter Service, which spent three days pulling sheets and other foreign material from the sewer line; $534 for five women who helped two regular janitors clean out the building, and "hundreds of dollars" in tools and cleaning supplies.

County Clerk Carla Boyd announced that her office was back in business—from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Thursday, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Fridays—following what she termed the "disaster" which caused her staff to lose three days' work and kept the office closed to the public for five days.

The determination of Circuit Judge Hollie Conley to keep working through the ordeal reportedly irked at least one juror, however, in view of the Health Department's order Monday to shut the building down. The judge acknowledged that he continued to hold court during the week and called jurors in on Monday and Wednesday but said he had received no complaints.

County Official Cleared Monday In Assault Case

A county official accused of assaulting a news reporter in the courthouse parking lot last year was cleared Monday by a Floyd district court jury.

The six-member panel, in a unanimous verdict, acquitted Trial Commissioner Thomas D. Lafferty, Sr. of a charge of striking Courier-Journal reporter Ralph Dunlop last March 1, after a day-long trial in which both men gave completely opposite accounts of the events leading to the charge.

Dunlop, 39, who is the paper's East Kentucky news bureau chief in Hazard, said he was wrapping up a scheduled in-

DISTANT PASTURES...

If you think this heat oppressive and fit for neither man nor beast, take an imaginary journey. Remove yourself from these sheltering hills and the cooling shade of their trees and plunk yourself down in the middle of a treeless plain where the pitchforks of the heat devils are pre-heated. Then, to pay penance for complaining, repeat—after me—50 times without pause: "Distant pastures are greener."

PLUGGER-UPPERS

One of the memorable stories in our old schoolyard readers was "The Little Hero of Harlem," which told of the Dutch youngster who plugged the hole in the dike with his hand and saved his land from inundation by the sea. If prisoners from the Floyd county jail had been around and had had a towel or so handy, no heroics would have been necessary.

A REASONABLE QUESTION

For no particular reason we recount the story of the two Mexican brothers who sought entry to the U.S. without doing the well-known breast stroke. The first boldly presented himself at the point of entry and was promptly challenged.

"What do you do?" the border guard inquired.

"I pilot," the visitor replied, and the guard decided that, since fliers are needed, he could enter.

Broad Form Act Leaves Question...

Whose Is the Task To Establish Rights?

Hailed as a law which would finally protect landowners from the wide powers coal owners have claimed for 80 years under broad form deeds, House Bill 32 has been in effect now almost two weeks. It remains to be seen, however, how useful a tool the new law will be for property owners bent on keeping the stripminers off their land.

Not the least question to be decided is: who will bear the burden—the surface owner or the mineral owner—of proving that the new law is applicable in a particular case? And that may well hinge on the answer to a prior question: What right, if any, do state environmental authorities have to issue a stripmining permit as long as the legal right to stripmine a tract is in doubt?

That is the question put by a lawyer for several Floyd landowners in a motion filed last week with the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet (NREPC).

In his motion, Prestonsburg attorney J. Logan Griffith asks Natural Resources Secretary Charlotte Baldwin to hold up stripmine permits sought by Triple Elkhorn Coal Co. on two Martin properties until the question of the coal turn's legal right to strip the properties is settled. That right is the subject of a lawsuit—brought by Maggie Taylor and her son Marion, owners of adjoining tracts on Stumbo Hollow—which is now before the state Court of Appeals.

House Bill 32, as approved by the 1984 General Assembly, gives courts a rule for interpreting broad form mineral deeds. The rule says that, unless the deed expressly allows stripmining, it permits only those methods of mining in use in that area at the time the deed was signed.

Since stripmining was unheard of around the turn of the century, when most broad form deeds were signed, coal purchased under the deeds presumably cannot now be stripmined unless the surface owner consents. Unless the Kentucky Supreme Court makes a general ruling on the interpretation of broad form deeds, however, each individual landowner in dispute with a coal company may still have to go to court for an interpretation of his or her deed.

Even before the new Kentucky law took effect, the federal Surface Mining Act of 1977 required an operator to prove he had a right to enter and strip a property before he got a permit, Griffith argued recently. The new state law only strengthens that argument, he contended.

But the NREPC, on the argument that property disputes are not its concern, has sometimes issued a permit to a company in any case, leaving to the courts

Council Awards Rink Contract, Plans Parking

Prestonsburg city council let a contract Monday for construction of a new roller rink at Archer Park to replace the one damaged by the May flood. The new metal frame building will be somewhat larger than the one it replaces and will include a room for parties, it was said.

Contract for the skating rink was awarded to M. and C. Construction, a Prestonsburg firm, whose $128,497 was the lowest of five bids. M. and C. was represented at Monday's council meeting by Bob Carpenter. Construction is to be completed by October 30.

The existing rink was moved several feet off its foundation by the recent flood and was declared a total loss by insurance adjusters. The building was insured for $70,000, its contents for $10,000.

The city will go ahead with its plan to build a parking lot on the river bank behind the Hobbs store on Front Street, despite the refusal by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center to participate in the project. At a recent council meeting, Councilman Bill Ray Collins criticized the mental health agency for what he described as its indifference to the city's welfare. But, in a letter to the council read at Monday's meeting, MCCC Executive-Director David E. Bell, Jr. said that, while he wished the plan well, his board did not want to lease to the city land the agency might need later for expansion.

Although he jokingly predicted that

Latter-Day Saints Announce Plans

The Martin Branch and Martin District of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints announced this week that a new $1.3 million meetinghouse and district center will be built on a site overlooking new KY 80, near Martin.

It is expected that the building will be finished in 300 days. The older meetinghouse, located across the street from Our Lady of the Way Hospital, will be sold on completion of the new structure.

Pete Grigsby, Jr., president of the Martin District of the church, said the new building will serve the needs of more than 800 Latter-Day Saints in this area. In addition to Martin, there are branches of the church in Boldman, Hazard, Paintsville and Salyersville.

Grigsby also said that the building must be paid for before construction begins. Four percent of the cost comes from local members and the remainder from the general tithes of the church. The money is available and construction will begin upon completion of final contractual arrangements between the church and contractor.

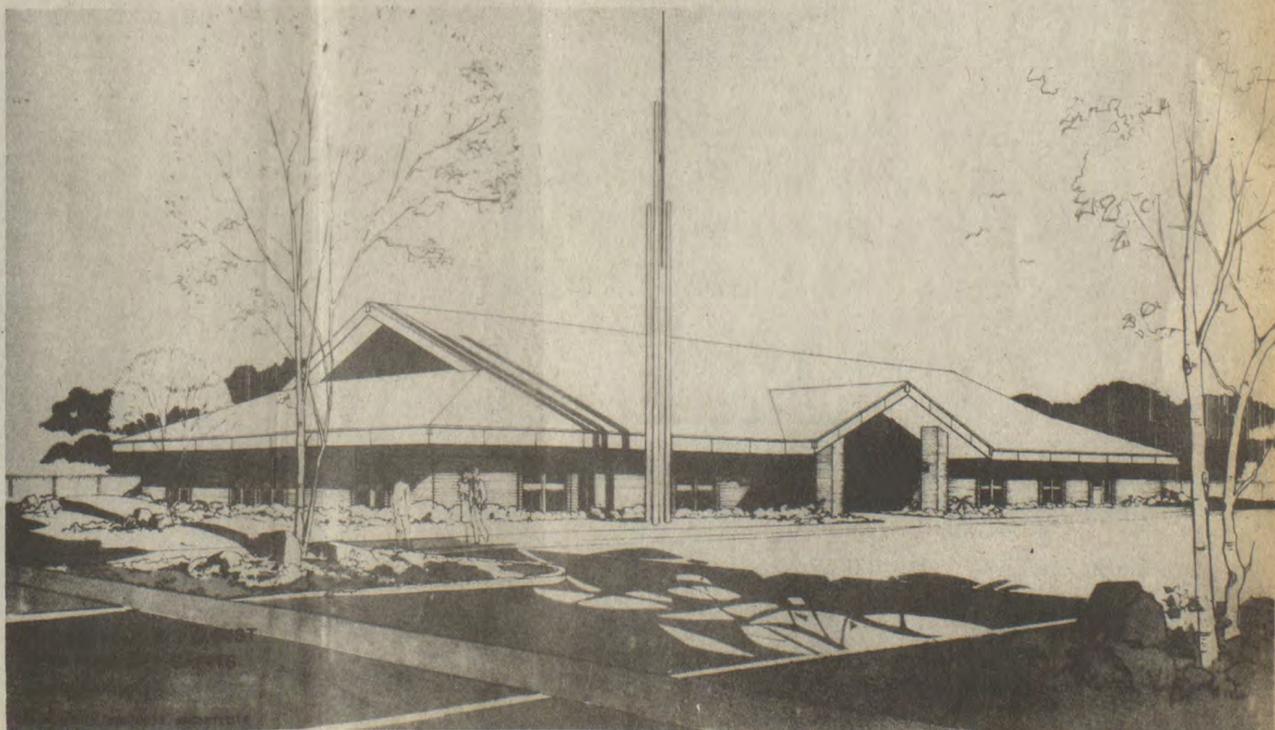

The new facility will accommodate the Martin Branch, which has approximately 350 members. The Branch president is William R. Hughes, of Martin, and his counselors are Burl S. Scott and Lawrence Maggard, also of Martin.

Hughes said the old facility is overcrowded, with shortages of classroom and parking space. The new building is designed to correct these needs of the Martin Branch and allow it to grow at its present rate, in addition to serving as a district center.

The meetinghouse will contain 14,000 square feet and is designed to seat 200 persons in main chapel, with expanded seating capacity of 550 persons available by opening folding doors leading to the cultural center. The church will have a manual Allen Computer church organ and grand piano in the chapel and a portable stage in the cultural center so that theater-in-the-round, concerts and lectures can be offered. When the stage is removed there is more room for games and athletics such as basketball, volleyball and other activities. Around the perimeter 31 teaching stations, some divided by folding walls, will accommodate classes from 14 to 75 persons. As needed, the cultural center can also be divided into classroom space.

Kentucky coal operator B.F. Reed and $100,000 from Frankfort businessman Howard Norrell.

Stumbo pledged his interests in a grocery store, coal reserves, an office building and a family-owned trucking firm as collateral for the loans, which were to be repaid by Aug. 1, 1983.

"I made every effort to obey both the letter of law and the spirit of the law," Stumbo said. "I believe I am now being penalized for trying to do what I believed was legally right and morally correct."

Stumbo added, "If I had intended, or anyone in my campaign had intended, to willfully violate the law, we certainly went at it all the wrong ways."

The registry said Reed and Norrell had violated a state law prohibiting individuals from giving or loaning more than $3,000 per election to a candidate or to his campaign.

But Stumbo and his attorneys have argued that the law prohibits large loans to candidates only when the loans do not place all of the risk of loss on the candidate.

The law, they have said, does not apply to fully secured loans for which the candidate alone is liable, as was the case with Stumbo's $300,000.

Stumbo said he did not borrow the money from a commercial bank, which is legal for a candidate to do, because the primary campaign was in its final stages and the paperwork for a bank loan would have taken too much time.

The registry said Stumbo had violated state law by failing to report the source of the $300,000 and by commingling the money for his campaign with funds in his personal bank accounts.

But Stumbo said he didn't report the source of the $300,000 on his required campaign-finance statements in June 1983 because the forms for such statements don't ask for it. Stumbo had lent the money to his campaign, and reported his loans to the campaign on his report to the registry.

Stumbo said his deposit of checks from Reed and Norrell in his personal bank accounts—which was followed by his writing checks for the same amounts to his campaign—did not constitute a violation because the money wasn't a campaign contribution but the proceeds of a sale of his assets.

Stumbo said he and his closest aides foresaw no problem with his loans because many other candidates—such as Sloane and former Gov. John Y. Brown Jr.—had made similar personal loans to their campaigns.

Mr. Pritchard pointed out last week that when Martha Layne Collins made her successful race for lieutenant governor, she borrowed $15,000 from her father for campaign purposes but later repaid the loan—just as Stumbo did—and was not accused by the registry of any violation.

the question of that company's right to mine.

Whether the NREPC will continue that policy now that the stronger state law is in effect is not yet clear. But if the agency goes ahead and issues a permit in cases like those of Maggie and Marion Taylor, it will make harder the surface owners' task of defending their rights under the new law. They will be forced to go to court for an injunction to stop the mining, and perhaps put up a substantial bond, until their rights are settled.

Rights to the coal underlying the Taylor tracts were originally sold by A.L. and Louise Stumbo to the Northern Coal and Coke Company in 1903, under a deed that specifically excepted the marketable timber on the land. That exception shows that the landowners did not envisage stripmining, their successors argued in Circuit Court here last year.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley ruled against them last Nov. 28, holding that Triple Elkhorn did have a right to strip the Taylors' land. The legislature, and not the court, is the place to make any changes in the application of broad form deeds, Judge Conley noted at the time.

Then came the other. To the question about his occupation he said, "I woodchopper."

Which did him no good at all. "You'd just be taking a job from some American citizen," he was told.

"But," protested the thwarted Mexican, "you let my brother in—you keep me out. Why?"

"Because your brother is a pilot and we need such people."

The baffled Mexican scratched his head in puzzlement. "But, senior, tell me," he implored, "how can my brother pile it if I don't chop it?"

BILLBOARD ON THE HOOF

Outdoor advertising has been batted around, pro and con, for years. Some of it has been banned as distracting to motorists and contributory to traffic accidents. Yet it remains in business.

Now comes a new way to go about it. The Wall Street Journal tells of the farmer just outside Toronto, Canada who rented out advertising space on the sides of his cows. Large pieces of oilcloth bearing the advertiser's message were draped over the animals. For a few dollars extra the advertiser could also rent a cowbell.

The owner explains that he wanted to get the greatest possible return from his cows. The dairy products and the manure were already on the market. "The only thing we hadn't found a use for was the outside of the cows," the owner explained. So it is that we now have "media cows," even billboards that moo and chew their cuds.

THE WHIPPOORWILL

Do you remember, father—
It seems so long ago—
The day we finished together
along the Pocono
At dusk I waited for you,
Beside the lumber mill,
And there I heard a hidden bird
Which chanted "Whippoorwill"

The place was all deserted;
The mill wheel hung at rest;
The lonely star of evening
Was quivering in the west;
The veil of night was falling;
The winds were folded still;
And everywhere the trembling air
Re-echoed "Whippoorwill"

You seemed so long in coming,
I felt so much alone;
The cold, dark world was round me,
And life was all unknown.
The hand of sorrow touched me,
And made my senses thrill
With all the pain that haunts the strain
Of all-mournful "Whippoorwill"

What did I know of trouble?
An idle little lad,
I had not learned the lessons
That make men wise and sad.
I dreamed of grief and parting,
And something seemed to fill
My heart with tears, while in my ears
Resounded "Whippoorwill"

'Twas but a shadowy sadness,
That lightly passed away;
But I have known the substance
Of sorrow since that day;
For nevermore at twilight,
Beside the silent mill
I'll wait for you in the falling dew,
And hear the whippoorwill.

But if you still remember,
In that fair land of light,
The pains and fears that touched us
Along this edge of night,
I think all earthly grieving
And all our mortal ill
To you must seem like a boy's sad dream
Who hears the whippoorwill.

Unemployment Decline

In June 1984, the decline in unemployment was concentrated among those unemployed for 5 to 26 weeks. The median duration of unemployment also dropped during the month—from 8.7 to 7.2 weeks—while the mean duration was little changed at 18.6 weeks, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Labor Department.

terview with Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr., when Thomas Lafferty, the judge's brother, approached in the company of two other men. Thomas Lafferty was at that time deputy judge-executive.

The reporter said he was questioning the judge about county finances when Thomas Lafferty cursed him and punched him in the throat. When he raised his hands to protect himself, he suffered an abrasion on his right hand, he said.

But Lafferty, 51, said he became involved only to break up a scuffle that had already broken out between Dunlop and Jerry Lafferty by the time he happened on the scene. The reporter hit him in the face and slung him into a car, causing a back injury from which he still suffers, Lafferty said.

Magistrate Kenneth Roberts, who said he witnessed the incident, confirmed Lafferty's account, except that he "didn't see a lick struck." Neither of the other men present—identified as Rick Darby and Mike Ormerod, at that time employees of a local radio station—appeared as witnesses at the trial.

Although the interview—which had begun earlier in the judge's office but was interrupted—dealt with a sensitive area, Judge Lafferty was cooperative, said Dunlop. But Thomas Lafferty said his brother was irked by the reporter's continuing to press questions after he had answered all he wanted to answer.

Dunlop, who said he had never been in a fight in his life, said he left the scene, frightened, as soon as Lafferty hit him. But attorney Phillip Damron, representing Lafferty, pointed out to the jury that it was Dunlop who had an injured hand. "I leave it your common sense, if one has a damaged fist, who threw the punch," he said.

The jury deliberated 25 minutes before acquitting the defendant. A harassment charge was dismissed earlier on a motion of defense counsel.

The trial was presided over by Special Judge Richard L. Elswick, of the Pike district court. Floyd District Judge Harold Stumbo disqualified himself on account of his working relationship with Lafferty, whom he appointed as trial commissioner last August. Prosecuting attorney was Assistant Johnson County Attorney Thomas Blaha, who was named in place of Floyd County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr., who was subpoenaed by the defense to testify in the case.

In a civil suit pending in Floyd Circuit Court, Dunlop seeks $50,000 in damages from Lafferty; and, in a counterclaim, Lafferty seeks $160,500 in damages from Dunlop.

in a Senate committee.

Because Kentucky's transportation needs are being shortchanged, Poore told the judges-executive, the state's three toll roads—the Mountain Parkway, the Western Kentucky Parkway and the Blue Grass Parkway—will be soon shut down for want of repairs and the highway construction program "will come to a screeching halt" in 1989 "unless something happens."

But Rep. Greg Stumbo said he thought the Secretary's warning exaggerated. "I think it's a false alarm to some extent, the type of thing the Administration would use to get a special session for a tax increase," he said, adding, "I'm not saying we don't need something done, but I don't like these scare tactics."

And Sen. Benny Ray Bailey said he was surprised if a push was under way now to increase taxes to boost the state road fund, since—apart from the toll increase, which Bailey said he opposed as discriminatory—no such proposals were put forward during the legislative session earlier this year.

Bailey, who said he favored using coal severance taxes to pay off highway construction bonds, was nevertheless unimpressed by Poore's warning that the toll roads might be abandoned. "How are they going to close the Mountain Parkway? Post guards every 10 feet?" he asked.

Some speakers at the judges-executives' convention took the matter more seriously, however. Rep. Pete Worthington, D-Ewing, complained that, as long as the general fund is growing faster than the road fund and 30 percent of the road budget is being spent on debt service, it is unwise to keep putting coal severance receipts into the general fund instead of using them to retire highway bonds.

And one paving firm executive noted that gasoline taxes and auto registration fees, two primary sources of road revenue, are comparatively low in Kentucky.

"Kentucky's 10-cents-a-gallon tax is about four to five cents below what's going on around the rest of the country," said Dean Blake, executive-director of Plantmix Asphalt. And while surrounding states charge $30 to register an automobile, Kentucky charges only $12.50," he noted.

"we will have the KCLU (Kentucky Civil Liberties Union) all over us," City Manager David Evans said he anticipated no constitutional challenge following the council's decision to allow a Prestonsburg church to hold a "non-denominational" revival on the city parking lot. In granting the Rock of Revelation church permission to use the lot from August 26 to September 3, neither the city attorney nor any council member raised the possibility of a legal challenge.

The council voted to ask Cablerent-tainment, Inc., the city's cable operator, to make ACTS, a channel specializing in religious programming, available to city subscribers. The channel is sponsored by the Southern Baptist Convention.

On a motion of Councilman Paul Hunt Thompson, the council voted to hire Leonard "Lightning" Joseph, Jr., as assistant streets supervisor. On a recommendation of the council's personnel committee, Mike Ormerod and Jeff Stumbo were hired as police officers and Mike Wells as firefighter.

Ted Nairn was re-appointed to the city Board of Zoning Adjustment, on which a vacancy still exists.

Banking Error Blamed in Suit As Second Filed

Even as the firm's attorney insisted that settlement was imminent in an earlier suit, a Prestonsburg coal company was hit last week with a second claim for damages.

M. and M. Extraction, Inc., of Langley, claims in a suit filed Wednesday in Floyd Circuit Court that Katron Coal Corp. owes it $5913 for coal the Langley firm sold Katron in January.

Meanwhile, criminal charges and a civil suit for damages are pending against Katron principals Peter and Loretta Neal as the result of complaints filed last month by William H. Gadsby, owner of the Remine Coal Company at Wheelwright.

Gadsby said he sold coal to the Neals in March but alleged that they paid him with a cold check for $31,134 drawn on the First National Bank in Pikeville. But Mrs. Neal said recently that the check bounced only because money deposited in the bank by Katron a week before she wrote the check to Gadsby was credited to the wrong account.

First National Vice President Jonathan W. Hiers acknowledged that a check for $48,915.93 made out to Katron by SSM Coal North America, Inc. was deposited in an account entitled Taylor Brothers Enterprises on April 2. Taylor Brothers acts as a factor, or agent, for Katron. "This was a clerical error," Hiers wrote in an explanatory letter. "It should have been deposited to the account of Katron Coal Corp."

The errant check was transferred to the Katron account and a cashier's check for $26,134.78—the balance of what was owing them—was issued to Remine.

An unresolved question of attorneys' fees is the only reason the cases against Katron have not yet been struck from the district court or circuit court dockets, J. Logan Griffith, an attorney for the firm, insisted this week.

Sentence of Woman Cut After Hearing

A Wheelwright woman, who said she was taken by surprise when District Judge Harold Stumbo ordered her jailed on a theft charge earlier this month, had her sentence amended last week.

Sharon Parker was accused of stealing a purse belonging to Kathryn Gilliam, an IGA employee, on June 15. When she failed to appear at a July 9 court trial, Judge Stumbo found her guilty, imposed a $200 fine, and set a 60-day jail term, half of which was to be served and half probated.

When Parker said she had had no lawyer and was unaware of her trial date, the judge appointed the public defender to represent her and scheduled a new hearing.

At the second hearing, held last Thursday, Stumbo agreed to probate the entire 60-day sentence on condition the defendant make restitution of $90 within a day and stay away from Gilliam and her family for two years.

A Pikeville man went to court here last week to dispute a traffic citation issued last December. State Trooper R.V. Motley said he paced William E. Isom's van at 75 m.p.h. on the Mountain Parkway, but Isom denied the charge. A jury found him guilty of driving at 62 m.p.h.

Isom will pay a $17 fine and $56.50 in court costs and will have three penalty points assessed against his license. Had he pleaded guilty or been convicted of the original charge, he would have been subject to a $40 fine, $47.50 in costs, and a six-point penalty.

Gary Skaggs received a 60-day sentence, probated for two years, and was ordered to pay child support of $150 a month after pleading guilty to a non-support charge brought by Patricia Beckman, of Allen.

Dianna C. Stephens, of Endicott, was ordered to pay $247.50 in fine and costs after she was convicted in her absence of a drunk driving charge.

Total civilian employment—as measured by the monthly survey of households—rose by 460,000 in June 1984, to 105.7 million, following an even larger increase in May, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Labor Department.

Says Little Done To Promote Sports

Another season come and gone at the Allen ball park and things still remain the same: the same old swamp down the left field line to catch foul balls (I bet $200 worth of new baseballs were ruined in the water); the same water fountains, which were finally working the last two games of the season; the same drainage problems, with the only help coming from David May's donation of 75 to 80 tons of sand, and John Gordon Goble's backhoe and dump truck to move it; and the same old promises from the courthouse and magistrates.

Things still remain the same as Floyd county's Allen Park was being considered as a site for the district and area championships but was turned down again when Babe Ruth and Little League officials looked at our poor excuse for a playing field. The Little League championships could be held there but for the want of dressing rooms and toilet facilities, and the Babe Ruth field was branded too dangerous to play on.

Every time you talk to a Floyd county official, it's always "We don't have any money," and yet they don't explore any ways to make money, to generate monies at the Allen Park, or even apply for any recreational grants from the state and federal governments.

Why don't they put in a driving range and batting cages at the Allen Park? It seems to me this would satisfy the golfers and free up a lot of the land to be used for additional ball fields to better serve the people of Floyd county. The driving range concept would cost practically nothing to get started and would attract people from all over the region, as the closest one is in Lexington or Huntington at $1.50 or $2.00 to hit a bucket of balls. The profits are enormous.

The batting cages would have some cost outlay, but this could be re-couped easily in the first month of spring as high schools start their season and softball teams start practice.

The existing basketball court at Allen Park would be ideal for the batting cage surface with very minor adjustments, and moving the basketball court next to the swimming pool would generate extra profits for the pool and county, as the young boys gather to play basketball and impress the girls at the pool.

By moving the basketball court to the pool site and perhaps adding other games at the same time, such as horseshoes, badminton and volley ball courts, tether ball, shuffleboard, picnic shelters and tables, we could begin to see increased use of the swimming pool area as a total recreation area with day camps for toddlers and league play in badminton and volleyball.

Floyd county must look to the future and be a county of vision, and not a county that turns its back on the young people. Let's give our youngsters something to do in the summers, quality playgrounds to build bodies, to build quality minds in our future leaders.

Taxpayers, let's urge our magistrates to do something, even if it's wrong. We can't remain stagnant and keep letting these other counties pass us by.

Ask your magistrates and county officials why nothing is being done. Ask them why improvements are promised and yet not one penny was spent on the Allen ball fields in the just-completed season.

I, for one, am tired of hearing them pass the buck from one to another and give the same lame excuses while our kids suffer.

Floyd county officials, let's name a Floyd County Sports Association of school teachers and coaches and a few private individuals to check into and coordinate sports programs and activities, apply for federal and state money, and initiate things to be done first to help Floyd county children to enjoy good, clean, wholesome play on quality playgrounds and fields—not just at Allen but all over the county.

Disaster Hotline To Close Friday

The toll-free disaster hotline will cease operations in Kentucky, effective at 5 p.m. Friday, July 27, according to state and federal officials.

Since May 18, operators have taken more than 9,000 calls from residents of the 28 eastern and central Kentucky counties declared a major disaster area by President Reagan as a result of severe storms.

Early in the recovery effort, the volume of calls averaged nearly 300 per day. But, since July 16, the deadline for making application for disaster assistance, the Hotline has received fewer than 60 calls per day.

Although the Hotline will be closed down July 27, Kentuckians requiring information will be able to do so by calling the various disaster assistance programs and agencies individually. The phone numbers are:

Small Business Administration, 1-800-554-3455 or 404-221-5822; Temporary Housing, 606-789-7168; Individual and Family Grants, 502-564-8628; National Flood Insurance Program, 1-800-638-6620; American Red Cross, 606-439-3737.

Why Jail Was Built Atop the Courthouse

David Harum, in speaking of his sister, remarked: "If the meeting house roof fell in she would somehow contrive to blame it on me."

After reading the story in this week's paper concerning the courthouse problems, and being the unnamed—although not unknown—courthouse architect credited by you for the decision to situate the jail atop the courthouse, I must admit that I felt somewhat the same way.

As many people (including present and past courthouse officials) are aware, the old courthouse square was sold by the county to allow construction of the existing city parking lot by Urban Renewal. When the present courthouse site was purchased there was not enough area for a separate jail building. Also, it should be remembered that the county could not afford to construct a new courthouse, and funds for the construction were provided by the federal government, in a limited amount, thru the Accelerated Public Works Program.

This grant did not include enough money for a separate jail building, even had a suitable location been available. Due to unsuitable sub-surface conditions the building could not have a basement. As a result, the jail was planned and constructed at the present location because there was no alternative. Neither I nor anyone else deliberately planned it that way, I'm sure that no one was particularly happy with the solution.

You also noted that the vandalism was anything but funny to citizens who were turned away from the courthouse as a result of it. If our county officials followed the example of some other counties and required prisoners to work they would be less inclined to engage in such mirthful endeavors, and there would be a marked decrease in the jailhouse population. Also, many of the long series of disruptive incidents are a result of poor or non-existent courthouse maintenance.

I will be the first to admit that I made mistakes in the courthouse and probably every other building that I have designed, but in this particular instance not all of the Culpa is Mea.

Doubts New System

I wish to thank the Floyd County Times writer for the article about co-valedictorians at Wheelwright High School. Most of the people in my area know what I was fighting for and have been supportive. However, the achievements of only one participant was listed in this section; someone neglected the list of my daughter Dena's achievements.

If all A's appeared on one of the report cards, why did it take the principal and a vote by the Floyd County School Board to declare co-valedictorians? You must know by now that my daughter had the highest grade point average, or doesn't that count anymore?

Dena could not attend some of the school functions and gatherings because she felt it would have been admitting the principal and school board were right in handing down the decision to take away the honor of being valedictorian of her class.

They are now asking the principals to review a system for declaring class rank. There was a system established at W.H.S., worked out by a past principal and approved by the now county superintendent. All it took was a decision by the principal and a vote by the school board to do away with an established system. What makes people think it won't happen again?

Why ask the guidance counselors for a plan? The guidance counselor at Wheelwright was ignored in the decision in June.

Just for the record, I did not file suit against the other girl involved or her parents; my suit was against the Board of Education and the principal at W.H.S. My daughter was never opposed to sharing the honor, but when it was taken and given away an injustice was done. Perhaps the new system will prevent this from happening again, but I doubt it.

Response Heavy As Lake Cleanup Nears Beginning

With perhaps twice as many groups enlisting for the Dewey Lake cleanup as there are lake sections apportioned, preparations for the undertaking were near-complete Tuesday.

"The response—you wouldn't believe it!" said Judy Goble, of the Jenny Wiley State Park superintendent's office. The deadline for groups to file as participants was last Friday, but by that time the number of those volunteering for work greatly exceeded the 30 work-sections marked off for cleanup.

Marney Maness and Miss Goble have been coordinating the enlistment program, and they are now concerned that some groups will be disappointed. The only solution seen to the problem is to accept the applications on a "first-come, first-served" basis.

The drawing for the tract of land for which each participating group will be responsible will be held at noon Saturday at May Lodge. Each group assigned a tract will have from that date till Saturday, Aug. 11, to complete its work. After inspection by a committee to determine if each area has been cleaned according to prescribed guidelines, each participating group whose work is approved will be paid $500.

An appreciation picnic on Sunday, Aug. 12, from 4 p.m. till nightfall at the park will conclude the cleanup program for this year.

The horseshoe crab, named for its hoof shape by early English settlers to North Carolina, is not a crab at all. Its nearest relatives are spiders and scorpions, says National Wildlife's Ranger Rick magazine.

BRITTLE BONES & PERIODONTAL PROBLEMS

- Q. Is there any relation between brittle bones and periodontal problems?
- A. According to some researchers, periodontal disease can be the first sign of brittle bones (osteoporosis) that may not be noted in the rest of the body until many years later.

Osteoporosis, or loss of bone density, can start as young as age 25. With women, decline in body estrogen after menopause impairs the ability to absorb needed calcium from food. The typical American high-protein diet also reduces calcium absorption.

A diet of calcium-rich foods—milk, yogurt, hard cheeses, canned salmon (with the bones!), sardines, leafy green vegetables—along with a regimen of daily exercise, can go a long way toward keeping bones strong and free of osteoporosis. Remember, your bones provide the calcium and the structural support needed for the entire body, including jaws, mouth and teeth.

Highway Use Tax Return Filing Data Extended

Normally, owners of most large trucks, truck-tractors, or buses must file an IRS Form 2290, "Federal Use Tax Return on Highway Motor Vehicles," by August 31 each year. However, because of a delay in issuing Form 2290 to taxpayers who filed a return last year.

The delay in issuing Forms 2290 is caused by a provision of the pending Deficit Reduction Tax Act of 1984 which would change the heavy vehicle use tax rate scheduled to go into effect on July 1, 1984. The rate which is effective under current law was enacted as part of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982. The rate in the pending legislation is lower and also would be effective July 1.

The tax period for the highway use tax begins July 1, 1984 and ends June 30, 1985. Taxpayers who first used vehicles after July must file Forms 2290 by the last day of the month following the month of first taxable use. The return must be filed with the Internal Revenue Service for the area in which the taxpayer's principal business, office or agency or legal residence is located.

The highway use tax is imposed on those vehicles using any public highways which includes federal, state, and city roads. Revenue from the tax helps states in financing the Interstate Highway System.

Form 2290 and IRS Publication 349, "Federal Highway Use Tax on Trucks, Truck-Tractors and Buses," can be ordered by writing the IRS Forms Center at P.O. Box 6900, Florence, Kentucky 41042. If you have questions on highway use tax, you may call IRS at 584-1361 in Louisville or toll-free 1-800-424-1040 elsewhere in Kentucky.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

If anyone should be familiar with the strength of the sun at the beach and its effect on the skin, it is a lifeguard. When you see one at the beach with a white cream on his nose and lips, you may not know what it is but you suspect it must be good. Your suspicions are correct. Generally, that white cream is titanium dioxide. This ointment, when combined with an opaque substance such as red veterinary petrolatum, blocks the sun's rays. What is more, unlike most other sun-blocking preparations, it will stay on the skin even after swimming. Another related compound, with much the same effect, available at most pharmacies, is zinc oxide.

Before you set out on your summer vacation come into COOLEY APOTHECARY and be sure to buy your sun-blocking preparations. There is nothing worse than a vacation that is spoiled by a bad sunburn. It also makes good sense to bring an ample supply of whatever prescription drugs you take. We take pride in being able to provide you with your prescription medications at everyday low prices. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Master Charge and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:

In the event that the sun does burn your skin, apply benzocaine or a commercial product that contains it to relieve the pain.

Tests To Evaluate Lifeguards' Skills More Stringent

The state Department of Parks has initiated a program to ensure that the park system's lifeguards are well trained and in top shape. Commissioner Fran Curci said recently.

The department has adopted a more stringent test to evaluate the lifeguards' swimming and rescuing skills. The test is more demanding than the Red Cross advanced lifesaving test that all park lifeguards already must pass, said Debbie Bellairs, director of recreation in the Parks Department, which is an agency in the Tourism Cabinet.

Thirty-eight of the department's 40 lifeguards recently passed the new test, Ms. Bellairs noted. A lifeguard is required to perform specific aquatic skills within time limitations, such as swimming 500 yards continuously in less than 10 minutes and treading water for two minutes while supporting a 10-pound object.

The two lifeguards who failed the test were given another chance to pass, but were removed from their positions when they failed a second time. That policy will apply to all lifeguards, Ms. Bellairs said.

The department also has begun a conditioning and fitness program to make sure the lifeguards stay in shape. And, each park is developing written emergency plans to cover matters like the handling of a person suffering a neck injury and procedures for finding a lost child.

This year, as every year, the parks staff is busy at its pools and lake beaches. Nearly 300,000 swimmers were recorded during June. Some 14 water rescues were performed during the month.

Grass-Eating Fish May Control Weeds

McNeely Lake in Jefferson county will be stocked later this summer with 1,000 white amur, a grass-eating fish, in an attempt to control the excessive weed growth in the lake. Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources officials announced today.

This is the first official stocking of this fish in Kentucky, according to Pete Pfeiffer, director of fisheries for the department.

The white amur, also commonly known as the grass carp, is a native of Russia, China and Japan. When stocked at the proper rate, these fish can completely control weeds in a lake or pond, Pfeiffer says.

The fish is to be stocked at McNeely lake are monosex triploids, Pfeiffer says. Through manipulation of the eggs in the hatchery, all the fish produced are females and over 90 percent of these are sterile. These genetically altered fish will be used to make sure that reproduction will not take place and the population can be controlled, Pfeiffer says.

Escapement control barriers will be placed in the spillway to prevent movement out of the lake.

McNeely Lake, a 53-acre fishing lake owned by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, receives an excessive nutrient load from a number of small sewage treatment plants in its drainage area. These nutrients (primarily nitrates and phosphates) act as fertilizers which cause thick growth of water weeds.

When they are stocked in August, the fish will be between eight and 11 inches long. By this time next year they should be big enough to start controlling vegetation in the lake, according to Pfeiffer.

"This stocking will also give our biologists some hands-on experience with these fish," Pfeiffer says. "We want to take an intensive look at this species as a biological alternative to spraying chemical herbicides."

If the experiment at McNeely proves successful Pfeiffer expects to legalize use of this fish in private water under specified conditions. It is currently illegal for private citizens to import or possess this fish in Kentucky.

New MSU Prexy Is Not Afraid For Phone Number To Be Known

NEW MSU President Herb F. Reinhard talks with students at an orientation session last week. Dr. Reinhard became MSU's ninth president on July 1.

New Morehead State University President Herb F. Reinhard highlighted his first working week as chief executive by giving parents and students at an orientation-registration office phone number and telling them he was only a phone call away.

"I've had many people over the years tell me I'm crazy for giving out my phone number that way," he said. "But, if I can help a parent with a problem their son or daughter may have while they're here, then I'm doing my job."

Beginning his administration as MSU's ninth president, Dr. Reinhard said his style is one of an "open, honest administration."

Dr. Reinhard, the president of Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania since 1979, spent his first two days on campus touring buildings and meeting campus residents.

Dr. Reinhard received his bachelor's and master's degrees in psychology from Florida State and his doctorate in education from Indiana University.

Before becoming president at Slippery Rock, he was assistant to the president at Florida A & M, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Tennessee, vice president for student development at Western Carolina University and dean of student services at Florida State.

The Good News Report

By THOMAS W. PAUKEN
Director of ACTION

Christmas, 1983 was no Christmas for a great many residents of Hidalgo County, Texas, one of four counties along the Rio Grande hit by weather that devastated crops and orchards throughout the region. An estimated 25 percent of the county's residents depend on farm work for their livelihood. Now, suddenly, they were out of work with no prospects for employment until spring planting and summer harvest. The situation required swift action, and the churches in the area, operating ecumenically, were the focal point for it. Initially, collections were made, clothing and other goods donated, but everyone knew there had to be an ongoing effort which would require a source of supply and dependable distribution. This meant volunteers. As Bob Pratt of Weslaco Lutheran Church put it, "We had to operate on a people to people basis—to find a workable way to make sure those who needed help were getting it."

The challenge, like any of its kind, became cooperative not only through volunteers from various towns and parishes, offering their time and energy, but also through all-important contributions from the private sector which, in fact, made the operation possible. The HEB Foundation, a component of the HEB food chain, donated a warehouse and delivered a daily supply of non-saleable food items. "We had to sort the food to make sure it was edible," says Pratt, "and about 75 percent of it was." As a result, throughout the area, six food pantries were set up. Bob Pratt took over as coordinator of the one in Weslaco. As a retired postal worker and Air Force Reservist, Bob, and his wife Bernice, who had also served in the Air Force, knew that proper organization was the key to success. Weslaco was divided into four sectors with a church at the center of each. Work parties saw to the sorting of necessities that came in from various sources—2,000 pairs of Haggler slacks, a truckload of meat from H&H Packing Company, flour from the Pioneer Flour Company, and so on. Volunteers transported the goods in their own vehicles at their own expense from the warehouse to the food pantry, and from there to the churches where other volunteers saw to the final distribution.

Thus a community of 20,000 took care of its migrant farm workers and helped them through a bad season. "At the height of the problem," Bob said, "we had anywhere from 150 to 200 volunteers working, some giving four to five hours a day. We didn't ask for any help from the government, and we didn't want any. We didn't want any paper work. We just had to get a job done and we did it."

Today, the weather is better in Weslaco and the economic situation has improved for the farm workers. Nevertheless, Bob Pratt and other volunteers like him continue the food pantry, supported by the public-spiritedness of private firms large and small.

Mrs. Vivian Stiles and Mrs. Vivian R. Bartley, of Prestonsburg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gomer Stiles, of Charleston, W. Va., recently. While there, they attended the eighth annual Scottish Clan gathering and Highland games held at Ripley, W. Va.

Mrs. Bartley, the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.G. Stiles, is the last of the direct line in the Stiles family on the maternal grandmother's side, descending from the Gordon Clan.

The Scottish Clan of Gordon rose to power in the person of Sir Adam Gordon who fell at Halidon Hill in 1333 during the Scottish War of Independence. There were ten baronetcies pertaining to this clan. Two regiments have been raised from it; the 9th, or Gordon Highlanders, raised in 1794, and the old 75th and 92nd linked together, are now the Gordon Highlanders.

The so-called 'Fighting Ladies From Hell' have been very prominent in various military conflicts from as early as the 13th century to the present.

One of the largest Scottish Clan gatherings will be held in Georgia in October.

Tax Credit Program Opens Up 7,076 Jobs In Nine-Month Period

More than 7,000 Kentuckians were placed in jobs in the private sector between Oct. 1, 1983, and June 30, 1984, under the federal government's targeted jobs tax credit program, which is administered by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

"We had expected 5,897 people to be hired under the program during the first three quarters of the fiscal year," said program director Lynda Sherrard of the Department for Employment Services. "The hiring of 7,076 during that period puts us well ahead of our goal." There were 5,491 people hired during the same period of the 1983 fiscal year.

"Economic improvement certainly was a major factor in this year's increase," Sherrard said. "And employers are more knowledgeable about the program."

The program is geared toward helping people from certain target groups, such as handicapped individuals, youth from low-income families, recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits, recipients of federal Supplemental Security Income benefits, and some Vietnam-era veterans, obtain jobs.

As an incentive to hire people, on a full- or part-time basis, from these target groups, the federal government offers employers a substantial tax credit. For each eligible person hired an employer can receive a tax credit of up to $3,000 the first year and up to $1,500 the second year.

Requests to take advantage of the TJTC program can be made by the employer, or an unemployed job seeker can use the tax credit's advantage when selling himself during an interview. Employers or job seekers interested in details of the program should contact their local Department for Employment Services office.

Middle Creek Church Looted Second Time

The Dotson Pentecostal Assembly of God Church on Middle Creek was looted, the night of July 16, for the second time in the last 12 months. The pastor, Richard Shepherd, estimated loss of church belongings and damages to the building were "at least $2500."

A steel door, which apparently was pried open with a crowbar, was damaged. Missing are the church public address system, three microphones, four speakers, a vacuum cleaner and one air-conditioner.

Footprints found outside the building indicated they were made after a rain which fell between 9:30 and 10 o'clock that night, it was said.

State Trooper Steven Zellers is investigating the break. The first looting of the church took place July 4 last year.

Drawing Aids Agriculture Students

Mont Gibson, Jr., left, Dana postmaster, received an autographed UK basketball from Gene Ball, Floyd county extension agent, as the result of a drawing held recently at the annual meeting of the Big Sandy chapter of UK College of Agriculture alumni. Proceeds from the drawing are used to provide $300 scholarships to College of Agriculture students chosen on a basis of academic achievement and need. Students interested in applying for a scholarship should contact the county extension office.

For Sale: One Wrench—$269

Would you pay $780 for a $45 screwdriver? How about $128 for a simple nut-and-bolt?

Like it or not, as taxpayers, you have. According to the August Reader's Digest, "uncounted millions" have been wasted in the federal government's purchase of spare parts from many defense contractors.

Specifically: —Last May, the office of the Defense Department's Inspector General reported that 36 percent of all spare parts ordered are overpriced.

—In 1983, after Secretary of the Navy John Lehman complained about a $780 specialty screwdriver sold by General Electric, the company reduced its price to $45.

—A recent audit revealed that the Air Force paid Pratt & Whitney $1.4 million for spare parts that cost $531,000. Included were an ordinary socket wrench priced at $269 and a one-inch nut-and-bolt at $128.

Such abuses are likely to continue until the government changes its practice of punishing "whistle-blowers." The Digest reports. A case in point: George Spanton, an auditor with the Defense Contract Audit Agency was threatened with early retirement, transfer and firing for bringing the Pratt & Whitney bill to light.

Spanton was subsequently allowed to retire on schedule, following the public-ty surrounding his case. Says Sen. Charles E. Grassely (R. Iowa), "As long as the President permits the Pentagon to punish those who expose waste while rewarding those who cover it up, those in the bowels of the system will sabotage any true money-saving plans."

Americans Enjoying Exotic Crops

There's a quiet revolution occurring in supermarket and grocery produce sections all across the country. Fruits and vegetables with names like cherimoya, carambola, chayote and jicama are cropping up alongside avocados, tomatoes and limes.

These and many other new exotic crops from other lands and other peoples are quickly being assimilated into the American diet. Reader's Digest reports in its August issue. Some are being grown here, others are being imported.

"In the last ten years," says Nancy Tucker of the Produce Marketing Association, "the average number of items in produce departments has doubled from about 65 to 130, and some supermarkets carry up to 250 items." Specialty produce has become a $100 million-a-year industry.

The millions of Asians and Latinos who immigrated to the United States in the 1970s are having the most profound effect on the changing variety of crops grown in America. To supply their displaced countrymen with the tastes of home, Vietnamese are growing lemongrass in Mississippi; Chinese, bok choy in New Jersey; Japanese, kabocha squash in California.

The Latino efforts are more noticeable in south Florida, where farmers have added more than 10,000 acres of new exotics such as boniato, malanga, calabaza, yucca, pigeon peas, annonas, Barbados cherries, mamey and sapodilla, to traditional crops such as avocados, oranges, tomatoes, limes and papayas.

American consumers are attracted to these new fruits and vegetables because of their taste and an increased awareness of the nutritional importance of variety in foods.

Notes Los Angeles-based produce importer Frieda Caplan: "Ten years ago people selected a supermarket on the quality of its meat. Today it's the variety and quality of produce that attract customers."

But just how do some of these new exotics taste?

Jicama is a root, which has a sweet taste, like a freshly-picked apple. Chayote is a type of squash with a taste halfway between apple and cucumber, while carambola, a juicy ridged fruit that resembles a bright-yellow star when cut, has a sweet to tart taste. The cherimoya is a tropical fruit that Mark Twain described as "deliciousness itself."

WIC Aid Available To More Families

Because the federal government has reset the income levels that define poverty, more low-income Kentuckians may soon be eligible for benefits under the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children, often called WIC.

The program's benefit eligibility continues to be based on 185% of the federal poverty levels, but those levels increased on July 1. As a result, families with incomes slightly over the present income maximums may now be eligible for WIC benefits.

WIC provides nutrition education and specific foods high in protein, iron and vitamins A and C to low-income pregnant women, new mothers, infants and children up to 5 years of age who have health problems that can be improved through better nutrition. The goal of the U.S. Department of Agriculture program is to improve the health of children through proper nutrition during their formative years.

In Memory of Glenda Sharon Pack

Dear Glenda,

Has it really been a year since you were taken away from us. This cannot be so, for our grief is still so fresh. Those of us who love you have become well acquainted with loneliness, for you leave a void that no one else can fill. You touched many people in your life.—Your family, your friends, your students and we are all better off by having known you.

Death is a natural part of life, but it is so tragic when it comes early. It is even more tragic when it is SO NEEDLESS—so SENSELESS. But God, is his infinite wisdom and mercy, will heal our hearts in time. He will remind us of the good times when you were still with us—when you laughed and loved and enjoyed—and the mention of your name will once again bring a smile to our faces to join with the tears in our eyes.

Your Loving Family

A Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established in Glenda's name in order to provide an annual scholarship to an outstanding math student at McDowell High School.

Anyone wishing to contribute should send their tax-deductible donation to: The Glenda Sharon Pack Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o McDowell High School, McDowell, Ky. 41647.

They say crime doesn't pay, but in the Netherlands, unemployment certainly does. An unemployed worker gets 80 percent of his previous salary for the first six months out of work, the August Reader's Digest notes, and 70 to 75 percent the following two years.

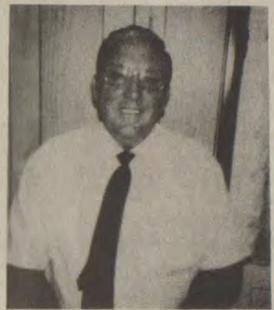

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Arnold Herald, of the Goble Roberts Addition, remains in serious condition at St. Joseph's Hospital, Lexington, after undergoing surgery last week. With him there are Mrs. Rhoda Lawson and Brandie, Mrs. Sis Morgan and Leslie, Mr. John Herald and Mrs. Lois May. Mrs. Herald is the houseguest of Mrs. Opal Fitzpatrick there.

Fifty years ago, the soybean was a little-known, exotic crop. Today, the August Reader's Digest reports, it is the third largest American food crop and a vital part of our economy.

Theater star gives soap opera acting a try

By Nancy M. Reichardt

"My background is mostly in theater," says Boston-born Lauren Koslow, who portrays Lindsey Wells on "The Young and the Restless." "This role is the most I've ever done on television," she admits.

She has, however, guest starred on several prime-time television series and recently appeared in the film "Hard to Hold" with Rick Springfield (formerly Noah Drake of "General Hospital").

Her biggest problem when she joined "Y & R," she remembers, was "accepting that the soaps are a very fast-paced medium. You don't have any real time for rehearsals. But my dinner theater training helped me adapt, because you don't have all that much time to prepare for that type of work either."

Miss Koslow admits, "you learn to be a very quick study when you're working in the soaps."

Before this role, Miss Koslow says she mostly played "goody-two-shoes types or the ingenue," yet her new character is a bit of a villainess. "Playing Lindsey is a lot of fun," she says, "and a lot of her scenes are interesting because they're written very strongly."

"I guess it's easier to play Lindsey as the villainess," she adds, "but I don't want her to be a villainess all the time. I'd like to show Lindsey's vulnerable side, too. I don't want her to become one-dimensional."

Miss Koslow has other thoughts about Lindsey's future. "My secret hope is that Lindsey and Jack Abbott (the man she's currently blackmailing because of his one-night stand with his stepmother) will get romantically involved because Lindsey still loves Jack even though he discarded her years ago. Theirs is a love-hate relationship."

Of her own future, Miss Koslow has definite thoughts, too. "Although my work on 'Y & R' has been a wonderful experience and has been very good training," she says, "I would like to do more theater work."

"But," she admits, "what I'd really like to do in the future is lots of film."

STARVIEW

By David Gabriel

SURF'S UP — "I cannot survive rehashing old stuff," says James Darren, "Moondoggie" of the ancient television show "Gidget." People are more likely than ever to identify him with the teen surfer now that the show is being revived in syndication.

"Of course it's nice to have someone remember you," he says. "But I like it even more when they say something about what I'm doing today," which is, of course, playing Officer Jim Corrigan on ABC's "T.J. Hooker."

RESURRECTED — CBS dropped "Maggie Briggs" but that doesn't mean that Suzanne Pleshette is out in the cold. As a matter of fact, the network is actively seeking a new series for the actress.

In the meantime, she is starring in the television film "For Love or Money," now being shot in Los Angeles. The romantic comedy also stars Gil Gerard and is about two strangers who compete for big bucks on a game show and put themselves in danger of disqualification when their romance blossoms.

DOUBLE TIME — "Dallas" star Audrey Landers and her sister Judy Landers ("Vegas" and "BJ and the Bear") are doing a lot more than television these days.

The pair, who recently debuted their cabaret act at the swanky Red Parrot in New York, have a platinum album in Europe. They are also two of Gina Lollobrigida's most popular subjects in her new photo book.

COMING UP — Jeanne Jones, who is winning raves for the diet and nutrition tips she gives in her new book "Jet Fuel," is keeping busy.

She's currently readying a home video of the same title and has received bids from three production companies for exclusive rights. In the fall, Miss Jones plans to do a television special on the same subject.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Carpy was stowing his instruments away in his bag. He looked up with an exclamation of astonishment. Sel-

"So I Talked to Him."

wood regarded Scott searchingly. "You mean the old padre I wanted to see?" Scott nodded.

Selwood, who had taken a chair, rose to his feet, and with one hand picked up his coat to throw over his shoulders. Scott helped him. "Where in thunder did the old padre turn up?" asked Carpy.

"McAlpin passed him on the Calabasas trail about an hour ago, when he was bringing in Dave. He had a couple of Guloeks with him." Scott so designated the Indians from Guloek reservation. "McAlpin told me he met a black-robe and that he was on his way up here and going to camp along the river. So I rode down there and talked with his guides. They told me they had a very old black-robe along. So I talked to him. They're heading for the Black-foot country. 'I saw the big fire in the sky,' he told me, 'and I said to my men the new town is burning; many people are in distress. We will go there before we start up the river.'"

"I held my lantern into his face," continued Scott. "He is the same man whose picture you had in your room up at the hall. And I told him there was a white man here wanted to see him. And to go to the horse barn if it wasn't burned. But he said he would camp down by the river. He's there."

"If there was a surprise for Carpy in the recital there was a greater one awaiting him in Selwood's reception of it. For a moment Selwood did not speak. When he did, Carpy stood open-eyed. "Well," said Selwood deliberately. "If you've got the man, the money is coming to you—when I can dig it up. But don't hold him on my account—I don't care about seeing him."

Carpy was well high speechless with amazement. "What!" he exclaimed, recovering his breath. "Don't care about seeing him? Man!" he cried. "Don't want to see the man—if it is the man—that's got your whole story? Have you lost your senses?"

Selwood, standing unmoved, parried the attack with stubborn indifference. He felt that Christie had cast him off—what did a name, good or bad, mean to him now? But he would say not one word, and Doctor Carpy, unable to stir him with eloquent reproach, in the end lost his own temper. "Here after all these years," he protested, "that blamed old martinet Roper has been running over you, and you get a chance to nail him, by Jing, you won't take the trouble to do it!"

"All right, I'll do it myself," the doctor exclaimed. "I won't let that old buck run over me any longer. Bob," continued the incensed surgeon, pointing his finger at Scott, "hold on to your black-robe and his red-skins. If we can't find anything else for breakfast, bring 'em up here for a cup o' coffee, anyway." And with Selwood staring at the wall, and the half-breed grinning perplexed, Carpy flung out of the room.

In the gloom of the hall, Carpy, still exasperated by Selwood's obstinacy and talking resentfully to himself, almost ran into Christie, a pathetic figure, he thought, waiting for a chance to speak to somebody. As he stopped with an apology, she seemed encouraged, for she stepped close to him. "Doctor!" she exclaimed, in a frightened whisper, "is Mr. Selwood terribly hurt?"

DIES AT MARTIN

The daughter of John Burchett died in the Beaver Valley hospital at Martin this week, and was taken to Dwaile Tuesday morning for burial in the family cemetery. The victim was about 12 years old, it is said.

Maytown Net Team In Active Schedule

Langley, Ky., Nov. 17 (Spl.)—Friday, Saturday and Sunday saw four games of basketball at Maytown and Bosco. Friday afternoon, the two literary societies of the high school played a hard-fought game which saw the Columbians emerge on the long end of a 12-11 score.

Saturday, Betsy Layne came here to be a loser in the girls' game but a winner in the boys' game. The Betsy Layne girls, playing in their first match contest, could not locate the basket during the forty minutes of play, and lost the game 11-0. The Maytown girls played hard and deserved the shut-out victory, the first of its kind ever played on the Maytown court.

The Maytown boys lost to Betsy Layne, 32-8. They were considerably off form, but the regular Betsy Layne team did not intend to play when they came. Mr. Maggard and Mr. Harlowe, former Berea College stars, were too much for our boys. This was not a match game, for Betsy Layne had only one school boy.

Sunday, Maytown went to Bosco and defeated that team, 22-17.

COLUMBIANS WIN

The Columbian Society gave a program last Friday afternoon. The program was enjoyed by all. After the program, a basketball game was played between the Columbians and Kentuckians. It was a hard-fought game and the Columbians showed they played better by defeating the Kentuckians one point. The score was 12-11.

TO BE HOSTS

The Kentuckians are giving a party in honor of the Columbians Friday afternoon at the school building. A meeting of the Kentuckians was held Monday and each member was instructed to bring twenty-five cents, so that refreshments could be served.

TO PLAY AT ONE O'CLOCK

The Maytown basketball team will play the Prestonsburg quintet Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. Boys and girls will both play.

COUNTY CLERK SAYS BALLOTS WERE NEEDED

Referring to the news story appearing recently in the Courier-Journal and reprinted locally, as to the number of ballots issued in the November election, County Clerk I. A. Smiley gave out the following statement this week:

"There has been a considerable amount of newspaper gossip and talk concerning the number of ballots issued from my office for certain precincts in Floyd county for the November election.

"All ballots issued from my office were at the request of Floyd county citizens, and on my part there was no intention of anything being accomplished thereby, but merely giving the people service and a chance to vote. I feel sure that no evil intention existed on the part of those who requested the increase of ballots.

"Every step that I have taken in this election was in prompt response to my own convictions. I only tried to do my duty, and to protect both sides in the protecting of the election returns. I feel that I have the right as a citizen to support any one I feel to support. But as an official I try to do justice to all.

"Regardless of what may be said or written, I have done nothing as touching this election for or against any candidate of which I am ashamed. It is true that I refused to do some things asked of me, for the reason I felt it beyond my power and authority. I am ready to deny anything that has been said concerning my dealing unlawfully or unfairly with any one in this election."

P. - T. A. Conducts Interesting Meet

Rendering of an excellent program, consisting of musical selections and addresses, marked Thursday evening's meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association, which was held in the auditorium of the high school building, one of much interest.

Miss Katherine Bitts, county health nurse, addressed the meeting on "Health and Regulations," imparting much information of benefit to parents who have children in school.

Following Miss Bitts was the Rev. E. H. Barnette, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, who spoke on "Duties of Parents in Connection with the Parent-Teacher Association." Rev. Barnette expressed much interest in the future of the work here and clearly outlined what the patrons of the school should do in order to effect an effective organization.

A girls' quartette, composed of Misses Delphia Johnson, Anna May Hatcher, Frances Elam and Irene Patton, rendered two charming vocal numbers, with Miss Margaret May at the piano. A social hour was much enjoyed, with excellent refreshments being served to the 36 persons present.

Dr. John Barbour addressed the Association briefly, encouraging those who were interested. Dr. Barbour stated that the presence of great numbers did not mean that real work was being done, and that a few in earnest would effect much more of real achievement. Dr. Barbour was followed by the Rev. F. R. McAllister, who made a brief but interesting talk.

Edward L. Allen furnished a worthy aim for the P.-T. A. by suggesting in a brief talk that two dormitories, one for boys and another for girls, be erected here for the convenience of those attending the high school. He urged that the organization make this one of its purposes.

The basketball team will go to Lackey, November 18, and then will play Maytown the following day. The school is expecting a much better basketball team than it had in the football team.

Do all the parents know their children? Know they do not know them as they should in school affairs? Some parents wonder how their children are getting along in their studies. In order to know these things, attend the next P. T. A., which meets the first and second Thursdays of each month.

Are the people qualified to vote for their superintendent? This question was brought up in the District Teachers' Convention and it was stated that the people were disqualified to vote for their superintendent in the county and were qualified to vote for a man they knew nothing about for state superintendent. Was this man right?

MEETING

A committee will meet this week to name the Literary Society which has been organized. The Literary Society will have a Thanksgiving program on Friday.

LAUGHS FROM LIFE

An absent-minded young physician courting a girl charged her two dollars a call.

Tom—"Did your watch stop when it hit the floor?"

Ham—"Sure, did you think it would go through?"

She—"My husband bought me a car."

He—"Can you drive it?"

She—"Well, I drove him into buying it."

There are lots of toe dancers, but most of them dance on everybody else's toes.

He—"For two cents I'd kiss you."

She—"Here's a dollar, let's get going."

Love is like a kodak film. It is best developed in dark rooms.

Mary—"When I was young, I was left an orphan."

Sue—"And what did you do with it?"

Prof—"Are you interested in art?"

M. L.—"Art who?"

The Seniors have secured a nice bunch of class rings.

Dr. John Barbour will speak at the school auditorium Friday.

We are expecting to organize a band in the school soon.

C. B. WHEELER

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE 31st JUDICIAL DISTRICT—FLOYD AND KNOX COUNTIES:

I want to express to you my appreciation for the splendid support you gave me in the recent election for Circuit Judge. I do not regard this as a personal victory, but a victory of the people who stand for law and order, and so viewing it, I will at all times so conduct myself and the duties of the office that no one will have just cause to feel the law has not been honestly administered. I want all who opposed me as well as those who supported me to feel and know that my only purpose is to do justice to all who have business in my court.

Again thanking you for your loyalty and support, I am

Sincerely yours,

'AUNT' FANNIE WILLIAMSON DIES

Tram, Ky., Nov. 14 (Spl.)—We are very sorry to report the death of "Aunt" Fannie Williamson, mother of Mrs. John L. Layne. "Aunt" Fannie had been very ill for many weeks, and, owing to her age, which was nearing the 90's, she could not have lasted long. She is survived by several children and grandchildren and a host of friends who will surely miss her. She was laid to rest in the Betsy Layne cemetery Tuesday at 10 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Layne are the proud grandparents of a new boy, Clyde Otis Henchman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Henchman, of Justell. Mrs. Henchman was formerly Miss Georgia B. Layne, of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Roberts and Sarah Francis have returned home after a two weeks visit with relatives at Osborn. They also made a trip to Huntington and Ashland visiting Mrs. J. E. Allen.

Mrs. Clyde Layne and Ollie Caldwell were the supper guests of Mrs. James Caldwell Friday evening.

Mrs. Lee Layne was called to Wolf-pit to the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. Roy Sulton, who is very ill with dropsy.

John Stanley is suffering with a broken nose, which he received Thursday night in a basketball game between Pikeville College and Pikeville All Stars. He returned to school Monday.

Miss Beulah Layne visited her sister, Mrs. V. Hinchman, at Justell last week.

Mrs. Tom Wallace is very ill with pneumonia at present.

Ben Music, of St. Paul, was calling on Miss Carrie Conley Sunday.

Mrs. May Stanley had as dinner guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Roberts and daughter, Sarah Francis, of Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Layne and son, Glen Stanley, of Justell; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stanley and children, Bob, Ruth and June, and Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Caldwell and Ollie Caldwell.

Miss Anna Osborn was the guest of Miss Suda Smith Sunday night.

Mrs. Sopha Smith, Nannie Goble and Emma Layne went to Betsy Layne Tuesday, to attend the funeral of Aunt Fannie Williamson.

PUREBRED STOCK FOR THIS COUNTY

Number of Farmers Plan Large Orchards, Lawson Says

With 43 purebred livestock individuals added to the county this year and 13 more already ordered, the future for livestock in Floyd county is more promising than ever before, County Agent Fred Lawson said this week.

Of the 61 purebreds which will be in the possession of Floyd county livestock growers by December 1, 33 are sires. Slightly growing interest in livestock denotes that purebreds are slated to replace scrub stock in this county.

A number of farmers have indicated plans to go into the fruit-growing industry on a rather large scale, but Mr. Lawson is advising farmers to grow, rather than leap, into the business. It is his contention that those who would develop orchards should start with a relatively small number of trees, care for them properly and add to their orchards as they find it possible, after having some practical experience in the work, to do so. He insists that trees already planted be cared for, and that a dormant spray for trees be used in the winter for San Jose scale. Formulas for such spray are given in the county agent's column this week.

Mrs. Ernie Brunk, Mrs. G. R. Spradlin and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Harkins left Thursday evening for Lexington, from which place they will go to Danville Saturday for the Centre-State football game. They were joined in Ashland by Miss Mary Nunnery, who was the guest this week of Mrs. G. L. Howard, of Huntington, W. Va.

What should I get Dad or Mother for Christmas? Have his or her eyes examined and glasses fitted so that they may see as well as when young. The most practical gift for all. Call on DR. WILCOX, at Floyd County Health Office, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 22, 23 and 24.

Theatre Offers Flood Discount

The Jenny Wiley Theatre has announced a discount evening at the theatre in appreciation of local residents who were affected by May's floods. "We realize that many people were hurt severely by the flood," said Keith Stevens, managing director of the theatre. "We are trying to make the Theatre affordable to everyone with this special night."

So, next Tuesday night (July 31) a number of seats for that evening's performance of "Annie" will be offered at a special discount price of $3.50. This discount cannot be combined with any other discount or coupon.

"When you call for tickets, tell us that you want the discount seats and the cost will be only $3.50," said Connie Parrish, box office manager.

The Jenny Wiley Theatre's 20th anniversary season continues through August 19 with "Annie," "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." All performances are at 8:30 p.m. in the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre.

For tickets to this special discount evening, call the box office at (606) 886-9274.

A piece in last week's Times, which attempted to identify the first Floyd county couple to be issued a marriage license since the dissolution of the state law which required a three day waiting period, got confused somewhat. The couple in the photo should have been identified as Roy Dean Ratliff, of Lookout, and Tina Laverne Hall, of Hi Hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hamilton, of Teaberry, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Miss Trena Hamilton, to Mr. Gary Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Hall, of Galveston.

Miss Hamilton and Mr. Hall are graduates of Betsy Layne High School and plan to attend Prestonsburg Community College this fall, majoring in pre-pharmacy.

The wedding will be solemnized Saturday, July 28, at 1 p.m. at the Boldman Free Will Baptist Church at Boldman. A reception will follow at the church. All relatives and friends are invited to attend.

State Suit Against Magazine Publishers Alleges Deception

Attorney General David L. Armstrong announced last week that his Division of Consumer Protection has filed a lawsuit in Franklin Circuit Court against the purported magazine publishers of the Kentucky Law Enforcement Journal.

The lawsuit alleges that Biering Publishing, Consolidated Publications, and Ernest Biering violated the Kentucky Consumer Protection Act by using deceptive practices to sell advertising in the magazine.

The defendants are alleged to have misrepresented or falsely implied that Kentucky Law Enforcement Journal is associated with state or local police or some other law enforcement agency, when, in fact they are not.

Franklin Circuit Court Judge William L. Graham issued a restraining order last week which prohibits the defendants from using the deceptive practices named in the lawsuit.

Armstrong said that most victims of the alleged deceptive practices are small businesses.

Other unlawful acts alleged in the lawsuit include:

—Misrepresenting that proceeds from advertising sales will be used to help widows and children of slain police officers;

—Implying that advertisers in the Kentucky Law Enforcement Journal will receive special consideration from law enforcement officers or agencies;

—Sending invoices and "past due" notices to Kentucky businesses for advertising that the business never authorized or purchased, and —Misrepresenting that the Kentucky Law Enforcement Journal is located or has an office in Frankfort, when in fact the defendants are located in Texas.

Armstrong is asking for an injunction to prohibit these deceptive practices, civil penalties of $2,000 for each willful violation of the Consumer Protection Act and refunds for the victimized businesses.

Armstrong asks that anyone who has been contacted by the Kentucky Law Enforcement Journal call the Attorney General's Consumer Hotline at 1-800-432-9257.

The proportion of blacks experiencing some unemployment in 1983—29.1 percent—was down from 33.4 percent in 1982 and 30.5 percent in 1981, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND

Kentucky law requires that all children entering school in Kentucky be immunized against the childhood diseases of measles, rubella, tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis and polio. Children entering school in Kentucky for the first time are also required to show proof of having had a T.B. skin test within the past year. These tests and immunizations are available free of charge at the Floyd County Health Department.

The health department has set aside July 25, 27, 30 and August 1, 3, 6, 8 and 10 to do pre-school immunizations. Parents are urged to bring their children in on those days in order to get their children ready for school.

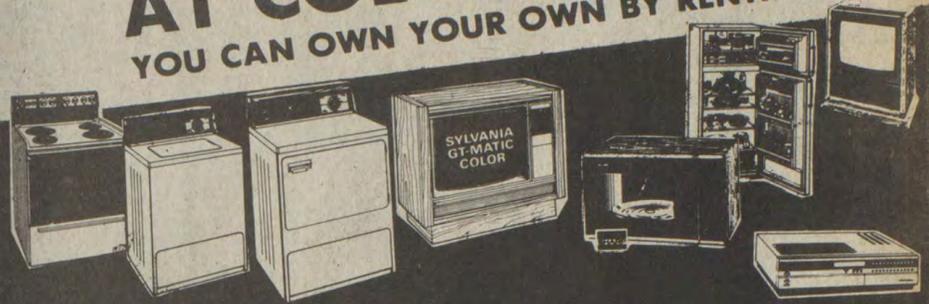

The health department will close at 12 noon on Tuesday, July 31, due to the retirement reception for Mrs. Pauline H. Sparks being held at the health department at that time.

Pupil Testing on Skills Ahead

Can your second-grader count by fives to 50? Or read a story silently and retell it in his or her own words? Beginning this year, second-grade pupils in Kentucky's public schools will be expected to master these and other skills.

A new state law requires the Kentucky State Board of Education to devise lists of essential skills in mathematics, reading, writing, spelling and library use. Students in all grades must then be tested on those skills each year.

"This will establish a floor for learning," Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said. "The essential skills will provide a springboard for learning at the higher levels."

"Kentucky has never before had a statewide standard. For the first time we will define what should be taught to insure the student's success at the next grade level."

Skills lists for math and reading have already been drawn up and approved by the state board. The Kentucky Department of Education is now selecting a vendor to compile the tests and is expected to announce its choice within a few days.

The reading and math examinations will be given to a pilot group of about 1,000 students at each grade level by early 1985. The department will then decide whether revisions are necessary before the tests are administered to all students in April 1985.

Department staff members have begun work on establishing skills lists for writing, spelling and reference skills. Students will be tested for the first time on those subjects in the spring of 1986.

The law approved by the 1984 General Assembly called for reading and math skills lists to be determined first. Experts stressed to the legislators that comprehension of those skills was essential to the mastery of other subjects.

McDonald said compiling the lists was "an arduous process." Staff members from the department's Office of Research and Planning worked closely with the Office of Instruction in composing preliminary lists, she said.

They drew on minimum skills lists approved by the State Board of Education in 1983, current research, skills lists used by other states, and recommendations from consultants on subject matter. Subjects covered in the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills, which is administered each year to students in the third, fifth, seventh and 10th grades, were also taken into consideration.

The rough draft was then presented to representative teams from local school districts in nine regional forums held throughout the state. Nearly 900 people, most of whom were teachers, attended the forums and reviewed the documents.

After tabulating approximately 3,000 responses, department staff members invited a group of experts in math, reading and curriculum development from local districts to review the revised lists. Their recommendations were incorporated into the final versions.

McDonald emphasized that the essential skills lists were not intended to be a complete curriculum. They are rather "a basis and a foundation upon which to build a comprehensive curriculum," she said.

The essential skills lists replace the minimum basic skills lists approved by the state board last year. Those skills were considered the bare minimum students needed to get by, while essential skills are an effort to raise students' performance to grade-level standards.

McDonald and her staff have expressed high hopes for the essential skills program. They said the test results would not only help teachers assess the knowledge of individual pupils but would also enable districts to define and correct their weaknesses.

McDonald said it was her hope that testing in essential skills would eventually lead to the requirement that students pass tests for promotion to certain grade levels and for graduation.

"We're certainly moving in that direction," she said. "I think the public has told us that they are tired of social promotion. They're tired of graduating children who cannot read, who cannot write, and who cannot compute."

She said she intended to ask the 1986 Kentucky General Assembly for such a requirement.

Although McDonald and members of the state board are delighted with the establishment of essential skills, they have expressed concern about the lack of funds for remedial instruction.

The legislature appropriated only enough money—$16 million—for remediation in grades one and two. Department officials are strongly recommending that local districts reallocate the federal Chapter 1 money formerly used in the first two grades and use it to finance remedial instruction in the upper grades.

McDonald said funding for remediation would be necessary before testing for promotion and graduation could take place.

"We must provide a safety net for those children who cannot be promoted," she said.

Copies of the reading and math lists are now being distributed to each of the state's 180 public school districts. They will be in the hands of administrators in time to help with fall curriculum planning.

The skills lists and tests will be monitored on a regular basis, and changes will be made when warranted, department officials said.

In addition to the new essential skills testing, Kentucky has established minimum skill levels in reading and math that students must meet before entering vocational education programs. Competency will be determined by test scores.

Milk Jug Heaven

By TERRY MOSLEY

Two milk jugs full of milk had a talk one day. The cream can close beside them sadly heard them say:

When our body's empty and they don't need us any more. What do you think they'll do with us when they open the refrigerator door?

The other milk jug listened as the first milk jug spoke. It said, "I think they will keep me, at least this is my hope."

But the other jug had been in the top of the grocery bag. He had seen the milk jug graveyard and he knew he could not brag.

He said, "I know where we're going when we go to rest. They'll throw us in Left Beaver Creek, and there we'll do our best."

"We'll float down to the garbage dump and there we'll stop awhile. But when it comes a heavy rain, we get a chance to smile."

"We'll wash upon an open field and there we'll be so lucky. We'll be in milk jug heaven, Left Beaver Creek, Kentucky."

New Law Releases FmHA Housing Funds

A bill signed by President Reagan July 2, enhances the use of funds for the single-family housing program operated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration, Kendall L. Seaton, state director, said recently. No additional funds are involved.

The new law clears up the division of loan funds that must be allotted to "very" low income applications and to those in the next higher bracket, low income.

The new law provides $690 million for very low income loans and $1.61 billion for low income loans. The funds in the two categories may be used independently of each other.

The agency has the authority to exceed the $690 million for very low income loans, if necessary.

"The new law is expected to revive the housing program, which had come to a virtual halt because of an earlier congressional requirement that 40 percent of housing loans be made to very low income borrowers," Seaton said.

The agency received few applications from very low income people that could be funded, even with the lower interest rate possible. Therefore, the agency had to drastically curtail loans to low income applicants to maintain the required 40/60 ratio.

Very low income is defined as not more than 50 percent of an area's median income. Low income is defined as not more than 80 percent of the area median.

First Birthday

Tameka Marie Ward, daughter of Terena Ward, celebrated her first birthday, July 5. She celebrated with a Care Bear cake and received many nice gifts from family and friends.

She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy B. Ward, of Martin and the great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ward, of Martin and great-granddaughter of Jr. Osborne, of Garrett, and the late Margie Osborne.

The Tragedy of Children

How old are you? How old were you when you learned insight? When you learned what your experience meant? When you really learned—in your heart and in your gut—that choices have consequences? How old were you when you realized that bad things don't only happen to other people? They can happen to you, too. When you learned about evil?

Kathy learned it before her 15th birthday. She almost didn't.

Kathy is tall and quite beautiful and looks much older than any brand new 15-year-old should. Her warm engaging personality endeared her to just about everybody at Covenant House. Last Friday, when she turned 15, a few of my staff brought a birthday cake to her hospital bedside.

She couldn't see the cake very well. Both eyes had been beaten shut and only one worked a little. Her body was covered with severe welts and cuts and bruises and most of the skin on her back and chest and legs had been burned off by the scalding water Bonnie had poured on her—to punish Kathy because she couldn't stop screaming after Bonnie and Carol tied her naked to a chair, burned her with cigarettes and beat her savagely with fists and a studded belt.

The beating and scalding lasted four days. Kathy's torture provided the entertainment for guests at a cocaine party Bonnie threw for her friends. They stood around at this party and laughed.

Kathy is tall for her age, younger than she looks. She ran away from Georgia at 14 looking for the excitement and money and designer jeans and beautiful clothes that life in a small town and her solid hardworking mother couldn't provide. She was no stranger to sexual abuse. As a preteen she had been sexually assaulted by her brother-in-law.

For a while, working the streets, the money was good, the life free. Until one night, Kathy got beaten up by her pimp and ran to Covenant House for help. We immediately returned Kathy to her mother in Georgia. Not for long.

Back home and bored, the bad memories of New York faded quickly. They have a way of doing that for a kid. The memories of the excitement and parties and good times and money and clothes enticed her back to New York.

The moth flew back into the flame. Her pimp, James, forgave her and put her to work in a brothel at 211 West 56 Street, between Broadway and Seventh. A woman named Danielle was the madam. Danielle saw a chance to make a lot of money.

Kathy was forced to work a double shift in the brothel—16 hours a day of assembly line sex, servicing as many as 30 to 40 clients a day. Her clients were almost always respectable businessmen.

They didn't want to know that Kathy was only 14 and 3/4ths. They just wanted Kathy.

It's O.K. in our sex-for-sale society to buy a kid 30 to 40 times a day in a brothel at 211 West 56 Street. All those dozens of respectable business customers—the johns—never attracted any attention of course.

Kathy escaped the brothel intending to return to Covenant House and once more seek help. She went to the apartment of Bonnie and Carol—two older prostitutes who had worked the streets with Kathy—to pick up some clothes she had stored there.

Bonnie saw the chance to make some big money. You're gonna work for us now, she said. Kathy refused. Bonnie and Carol attacked Kathy, ripped off her clothing, and tied her naked to a chair... Her four day ordeal of torture began.

How old were you? When you understood what evil is? When you looked on the face of malevolence? Were you almost 15? Was the knowledge burned into your flesh with cigarettes and scalding water?

Kathy escaped by chewing through the cords that burned her. Pretending she was unconscious, she waited until Bonnie left the apartment for a pack of cigarettes, quickly dialed 911, grabbed a sheet to cover her nakedness and fled the apartment. She hid in the stairwell until she heard the sirens of the police ambulance...

Horrified, hospital security guards keep a close watch on Kathy. They keep changing her from room to room so that the friends of James and Bonnie and Carol and Danielle can't get to her. They've tried three times and will probably try again. Nobody wants her to testify. You see, Bonnie and Carol are in jail, indicted by a grand jury on charges of kidnapping and first degree assault.

Bail for these animals had been set at $2,500—until Kathy swathed in bandages from head to foot was carried into court. The outraged Judge, at the urging of the District Attorney, raised the bail to $10,000.

Kathy will be flown home soon by air ambulance. She will need extensive skin grafts and a lifetime of good memories to at least partially erase the horror that will always remain just behind her eyes.

I think Kathy has learned about our adult world. I think she has gained insight. I think she has looked upon the face of evil.

She's paid a terrible price for knowledge—and I don't think she'll make the same mistake again. But it will happen again—to other kids.

You see, we adults have taught millions of kids like Kathy the same kind of lies that deceived and almost destroyed her: that it's O.K. to be seductive, to be erotic, to be a sex object.

Just watch the jeans commercials. Just watch Dynasty and Dallas and General Hospital. Just go see the movies Police Academy and the new Where the Boys Are.

We've taught millions of kids who grow up to be respectable business types that it's O.K. to desire children.

They've watched the same commercials and TV shows and films. They've learned that it's O.K. to pay for sex and to be paid for it. Even when the merchandise offered for sale is a teenager.

The well-patronized and protected sex industry trumpets the freedom of the American Consumer to pick and choose from a veritable smorgasbord of commercially available sex. You name it, you can buy it. Free from guilt, free from accountability.

Things will change when we do. Not before.

Pray for us here at Covenant House. It's not easy to deal with the pain of these children—and the anger. I guess I shouldn't have called James and Danielle and Carol and Bonnie animals. I didn't do that to the hundreds of businessmen who patronize that brothel at 211 West 56 Street.

It sticks in my craw and I guess it's a measure of my own lack of compassion and understanding, but I find it hard to ask you to pray for James and Danielle and Bonnie and Carol.

But we'd better. If only because we need forgiveness ourselves. To be selfish about it, if I forgive James and Danielle and Bonnie and Carol, will I have my own sins forgiven?

If I were a better person, more compassionate, I wouldn't find it so hard to say, Father, forgive them, they know not what they do. I think you'd better pray for me too. Please. And the businessmen, too, I guess.

Thanks for helping our kids. Because of you, kids like Kathy have a place to run and get help when evil reaches out to destroy them.

Beyond any possible way of saying it, we are grateful to you and for your loving them. Without you and your constant help, we simply would have to close our doors.

We pray for you all the time.

Peace,

State's Proximity To Food Production Held An Advantage

Kentucky is within a 500-mile radius of where more than 70 percent of the nation's food production is distributed, a recent Kentucky Commerce Cabinet report shows.

Commerce Cabinet Secretary Carroll Knicely says this is significant not only to the state's present 327 processors of food and kindred products, but also to efforts to attract new operations to Kentucky. He said plant location in relation to product markets is becoming increasingly important to firms wanting to expand or to build new facilities.

"Whether we are marketing products currently produced in Kentucky or promoting Kentucky as a location for new or expanded facilities," Knicely said, "it is a plus to be near the market. As this and other of our publications show, we are within 500 miles of 61 percent of the nation's population and 59 percent of the nation's buying power."

"And, looking specifically at food processing," he continued, "61 percent of the retail food stores in the United States is located within this 500 mile radius of Kentucky."

Knicely said the report, "Kentucky's Food and Kindred Products Industry," like others prepared by the Cabinet's Division of Research and Planning, is primarily a marketing and development tool.

The food and kindred products classification includes food and food preparations, fats and oils, beverages and prepared animal feeds. Some 20,900 jobs, or 8.5 percent of the state's industrial employment, is provided by the 327 plants.

Within the state's food industry, the production of beverages—distilled spirits and soft drinks—accounts for nearly 40 percent of the industry's total employment. Meat products, in terms of employment, rank second in size with some 62 plants being engaged in slaughtering or preparing meat products in 1983. Dairy and bakery products are the other two most significant products in terms of plants or employees. Last year, Kentucky had 46 plants producing dairy products and 25 plants producing bakery goods.

Although an African hippopotamus is attractive to poachers for its ton of meat, and the ivory in its teeth, the ultimate threat facing hippos is the competition for living space with people. Africa's present human population of 460 million people is projected to reach 2.2 billion before it stops growing.

Ky. Crop Prospects Appear Encouraging

Thanks to recent rains over much of Kentucky, crop prospects generally look good at this time, according to state Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

"We'll need to get more rain if crops are to reach their full potential, but as of now, things look much better than they have in weeks," Boswell said.

Currently, 79 percent of the state is reporting adequate rainfall, with only 17 percent reporting soil moisture short.

The areas short of rainfall are the northern Bluegrass and northern Kentucky.

Burley prospects are rated as average or better. Only a few areas are reporting below-average yield prospects. Most of the double-crop soybeans have sufficient soil moisture for germination.

"All of the crops would benefit from a good rainfall, but only corn is in a really critical stage of development right now," Boswell said.

The wheat harvest is nearing completion in the Commonwealth. Farmers have been very pleased with their yields, especially with some of the new varieties, according to Boswell.

Boswell also pointed out that pastures are in fairly good shape at the present time, but could use additional rainfall to help them recover from earlier dry spells.

"Overall, farmers in the Commonwealth have been very lucky. They have received just enough rainfall to keep our crop potential high," Boswell said. "Now we'll just look forward to more rain to maximize that potential."

Just when you've started to fill your plate, freezer and kitchen with beans, corn, squash, tomatoes and other unequaled, fresh-from-the-garden veggies, along comes someone telling you it's time to replant? Lock her up and hide her hoe and seeds.

Seriously, in mid-summer we're in a transition period with regard to our vegetable gardens. Late June through mid-July is the time to make final succession plantings of summer vegetables such as beans, corn and summer squash (check the University of Kentucky's "Home Vegetable Gardening in Kentucky" booklet for recommended dates across the state).

Early July into mid-August is the time to start planting fall vegetables, be it broccoli and cabbage from transplants or carrots and lettuce from seed.

First, remove plants that have stopped producing. Spring broccoli and cabbage plants can be pulled. Lettuce and spinach from the spring garden will have gone to seed and should be composted. Some onions will be ready to harvest. And as early-seeded beans stop flowering, replace them.

That still may not free up much space, so do some "creative" spacing. Try intercropping—plant cabbage and broccoli between tomatoes and peppers. The tomatoes and peppers will shade the cabbage and broccoli and they'll grow better if they're kept cooler. Then as the tomato and pepper plants finish producing, they can be pulled to provide more space for the cabbage and broccoli.

If you want to try a fall crop of peas, why not let them twine up your corn plants. A row of lettuce or spinach can be planted on the east side of a row of beans so that the beans can shade the greens from the hot, western afternoon sun.

Don't forget to rotate your fall crops. Don't put fall broccoli back in where spring broccoli was; you'll invite more pest problems that way. And as you compost summer debris, don't compost plants with disease or insect problems or these pests may migrate over to your fall crops. Practice garden sanitation. Throw away infested and infected plants.

Try a fall "salad bowl" planting. Mix seeds of green-and red-leafed lettuce, spinach, carrots, radishes and beets together. Scatter the mixed seeds over a wide row (one to two feet wide). As the quicker lettuce and radishes grow, pull them to eat and you'll be giving the slower spinach, carrots and beets adequate spacing. And you'll have your own salad bar all in one row!

Timely Tip: From a "Dear Heloise" column my mother sent me—a woman suggested that if a shrub died and you couldn't replace it right away, you should spray it with green paint, matching the color of neighboring shrubs as closely as possible. That's my nomination for "please don't" item of the year!

Put your mind at ease, automatically.

As the shadows deepen at the end of the day, those dark places in your yard seem to creep closer and closer to the house. Pretty soon you can't see anything at all.

Unless you have an outside Security Light from your electric company.

You can light those dark places and see up to 200 feet away with a Security Light. It illuminates an area of about 11,000 square feet, almost a quarter of an acre, putting the darkness back where it belongs.

The Security Light automatically switches itself on at dusk, giving you protection all night long until dawn when it turns itself off. All the electricity necessary for operation and any maintenance, including replacing burned out bulbs, is covered in just one low monthly charge.

Reversing Drug-Abuse Trend

By GEORGE R. ROSS, Ph.D.

In the past four years I have treated over 1,000 teenagers harmfully involved with drugs. Twenty percent of these adolescents ended up in jails, mental institutions or graveyards despite countless hours of counseling. The loss of life, the destruction of families, the cost to the community, and the heavy price we as a country are paying for this massive drug experiment is too high. Marijuana alone is now the third largest industry in America. Illicit drugs grossed over $100 billion last year. We are now approaching a third generation of children harmfully involved with drugs. Whether the trend is reversible or not will depend on the attitudes, interest and willingness of people to become involved.

There are a number of concrete activities that you can undertake to help reverse this tide that threatens our most precious resource—our own children and grandchildren:

1. Learn and understand the basic biological and medical facts on the dangers of marijuana and other drugs. Many excellent books on the subject are available.
2. Join or help establish a parents' group. Determine what the group is doing in your area and how you can assist. Share experiences with other parents, learn about drugs and set up codes of conduct for your children.
3. Learn the signs and symptoms of a drug user and be absolutely sure your children are not using drugs. Know where your adolescents are, who they are with and what they are doing.
4. Urge your school administration to make every effort to provide a drug-free environment at school.
5. Urge your local public library,
